TENN. DEMOCRATS INDORSE HOOPER

DEMOCRATIC STATE EXECUTIVE COMMITTEE OF TENNESSEE CALLS CONVENTION.

DECRY ACTION OF PRESIDENT

Democratic Administration Indorsed, But Claim Wilson Fails to Understand Tennessee Conditions.

Nashville.—Declining to listen to the suggestion of President Woodrow Wilson for harmony in the democratic party in Tennessee and indorsing the administration of Gov. Ben W. Hooper, republican, the independent democratic state executive committee adjourned after calling two state conventions, both to meet on April 22.

The first convention is to meet at noon April 22 to nominate a candidate for judge of the supreme court. The second will meet at 3 p. m. the same day to "take such action as they may deem advisable in regard to nominating candidates for governor and railroad commissioner." It was stated by speakers that the idea in holding two conventions was to have the nomination for supreme court judge made apart from a "turbulent political convention."

Resolutions were adopted indorsing the administration of President Wilson.

In touching on the harmony suggestions of President Wilson the majority of the speakers characterized the action of the President as "ill-advised," and declared that he did not know the conditions existing in Tennessee.

MORE TROUBLE ON BORDER.

Mexican Bandits Kill Postmaster and Burn Building.

San Diego, Cal.—"Although no proclamation was issued, martial law existed in effect along the border for miles each side of Tecate, Cal., following the destruction by fire of the general store containing the United States postoffice and customs office, and the murder of Postmaster Frank Johnson by three men declared to be Mexicans.

The border is being patrolled by American troops from Fort Rosecrans. Across the line noe many hundred feet Mexican rurales are performing guard duty. Every man within a radius of 10 miles of Tecate is fully armed and rifles and ammunition have been ordered from this city.

Gov. Hiram W. Johnson was asked to make formal demand on Gov. Francesco Vasques of lower California for the delivery of the Mexicans suspected having killed Johnson.

Maj. W. C Davis, commander at Fort Rosecrans, received instruccrans from Washington to lend any assistance to the immigration and customs officials and keep the department informed of conditions. He already had taken initiative to the full scope of his authority.

Mexican feeling is aroused to fever heat in the vicinity of Tevate.

MANY WEALTHY MEN DIED IN 1913

Record Is Unequalled in Country's History.

New York.—With the death last week of Geo. W. Vanderbilt, Geo. Westinghouse and John C. Cadwalader, officials in the state comptroller's office in Albany, began a tabulation of the wealth left by the large number of prominent new York men who have died since January 1, 1913.

The state comptroller reports that for the year ending last September 30 the total amount of revenue collected by the state from the inheritance tax amounted to $12,724,236.86.

The amount to be collected from estates not yet appraised is believed to be much larger.

Never before in the history of this country, it is stated, have so many men of wealth and power died in a period so short. Included in the tabulated list are such names as J. Pierpont Morgan, Anthony N. Brady, Benjamin Altman, Charles E. Appleby, George A. Hearn, Henry M. Flagler and Isaac V. Brokaw.

Approves Proposed Anti-Trust Bills.

Washington.—President Wilson, at a conference with the House judiciary subcommittee on trusts, put the stamp of administration approval on the substance of the four bills to amend the anti-trust laws which the committee submitted in final form.

FAIL TO AGREE ON CAUSE.

Investigators of Monroe Wreck Hand Down Divided Decision.

Philadelphia.—Two United States inspectors who investigated the disaster off the Virginia coast on Jan. 30, in which the steamship Nantucket rammed the steamer Monroe, causing the loss of 41 lives, rendered a divided opinion. One held the captain of the Nantucket was guilty of negligence and the other charged the commander of the Monroe with responsibility for the disaster.

TRADE CONTINUES ON THE QUIET SIDE

Weather Conditions Are Responsible. Summary of Week.

New York.—Bradstreet review of trade says:

"Trade is still on the quiet side. For this the winter's varying weather conditions, conservatism born of recent years hand-to-mouth buying, the late Easter season and uncertainty as to future business legislation, are all held varyingly responsible. The predominant feeling is that the opening of spring will act as a stimulus to trade and industry.

"Weather conditions or the effects of recent meterological events still bulk large in the undeniably slow opening up of business.

"There is perceptible gain in a variety of lines of industry, which is taking up some surplus of labor. It is likewise becoming evident that some of the talk of unemployment outside of seasonal lines was exaggerated.

"For the week: Bank clearings, $3,241,218,000, a decrease of 1.4 per cent from last year; failures, 275, against 239 last year; wheat exports, 3,764,208 bushels, against 2,731,547 last year."

New York.—Dun's review of trade says:

"Considerable irregularity still characterizes the business situation and statistics of trade movements are conflicting. As measured by bank clearings, the volume of transactions continues smaller than a year ago, there being a loss this week of 1.9 per cent, while gross earnings of railroads reporting for February were 7.8 per cent smaller than in the corresponding period of 1913. On the other hand, a further substantial reduction occurred in the number of idle freight cars, the gain in the unfilled tonnage of the principal iron and steel interest last month surpassed expectations and there was a decrease in surplus stocks of copper. Current reports from leading centers, however, are lacking in uniformity, and indicate that the effects of the recent storms have not entirely disappeared.

"Failures this week are 341, against 309 the corresponding week last year. Failures in Canada number 32, against 35 last year."

EVERY RAIL IS INSPECTED

Southern Railway Has Inaugurated Rigid System for Prevention of Accidents.

Atlanta, Ga.—Details of the methods by which every rail in the Southern Railway's 7,036 miles of track is annually subjected to the closest inspection are given in the March issue of the Southern News Bulletin in an article telling of the steps which the Southern has taken to prevent derailments resulting from broken rails.

The system of inspection which was adopted over two years ago is believed the most rigid and effective possible. The work is under the direction of the district engineers and division roadmasters and is done by the track supervisors and section foremen who closely scrutinize each and every rail while on their hands and knees and with eyes close enough to the rail to detect the slightest discoverable tendency toward weakness or failure and wherever such are found the rail is immediately removed. Detailed reports are made on each rail left in the track so that comparison can be made at the next year's inspection.

The management of the Southern Railway feels that this rigid inspection of every rail over which its traffic moves embodies every possible step toward the prevention of rail failures, a feature of railway operation to which the officials of leading American railways have been giving the closest study during the past few years.

EX-GOV. B. B. COMER

HIS LATEST MESSAGE TO VOTERS

Henderson and O'Neal Sell Alabama to the Railroads.

USE PEOPLE'S MONEY BY THE MILLION

Henderson, Lewis, Sheehan—Shameless Confession of an Editor.

"Let Us Take a Broom and Sweep O'Neal Gang From the Capitol"

Governor Comer's appeal to the people to help him sweep out the gang that now infests the Capitol of Alabama, made weeks ago, is emphasized over and over as the election day approaches.

In these closing days one false charge may be expected to tread upon another's heels, so fast they follow. Everybody remembers the game played by the railroads in a previous election—MAKE A FALSE AFFIDAVIT on Comer in the closing days—too late to correct it. LOOK OUT FOR THEM NOW!

The chief journalistic fugleman of the Capitol gang and the allied interests at Montgomery, is one Will T. Sheehan.

He is the man hired by ex-near Senator Glass to edit his Montgomery Advertiser. It remained for Sheehan to fling into this campaign the meanest libel of the campaign.

Sheehan charges that Comer has been negotiating with Charlie Lewis for the liquor vote.

A statement evolved out of a wicked mind—not a faint shadow or circumstance of truth to start from!

HERE IS THE TRUTH.

Sheehan and Sam P. Kennedy went to Nashville, and there met Charlie Lewis on January 16. It is natural for a liquor editor to go and meet a liquor boss. But Kennedy is Charles Henderson's campaign manager. He is clerk to the Railroad Commission also. What was Henderson's campaign manager, what was Kennedy, the State official, doing in Nashville, secretly meeting the financial agent of the liquor vote? Sheehan says he went to protest against Lewis turning the liquor vote over to Comer. Henderson's campaign manager must have been there to conspire with Lewis for holding the liquor vote for Henderson.

Lewis is the dispenser of political money for the liquor interests. His methods are well known. He never issues checks. He disburses the actual cash, just before election, through trusted agents. Was it the cash that Sheehan and Henderson's manager were after in their secret conference with Lewis?

In telling his fearful falsehood on Comer, the small editor of a great paper, read between the lines, admits much. When he protested against Lewis delivering the vote of the liquor-Capitol gang to Comer, he admitted that Lewis was the man who could do it; that he has been delivering that vote; that Sheehan and all the balance take their orders and do his work. For Lewis to regulate that vote is the natural, usual, proper course. But to deliver it to Comer is too much. Sheehan will rebel. He will kick the fat in the fire before he will do it.

A SERIOUS MATTER.

It is a serious and solemn thing for the people of Alabama to think about—that the editor of a leading newspaper should declare over his own name what Sheehan admits on unblushingly to his card, that Lewis does dispose of a large vote in Alabama, and that this newspaper is one of his dependents, with no right left except the poor one of protest.

HENDERSON AND LEWIS.

Henderson's chairman manager in consultation with Lewis in the solemn watches of the night—far from home—in another State, secretly and hoping to keep it secret. What does it all mean?

Henderson hopes to be Governor through the liquor vote and money delivered by Charles Lewis, and through the railroad vote delivered by Sid Bowie and George Jones, and such honest men as these can deceive.

SELLING OUT A STATE.

But, after all, men lying, consorting with liquor bosses and making arrangements for corruption money are small matters compared to the offense committed by Mr. Henderson and Governor O'Neal in the recent compromise made by them with the recalcitrant and rebellious railroads.

In that compromise they surrendered the State and the people to the railroads and got no consideration in return.

The people had been saving up rebate coupons and excess freight receipts, estimated all the way from $1,500,000 to $3,000,000. Nobody puts it lower than the first figure. These were the property of the people, waiting for collection on a decision of the United States Supreme Court, foreshadowed for the people by decisions in similar cases in Missouri, Arkansas and Minnesota. The eminent attorneys for the State who had fought the cases for seven years, were confident of victory and were on the eve of establishing for all time the power of the State to regulate the charges of its public service corporations.

WITH THE DASH OF A PEN.

Without notice to the people, without consulting the State's attorneys, without even consulting one of the associate Railroad Commissioners, without a single stipulation of value to the people, Charles Henderson, president of the Commission, and Emmett O'Neal, Governor of Alabama, scratched out millions of the people's valuable securities. Why did they do it?

"TO BEAT OLD COMER."

Because they thought they could turn it into a political advantage for Charles Henderson in his race for Governor. For a fancied political advantage they surrendered all. the State had gained; they gave back a perpetual power over rates to Inferior Federal Judge Jones; they sold out coupon and excess freight receipt holders bag and baggage, and made Alabama a laughing stock in every railroad office in this country.

Here is what Governor Comer and other authorities say about it:—

COMER ON THE SURRENDER.

In a speech at Lapine Governor Comer said:

"You take this railroad settlement. They say it was a compromise. A compromise is where one gives and takes. where one accepts and grants concessions. In this agreement the railroads got everything and the people nothing. It was an absolute surrender of the rights of the people.

"They say you got a two and one-half cent passenger rate, but you did not. You had a two and one-half cent rate and three Federal judges had declared that the rate could not be made higher. Had the case been carried to the Supreme Court everybody knows it would have been affirmed.

SURRENDERED EVERYTHING.

"They say the State withdrew the cases following an agreement. It did not; it surrendered everything it ever won when the names of the officials were affixed to that agreement. If an army had surrendered in the way the State surrendered it would have been tried for it, and if there is any way this gang can be put in jail for the surrender it ought to be done."

Mention of the name of O'Neal, followed by that of Henderson, brought half-uttered hisses from the audience.

EX-ATTORNEY GENERAL GARBER.

Col. Alex M. Garber, who is Comer's campaign manager, says:

"The thought has found lodgment in the minds of many people that the negotiations leading up to the compromise finally effected have a political significance, aimed at the defeat of B. B. Comer and the elevation of Charles Henderson, president of the commission. It does seem strange that Colonel Stone, Major Steiner, other railroad attorneys and officials, met the present Governor, the Attorney General and Mr. Henderson unexpectedly in Montgomery. If not, and an appointment was made by these gentlemen, why were not Judge Weakley and Mr. Selheimer, the special counsel for the State, who had devoted practically their entire time to the rate case for about seven years, invited to the conference? They were absent during the entire negotiations—in fact were entirely ignored. Was this due to the fear that these gentlemen, with their thorough knowledge of the rate cases, would not have given their approval to the agreements reached, or was it due to the fact that they were said to be good friends of B. B Comer?"

JUDGE WEAKLEY NOT CONSULTED.

"I do not want to criticize the compromise. I don't want to criticise the Governor of Alabama. But on the other hand, I do not want to be charged or credited with the compromise that has been effected. I don't want any blame or praise. I have fought the cases for seven years. I want to say that I did not recommend this compromise and had nothing in the world to do with it. It is the work of Charles Henderson, of the commission, and the Governor of Alabama. I was not consulted concerning any detail of the proposition and am in nowise responsible for the outcome."

WHAT JUDGE SELHEIMER SAYS.

Mr. Selheimer, co-counsel with Judge Weakley in the rate cases, said that the people of the State would be the loser of "some millions." He said the rebate certificates would not be paid, as the decision of Judge Jones effectively cancels the rebates which were to have been returned those who paid the 3-cent fare.

"I was not consulted concerning the compromise. I had nothing to do with it. I am informed that the matter was handled by the Governor and Charles Henderson. As far as Judge Weakley and myself are concerned we were not even faintly apprised of the probable outcome of the case. I was very much surprised when informed that the affair had been settled as it was. I did not recommend it and would not have recommended the compromise effected."

MURRAY BROWN.

Murray Brown, member of a great Birmingham wholesale house, Goodall, Brown Dry Goods Co., voiced the sentiments of the business man:

"In my opinion the State is handing to the Louisville and Nashville something over $1,000,000 on a silver platter. In other words, the people of Alabama love the Louisville and Nashville so well that they want to present this road with a few million dollars. Other railroads in the State have not only been able to operate under the 2 1-2-cent rate, but have shown a profit. I think this is amply attested to by virtue of the fact that the Southern Railway's president a few days ago in Birmingham outlined plans for an expenditure of $1,500,000 in improvements in this district.

"Of course, the $1,500,000 which the Louisville and Nashville will be saved, will not come from the coffers of the State, but will be paid by the traveling men, wholesale men and jobbers of the State.

"In my opinion, if B. B. Comer had been in the Governor's chair the compromise would never have been effected. It is apparently an attempt to weaken his candidacy."

IN A BLAZE OF INFAMY.

The melancholy ending of the O'Neal administration is a solemn and portentous warning to the people not to elect another Governor to serve the allied interests. Mr. O'Neal was elected as the instrument and agent of these allied interests. He has served them well, and behold! the clouds of scandals and infamies amid which his star hastes now to its setting. For the Lacy theft is less a crime than the sale of the people to the railroads. The scandalous bargaining with Lacy is less a scandal and reproach than the bargaining of Henderson for a surrender of the State and people in exchange for the support of Milton H. Smith and the Louisville and Nashville Railroad and its attorneys. Shamelessness has no limit when a man gets his consent to serve the interests rather than the people.

So Mr. Henderson strikes his Gubernatorial bargain with the railroads at Montgomery and sends his campaign manager to Nashville to make such terms as Charlie Lewis chose to demand as the price of his support.

COMER'S ANSWER TO SHEEHAN.

"In full answer to Mr. Sheehan's card, I have never seen Charles Lewis or communicated with him either directly or through his agents. I have never offered in any way, shape or form to pay any interest any consideration in exchange for influence or votes. The charges of Mr. Sheehan against me are unqualifiedly false."

The VALIANTS of VIRGINIA

By HALLIE ERMINIE RIVES

ILLUSTRATIONS by LAUREN STOUT

COPYRIGHT BY BOBBS-MERRILL COMPANY

SYNOPSIS.

John Valiant, a rich society favorite, suddenly discovers that the Valiant corporation, which his father founded and which was the principal source of his wealth, has failed. He voluntarily turns over his private fortune to the receiver for the corporation. His entire remaining possessions consist of an old motor car, a white bull dog and Damory court, a neglected estate in Virginia. On the way to Damory court he meets Shirley Dandridge, an auburn-haired beauty, and decides that he is going to like Virginia immensely. Shirley's mother, Mrs. Dandridge, and Major Bristow exchange reminiscences during which it is revealed that the major, Valiant's father, and a man named Sassoon were rivals for the hand of Mrs. Dandridge in her youth. Sassoon and Valiant fought a duel on her account in which the former was killed. Valiant finds Damory court overgrown with weeds and creepers and the buildings in a very much neglected condition. Valiant explores his ancestral home. He is surprised by a fox hunting party which invades his estate. He recognizes Shirley at the head of the party. He gives sanctuary to the cornered fox. Gossips discuss the advent of the new owner and recall the tragedy in which the elder Valiant took part.

Till the sun was high John Valiant lay on his back in the fragrant grass, meditatively watching a bucaneering chicken-hawk draw widening circles against the blue and listening to the vibrant tattoo of a "pecker-wood" on a far-away tree, and the timorous wet whistle of a bob-white. The whole place was very quiet now. For just one thrilling moment it had burgeoned into sound and movement: when the sweaty horses had stood snorting and stamping in the yard with the hounds scampering between their legs and the riding-coats winking like rubies in the early sunshine!

Had she recognized him as the smudged tinkerer of the stalled car? "She saw me drop that wretched brute through the window," he chuckled. "I could take oath to that. But she didn't give me away, true little sport that she was. And she won't. I can't think of any reason, but I know. Was she angry? I wonder!"

At length he rose and went back to the house. With a bunch of keys he had found he went to the stables, after some difficulty gained access, and propped the crazy doors and windows open to the sun. The building was airy and well-lighted and contained a dozen roomy box-stalls, a spacious loft and a carriage-house. The straw bedding had been unremoved, mice-gnawed sacking and rotted hay lay in the mangers, and the warped harness, hanging on its pegs, was a smelly mass of mildew and decay. He found a stick, mowed away the festooning cobwebs, and moved the debris piece-meal.

"There!" he said with satisfaction. "There's a place for the motor—if Uncle Jefferson ever gets it here."

It was noon when he returned, after a wash-up in the lake, to the meal with which Aunt Daphne, in a costume dimly suggestive of a bran-meal poultice with a gingham apron on, regaled him. Fried chicken, corn-bread so soft and fluffy that it had to be lifted from the pan with a spoon, browned potatoes, and to his surprise, fresh milk. "Ah done druv ouah ol' cow ovah, suh," explained Aunt Daphne. "'Case she gotter be milked, er she run dry ez de Red Sea fo' de chillun ob Izril."

"Aunt Daphne," inquired Valiant with his mouth full, "what do you call this green thing?"

"I have. I never guessed it before, and it's a magnificent discovery. However, it suggests unwelcome reflections. Aunt Daphne, how long do you estimate a man can dine like this on—well, say on a hundred dollars?"

"Er hun'ed dollahs, suh? Dat's er right smart heap o' money, deed et is! Well suh, 'pen's on whut yo' raises. Ef yo' raises yo' own gyarden-sass en chick'ns en aigs, Ah reck'n yo' kin live longah dan dat ar Methoosalum, en still haf mos' of it in de ol' stockin'."

"Ah! I can grow all those things myself, you think?"

"Yo' cert'n'y kin," said Aunt Daphne. "Ev'ybody do. De chick'ns done peck to' deyselves en de yuddah things—yo' o'ny gotter 'courage 'em an dey 'ees' growa."

Valiant ate his dessert with a thoughtful smile wrinkling his brow. As he pushed back his chair he smote his hands together and laughed aloud. "Back to the soil!" he said. "John Valiant, farmer! The miracle of it is that it sounds good to me. I want to raise my own grub and till my own soil. I want to be my own man! And I'm beginning to see my way. Crops will have to wait for another season, but there's water and pasture for cattle now. There's timber—lots of it—on that hillside, too. I must look into that."

He filled his pipe and climbed the staircase to the upper floor. There were many bedrooms with great four-posted, canopied beds and old-fashioned carved furniture of mahogany and curly-maple, and in one he found a great cedar-lined chest filled with bed-linen and napery. In these rooms were more evidences of decay. The bedroom he mentally chose for his own was the plainest of all, and was above the library, fronting the vagabond garden. It had a great black desk with many glass-knobbed drawers and a book-rack.

He lingered longest in a room whose door was painted The Hilarium. It had evidently been a nursery and schoolroom. Here on the walls were many shelves wound over with networks of cobwebs, and piled with the oddest assemblage of toys. There were school-books, too, thumbed and dog-eared, from First Reader to Caesar's Gallic Wars, with names of small Valiants scrawled on their fly-leaves. He carefully relocked the door of this room; he wanted to dust those toys and books with his own hands.

In the upper hall again he leaned from the window, sniffing the far-flung scent of orchards and peach-blown fence-rows. The soft whirring sound of a bird's wing went past, almost brushing his startled face, and the old oaks seemed to stretch their bent limbs with a faithful brute-like yawn of pleasure. In the room below he could hear the vigorous sound of Aunt Daphne's hard-driven broom and the sound flooded the echoing space with a comfortable commotion.

He went to his trunk and fished out a soft shirt on which he knotted a loose tie, exchanged his Panama for a slouch hat, and whistling the barcarole from Tales of Hoffmann, went gaily out. "I feel tremendously alive today," he confided to the dog, as he tramped through the lush grass. "If you see me ladle the muck out of that fountain with my own fair hands, don't have a fit. I'm liable to do anything."

His eye swept up and down the slope. "There probably isn't a finer site for a house in the whole South," he told himself. "The living-rooms front south and west. We'll get scrumptious sunsets from that back porch. And on the other side there's the view clear to the Blue Ridge."

He skirted the lake. "Only to grub out some of the lilies—there's too many of them—and straighten the rim—and weed the pebble margin to give those green rocks a show. I'll build a little wharf below them to dive from, and—yes, I'll stock it with spotted trout."

He was but a few hundred yards from the house, yet the silence was so deep that there might have been no habitation within fifty miles. All at once he stopped short; there was a sudden movement in the thicket beyond—the sound of light fast footfalls, as of some one running away.

He made a lunge for the dog, but with a growl Chum tore himself from the restraining grasp and dashed into the bushes. "A child, no doubt," he thought as he plunged in pursuit, "and that lubberly brute will scare it half to death!"

He pulled up with an exclamation. In a narrow wood-path a little way from him, partly hidden by a windfall, stood a girl, her skirt transfixed with a wickedly jagged sapling. He saw instantly how it had happened; the windfall had blocked the way, and she had sprung clear over it, not noting the screened spear, which now held her as effectually as any railroad spike.

In another moment Valiant had reached her and met her face, flushed, half defiant, her eyes a blue gleam of smoldering anger as she desperately, almost savagely, thrust wild tendrils of flame-colored hair beneath the broad curved brim of her straw hat. At her feet lay a great armful of cape jessamines.

A little thrill, light and warm and joyous, ran through him. Until that instant he had not recognized her.

CHAPTER XIII.

John Valiant Makes a Discovery.

"I'm so sorry," was what he said, as he kneeled to release her, and she was grateful that his tone was unmixed with amusement. She bit her lips, as by sheer strength of elbow and knee he snapped the offending bole short off—one of those quick exhibitions of reserved strength that every woman likes.

"I don't know how I could have been so silly—thank you so much," said Shirley, panting slightly from her exertions. "I'm not the least bit hurt—only my dress—and you know very well that I wasn't afraid of that ridiculous dog." A richer glow stole to her cheeks as she spoke, a trembling recollection of a rose, which from her horse that morning at Damory Court, she had glimpsed in its glass on the porch.

Both laughed a little. He imagined that he could smell that wonderful hair, a subtle fragrance like that of sun-dried seaweed or the elusive scent that clings to a tuft of long-plucked Spanish moss. "Chum stands absolved, then," he said, bending to sweep together the scattered jessamine. "Do you—do you run like that when you're not frightened?"

"When I'm caught red-handed. Don't you?"

He looked puzzled.

She pointed to the flowers. "I had stolen them, and I was trying to 'scape off wid 'em' as the negroes say. Shocking, isn't it? But you see, nobody has lived here since long before I was born, and I suppose the flower-thieving habit has become ingrown."

"But," he interrupted, "there's acres of them going to waste. Why on earth shouldn't you have them?"

"Of course I know better today, but there was a—a special reason. We have none and this is the nearest place where they grow. My mother wanted some for this particular day."

"Good heavens!" he cried. "You don't think you can't go right on taking them? Why, you can 'scape off with the whole garden any time!"

A droll little gleam of azure mischief darted at him suddenly out of her eyes and then dodged back again. "Aren't you just a little rash with other people's property?"

"Other people's?"

"What will the owner say?"

He bent back one of the long jessamine stems and wound it around the others. "I can answer for him. Besides, I owe you something, you know. I robbed you this morning—of your brush."

She looked at him, abruptly serious. "Why did you do that?"

"Sanctuary. His two beady eyes begged so hard for it. 'Twenty ravenous hounds,' they said, 'and a dozen galloping horses. And look what a poor shivering little red-brown morsel I am!'"

For just an instant the bronze-gold head gave a quick imperious toss, like a high-mettled pony under the flick of the whip. But as suddenly the shadow of resentment passed; the mobile face under the bent hat-brim turned thoughtful. She looked again at him. "Do you think it's wrong to kill things?" she asked gravely.

"Oh, dear, no," he smiled. "I haven't a single ism. I'm not even a vegetarian."

"But you would be if you had to kill your own meat?"

"Perhaps. So many of us would. As a matter of fact, I don't hunt myself, but I'm no reformer."

"Why don't you hunt?"

"I don't enjoy it." He flushed slightly. "I hate firearms," he said, a trifle difficultly. "I always have. I don't know why. Idiosyncrasy, I suppose. But I shouldn't care for hunting, even with bows and arrows. I would kill a tiger or a poisonous reptile, or anything else, in case of necessity. But even then I should hardly enjoy it. I know some animals are pests and have to be killed. Some men do, too. But I don't like to do it myself."

"Wouldn't that theory lead to a wholesale evasion of responsibility?"

"Perhaps. I'm no philosopher. But a blackbird or a red fox is so pretty, even when he is thieving, that I'd let him have the corn. I'm like the Lord High Executioner in 'The Mikado' who was so tender-hearted that he couldn't execute anybody and planned to begin with guinea-pigs and work up. Only I'm afraid I couldn't even manage the guinea-pigs."

She laughed. "You wouldn't find many to practice on here. Do you raise guinea-pigs up North?"

"Ah," he said ruefully, "you tag me, too. Have I by chance a large letter N tattooed upon my manly brow? But I suppose it's the accent. Uncle Jefferson catalogued me in five minutes. He said he didn't know why I was from 'de Nort,' but he 'knowed' it. I've annoyed him and his wife, by the way."

"You're lucky to have them. Uncle Jefferson and Aunt Daph might have slipped out of a plantation of the last century. They're absolutely absolute. Most of the negroes are more or less spoiled, as you'll find, I'm afraid." She turned the conversation bluntly. "Had you seen Damory Court before?"

"No, never."

"Do you like the general plan of the place?"

"Do I like it?" cried John Valiant. "Do I like it!"

A quick pleasure glanced across her face. "It's nice of you to say it that way. We ask that question so often it's become mechanical. You see, it's our great show-place."

At that moment a patter of footsteps and shrill shrieks came flying over the last-year's leaves beyond the lilac bushes. It's Rickey Snyder," she said, peering out smilingly as two children, pursued and pursuer, burst into view. "Hush!" she whispered; "I wonder what they are up to."

The pair came in a whirl through the bushes. The foremost was a seven-year-old negro girl, in a single short cottonade garment, wizened, barelegged and bareheaded, her black wool parted in little angular patches and tightly wrapped with bits of cord. The other was white and as freckled as a turkey's egg, with hair cropped like a boy's. She held a carving-knife cut from a shingle, whose edge had been deeply ensanguined by pokeberry juice. The pursued one stumbled over a root and came to earth in a heap, while the other pounced upon her like a wildcat.

"Hold still, you limb of Satan," she scolded. "How can I do it when you won't stay still?"

"Oh, lawd," moaned the prostrate one, in simulated terror; "oh, Doctah, good Doctah Snydah, has Ah gotter hab dat operation? Is yo' sho' gwineter twitter aroun' mah insides wid dem knives en saws en things?"

"It won't hurt," reassured the would-be operator; "no more than it did Mis' Poly Gifford. And I'll put your liver right back again."

"Wait er minute. Ah jes' remembahs Ah fo'got ter make mah will. Ah leabs—"

"Nonsense!" objected the other irritably. You made it yesterday. They always do it beforehand."

"No, suh; Ah done clean fergot et. Ah leabs mah thimble ter de Mefodis' church, en mah black en w'ite kitten ter Rickey Snyder, en—"

A twig snapped under Valiant's foot. Both scrambled to their feet, the black girl to look at them with a wide self-conscious grin. Rickey, tossing her short hair back from her freckled face, came toward them.

"My goodness, Miss Shirley," she said, "we didn't see you at all." She looked at Valiant. "Are you the man that's going to fix up Damory Court?" she inquired, without any tedious formalities.

"Yes," said Valiant.

"Well," she said critically, "you've got your job cut out for you. But I should say you're the kind to do it."

"Rickey!" Shirley's voice tried to be stern, but there was a hint of laughter in it.

"What did I say now?" inquired Rickey. "I'm sure I meant it to be complimentary."

"It was," said Valiant. "I shall try to deserve your good opinion."

"But what a ghastly play!" exclaimed Shirley, "Where did you learn it?"

"We were playing Mis' Poly Gifford in the hospital," Rickey answered. "She's got a whole lot of little pebbles what they cut out—"

"Oh, Rickey!" expostulated Shirley with a shudder.

"They did. She keeps them in a little pasteboard box like wedding-cake, with a blue ribbon around it. She was showing it to Miss Mattie Sue yesterday. She was telling her all about it. She said all the women there showed each other their cuts and bragged about how long they were."

"You certainly have a highly developed taste for the dramatic," said Shirley. "I wonder what your next effort will be."

"It's tomorrow," Rickey informed her. "We're going to have the duel between Valiant and Sassoon."

The smile was stricken from John Valiant's face. A duel—the duel—between Valiant and Sassoon! He felt his blood beat quickly. Had there been such a thing in his father's life? Was that what had blighted it?

"Only not here where it really happened, but in the Meredith orchard. Greenie's going to be—"

"Ah ain'!" contradicted Greenie. "Ah ain' gwineter be dat Valiant, nohow!"

"You are, too!" insisted Rickey, wrathfully. "You needn't be so pickety and choosety—and after she kills Sassoon, we put the bloodhounds on her trail."

Greenie tittered. "Dey ain' no dawg aroun' heah'd tech me," she said, "en 'sides—"

"But, Rickey," Shirley interposed, "that wasn't a murder. That was a duel between gentlemen. They don't—"

"I know it," assented Rickey cheerfully. "But it makes it more exciting. Will you come, Miss Shirley, deed and double? I won't charge you any admission."

"I can't promise," said Shirley. "By the way, isn't it about time Miss Mattie Sue had her tea?"

"It certainly is, Miss Shirley!" said Rickey, with penitent emphasis. "I clean forgot it, and she'll row me up the gump-stump! Come on, Greenie," and she started off through the bushes.

Shirley looked at Valiant with a deepening of her dimple. "Rickey isn't an aristocrat," she said; "she's what we call here poor-white, but she's got a heart of gold. She's an orphan, and the neighborhood in general, and Miss Mattie Sue Mabry in particular, have adopted her."

He hardly heard her words for the painful wonder that was holding him. His father had taken a man's life. Was it this thought—whatever the provocation, however justified by the conscious of the time and section—that had driven him to self-exile? He recalled himself with an effort, for she was speaking again.

"You've found Lovers' Leap, no doubt?"

"No. This is the first time I've been so far from the house. Is it near here?"

"I'll show it to you." She held out her hand for the bunch of jessamine and laid it on the broad roots of a tree that were mottled with lichen. "Look there," she said suddenly; "isn't that a beauty?"

She was pointing to a jimson-weed on which had settled, with glassy wings vibrating, a long, ungainly, needlelike insect with an odd sword-like beak. "What is that?" he asked.

"A snake-doctor. If Unc' Jefferson were here he'd, say, 'Bettah watch out! Dah's er snek roun' erbout heah, sho'!' He'll fill you full of darky superstitions."

Suddenly the slim path between the trees took a quick turn, and fell away at their feet. "There," she said. "This is the finest view at Damory Court."

WASTED WEALTH OF COUNTRY

All Kinds of Game Has Been Indiscriminately Slaughtered Throughout Labrador.

The fish, flesh and fowl of Labrador, writes Dr. Grenfell in the Wide World, have been exploited to the last degree, and no scientific or practical effort has been made for their protection or rehabilitation. Our auks, curlew, ducks and many other birds have become either extinct or dangerously depleted. Our deer, owing to forest fires caused by carelessness and unrestricted slaughter by Indians, as well as white settlers, have so far diminished as to bring semi-starvation to doors where once there was always plenty. The destruction of seal herds has brought families once affluent to miserable poverty. For some reason our unrivaled herring and mackerel have left us altogether. The salmon catch is only a shadow of what it once was, and even the returns of our still valuable cod fishery show increasing uncertainty in quantity and distribution. The growing number of trappers, the lack of protection, or the destruction of their food supplies, has made the animal wealth far less significant to maintain its support all who formerly lived, and that in spite of the immense increase in the price of furs. Seals and whales are rapidly approaching a similar fate.

No mines are yet opened; no timber properties yet developed, and no use is made of our unlimited water power. Only a handful of visitors come to enjoy the wild scenery, the unique natural conditions, and the invigorating atmosphere, though our fjords rival those of Norway, and have the additional attraction of being virgin and unexplored. No charting has been done, and at that time, as already stated, there was not one light on the coast from the straits of Belle Isle to Hudson's bay to render navigation safe. It is little to be wondered at if adequate tourist steamers do not ply in our waters. In fact, Labrador is in that melancholy stage of evolution that must inevitably overtake every country until attention is turned to the development of industries that man does not share with the tiger and the shark.

To the Point.

A lawyer residing in Washington and noted for his laconic style of expression, sent the following terse and witty note to a refractory client who would not comply with his reiterated demands for the payment of his bill: "Sir: If you pay the inclosed, you will oblige me. If you do not I shall oblige you."

DIZZY, HEADACHY, SICK, "CASCARETS"

Gently cleanse your liver and sluggish bowels while you sleep.

Get a 10-cent box.

Sick headache, biliousness, dizziness, coated tongue, foul taste and foul breath—always trace them to torpid liver; delayed, fermenting food in the bowels or sour, gassy stomach.

Poisonous matter clogged in the intestines, instead of being cast out of the system is re-absorbed into the blood. When this poison reaches the delicate brain tissue it causes congestion and that dull, throbbing, sick-making headache.

Cascarets immediately cleanse the stomach, remove the sour, undigested food and foul gases, take the excess bile from the liver and carry out all the constipated waste matter and poisons in the bowels.

A Cascaret to-night will surely straighten you out by morning. They work while you sleep—a 10-cent box from your druggist means your head clear, stomach sweet and your liver and bowels regular for months. Adv.

THE BEST TREATMENT FOR ITCHING SCALPS, DANDRUFF AND FALLING HAIR

To allay itching and irritation of the scalp, prevent dry, thin and falling hair, remove crusts, scales and dandruff, and promote the growth and beauty of the hair, the following special treatment is most effective, agreeable and economical. On retiring, comb the hair out straight all around, then begin at the side and make a parting, gently rubbing Cuticura Ointment into the parting with a bit of soft flannel held over the end of the finger. Anoint additional partings about half an inch apart until the whole scalp has been treated, the purpose being to get the Cuticura Ointment on the scalp skin rather than on the hair. It is well to place a light covering over the hair to protect the pillow from possible stain. The next morning, shampoo with Cuticura Soap and hot water. Shampoos alone may be used as often as agreeable, but once or twice a month is generally sufficient for this special treatment for women's hair.

Cuticura Soap and Ointment sold throughout the world. Sample of each free, with 32-p. Skin Book. Address postcard "Cuticura, Dept. L, Boston."—Adv.

CAPTAIN FRANK S. WHITE

CANDIDATE FOR THE UNITED STATES SENATE FOR THE SHORT TERM.

WHAT HE STANDS FOR.

He is against the monopolies which are crushing the poor and middle classes; he is against the stock gambling system which keeps down the farmer; he is for good roads; he is in favor of securing the very largest available appropriations from the United States Government for the purpose of deepening the Harbor at Mobile and for improving the rivers of the State; he agrees with, and proposes to use his utmost efforts to assist President Wilson in carrying out his policies; he is for good citizenship, good government, and LAST but not LEAST, for the masses who need protection, instead of for the classes, who have demonstrated too clearly already that they are able to take care of themselves.

This will probably be your last opportunity of electing a Confederate soldier to the United States Senate. Captain White served his country when a mere youth under the leadership of the undaunted General Bedford Forrest.

This race does not involve the long term contest, but is for the vacancy caused by the death of Senator Johnston.

"High Kicking and Low Thinking."

A woman who is one of the most potent influences for the uplift of the stage in America made the remark that "High kicking and low thinking had brought the stage into disrepute."

This influence permeates much of the business life in our country.

Demagogues, without mental ability to impress, have adopted a pyrotechnic style of appeal. Suspicious by nature, they have by mean insinuation and reckless assertion, tolled many people into the hog-wallow of distrust. They are the type that had rather condemn than praise, that had rather tear down than construct, that had rather find bad than good.

This type of individual, a pessimist by design and nature, is devoid of the milk of human kindness, knows not the impulse to stretch forth a helping hand, is too preoccupied with schemes and fault finding to plan for constructive development and aggressive prosperity.

He is the high kicking, low thinking influence making business development and social advancement more difficult than it should be. He sows the seed of distrust, and plants the germ of greed.

The L. & N. calls attention to these things because this high kicking and low thinking has hampered L. & N. work of constructive development; it has put a handicap on the financial and social welfare of the territory through which the L. & N. operates; it has created distrust where cordial co-operation should exist.

We ask the people to give thoughtful consideration to the utterances of the low thinking, high kicking demagogues; to give careful consideration to the work the L. & N. has done and is doing in the territory through which it operates.

We ask the people to think over the tremendous increase in property values, to consider the created wealth, to observe and experience the unexcelled passenger and freight facilities—all a result of the L. & N.

If the people will only think we are quite sure they will not think of the hog-wallow, but will follow the dictates of their business judgment, and enjoy a healthy development of the rich natural resources of a magnificent section.

The Bankers and Merchants of Mobile Vouch for His High Integrity and Fitness for the Office.

(Two to be Elected)

Subject to action of Democratic Party.

S. P. GAILLARD.

I pledge myself to initiate, when necessary, corrective measures for the relief of any citizen or community against whom discrimination may exist, or where the safety and comfort of the public may require. The law requires this of the Commissioners, and I will comply with the law.

Alabama's only seaport and her second largest and richest city has no representation in any elective department of State government, and has had none for a quarter of a century. Mobile asks Alabamians to now respond to the state-wide desire to help make her the great seaport for Alabama's farms, factories and mines she is destined to be, by giving her representation on that arm of the government most vital to her future.

Can Alabama refuse this one request from her "Gateway to Panama?"

Probate Judge

NEGRO BRUTE LYNCHED BY MOB AND BODY RIDDLED WITH BUCKSHOT

Brutally Assaults Mrs. Andrew Wilson, An Aged Lady, and Pays Extreme Penalty at Hands of Infuriated Citizens.

Crime a Most Heinous One.

Charley Young, a young negro, was lynched about one and-a-half miles from Clanlon last Saturday night and his body riddled with bullets. The crime for which the negro paid the penalty was one of the most brutal and dastardly in the history of criminology in Chilton county. Entering the home of Mr. Wilson, early Saturday morning while Mr. Wilson and his sons were in town shopping, the negro attacked Mrs. Wilson aged sixty years while she was alone at the sewing machine, striking her over the head several times and beating her up in a most horrible manner. Not content with the awful treatment he administered, the culprit grabbed her by the hair of the head, dragged her from room to room. Her face and head were terribly lacerated from the blows and it was first f ared she would lose the sight of one of her eyes. She begged piteously for her life to be spared, and but for the fact the negro could not find a knife he would have murdered her.

Becoming frightened, the negro made his escape to the swamp, warning Mrs. Wilson that if she screamed or made a call for help he would return and kill her.

Although almost dead from her terrible experience Mrs. Wilson managed to get to the home of her son a short distance away. Mr. Wilson was at once phoned to and news of the awful crime spread like wildfire, and soon all Clanton and the entire community was in a state of wildest excitement. Several posses, some in automobiles, buggies, some on horseback and a foot were quickly organized and a thorough search instituted for the fiend. Dogs were put on the trail, but the negro had used turpentine to baffle the dogs and it was impossible to keep the track. The swamp in which the negro made his get-away was scoured throughout the day, and about dark Saturday the capture was effected about nine miles west of Clanton by two citizens who had been notified to be on the lookout for the brute. Soon after being captured a posse arrived on the scene and the negro was brought back and carried to a tree near the scene of the crime and strung to a limb and his body literally filled with bullets and buckshot. The negro when at first captured stoutly denied his guilt, but before being strung up he made a full confession of the crime.

When the capture of the negro was effected, Sheriff Jones, fearing trouble, telephoned the Governor to send troops to Clanton The request was granted and two companies of State militia, Co. A, of the Second Infantry and Co. D, of the Fourth Infantry, under command of Major P. O. Franson, arrived on No. 8, the train being held in Montgomery 45 minutes in order for them to get here. The lynching, however, had took place long before the arrival of the troops and the town had quieted down.

Rumors of all kinds flew thick and fast as to what disposition had been made of the negro when he had been captured; some having it that the negro had been carried to Maplesville, others that he had been brought to jail in Clanton, but, fearing trouble at the hands of the crowd that had gathered, he was whisked out of town to await the arrival of the troops, and still another that the negro had been taken from the Sheriff and his deputies, but in justice to them, however, we will state that they never got possession of the prisoner and did not see him until his limp form was dangling from a limb.

Until a late hour Saturday night large crowds went to the scene of the lynching and continued to go until the body was cut down Sunday morning about 10 o'clock.

Although Mrs. Wilson is still in a very critical condition it is believed she has a good chance to recover.

LOOKS LIKE A WINNER TO LOCAL SCRIBE

Thos. A. Curry, candidate for Lieutenant Governor of Alabama, was here this morning, leaving on an afternoon train for Athens, and will return here this evening. Mr. Curry is a brother of C. J. and W. A. Curry of this city and may be depended on to give a good account of himself if selected for the position to which he aspires. If he measures up to the standard set by his brothers, and he no doubt does, the people of Alabama may with safety elevate him to the place he asks for with the assurance that "blood is thicker than water" and that Alabama's people will be served with faithfulness and ability. Mr. Curry may be confident that he will have a good support in this part of the country. —Decaturs Daily.

EXPRESSIONS FROM THE VOTERS

Verbena, March 20, 1914.
Editor Press:

I'm not a politician, but when a man like Judge E. B. Deason comes to the front to serve the common people in Congress, I believe people should rally to his support. The old Democratic Beat 5, will give him the greatest majority she has ever given any candidate for any office.

N. L. Gardner.

Clanton, March 21, 1914.
Editor Press:

So far as I can learn, there is not a man in Beat 8, beat 1, who will not support Judge Deason for Congress.

A. W. Powell.

Clanton, Route 3, March 21.
Editor Clanton Press:

I wish to report that I have investigated Beat 3, and find the Beat solid for Judge Deason for Congress. He is the man of the plain people, and for the plain people.

D. M. Martin,
Beat Committeeman.

Verbena, March 21.
Editor Press:

You may count on Beat 10, box 2, solid for Judge Deason for Congress with possibly one man excepted—and Underwood is the man of the day.

W. T. Johnson.

Cooper, March 21.
Editor Press:

Permit me to say a few words in regard to the political situation in Beat 10. With the exception of two or three Democrats and a few Bull Moose who won't be permitted to participate in our Primary, everybody is for Deason and Underwood.

S. H. Smith.

Mt. Creek, March 20.
Editor Clanton Press:

Through the columns of your welcomed paper I wish to speak of the political situation around Mt. Creek. Comer is first, with Kolb a close second, while it is generally admitted that Underwood and Deason will carry Beat 5 with little opposition.

Respectfully,
W. W. Cobern.

Clanton, March 25.
Editor Press:

After investigating the political situation in Beat 14, it is my best judgment that this Beat will vote solidly for Judge Deason.

Yours very truly,
W. O. Durbin,
Beat 15, Chilton County.

Verbena, March 20.
Editor Press:

I am credibly informed that reports have been put in circulation throughout the counties of the Fourth Congressional District that Judge Deason will be defeated in all of the counties, including Chilton, in the approaching April primary.

His friends repel these reports as ante-election canards, proceeding from the minds of those in "the wish is further to the thought."

In my opinion he will poll about two-thirds of the votes in this end of Beat 5.

GEORGIA CYCLONE TO BE IN CLANTON

Hon. Wm. D. Upshaw, the Georgia Cyclone and meteoric star in the realms of oratory will deliver one of his famous lectures at the Court House in Clanton, next Saturday night at eight o'clock We doubt if ever Chilton county citizens had such an opportunity of hearing such a lecturer. Mr. Upshaw is editor of the "Golden Age," and doubtless has charmed many of our readers by his writings in that journal. Besides being small and insignificent in appearance, he is a cripple on crutches, yet he has that rare gift which enables him to play on the emotions of the human soul as does the musician on the strings of a piano.

Who's Who And Why

In the Race for Congress From the Fourth District

Blackmon, bofore entering politics was a railroad lawyer, being a member of the law firm of Knox, Dixon, Acker & Blackmon. He was elected to the State Senate, and while there he actively opposed every bill that tended to curb railroads, telegraph companies, etc. He did such good work for these corporations, this political ring promoted him to the National Congress. This "big interest" political "clique" which has been holding the entire State in its grip so long, was so strong in our District that other prospective candidates were afraid to "buck" this political ring, and Mr. Blackmon had no opposition. In 1912 the ring still had its hold on the people, but not so strong, for six hundred voters in Blackmon's home county scratched his name n the primary election because they preferred not to vote rather than vote for Blackmon. Mr. Blackmon's record in Congress shows conclusively that he is a rank ring politician.

When Congress was trying to limit the power of the corporation, building the Coosa River dam so as to make them more considerate of the people whose land they were condemning, Blackmon voted, as usual, in favor of the corporation and against the people.

Blackmon has been taking great credit for helping to get a maneuver camp at Anniston, but we have been told that a board of army officers inspected the ground and reported favorably on it before Blackmon knew what they were about. Republicans have several good jobs in the District for the same reason, "he didn't know."

He voted against the Webb Bill, which, as stated by William Jennings Bryan and all Democratic leaders, was simply a local self-government bill, and, therefore, a strictly Democratic measure. This is proven by the fact that Mr. Underwood, the democratic leader, voted for the bill. This bill prohibits the shipment of liquors from a wet state to a dry state, contrary to the laws of the dry state. Our state allows, and did allow at the time of the passage of this bill, a person to order whiskey for his own personal use; consequently this bill did not forbid the shipment of liquors for private use. In other words this bill simply forbids one state to violate the law of another state. This is further proven by the fact that the Webb bill has been a law for some time and anyone can order whiskey for his own personal use, and it is being done every day. But the express companies cannot transport liquor into Alabama from another state, contrary to Alabama's laws, without violating the Webb bill. The express companies fought the bill and Mr. Blackmon gave them his best service. After the bill passed by 239 in its favor and 94 against it, what did Mr. Blackmon do?

On April 25th after this bill passed in further seeks to defeat its purpose by introducing "A bill (H.R. 9999) to require all common carriers engaged in interstate and foreign commerce to enter [illegible]

Now, ALL express packages includes, of course, liquor packages; so the purpose of this bill is obvious.

How do you like for your Congressman to use such political trickery in order to help the express companies?

Mr. Bryan said no true Democrat could consisently vote against the Webb bill.

Ask Mr. Blackmon or any of Mr. Blackmon's friends his reason for voting against it.

In short, Blackmon cannot come before the voters and give one reason why they should return him to Congress. He must rely on the old ring to put him over as they have done before, but you know the voters refuse to be fooled any more.

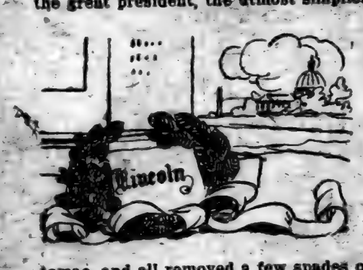
JUDGE DEASON.

Deason is a self-made man if there ever was one. When he was four years old his father died, leaving him and his mother in meagre circumstances, so that he had to begin work at once. During the winter months of his boyhood he went to school a little bit, but he was ambitious, so he studied at night, and dug out for himself a good education. He gradually worked himself up until three years ago he was successful in winning for the Democratic party the Probate Judgeship of Chilton county—the first time this has been done in twenty years—the Republicans having held it all this time. He is an absolutely clean, Christian man, and has the endorsement of practically all of the Democrats of Chilton county.

Judge Deason is against the monopolies which are crushing the poor and middle classes; he is against the stock-gambling system which keeps down the farmer; he is for good roads; he is in favor of securing the very largest available appropriations from the U. S. Government for the purpose of building post roads; he is for the Federal Government taking up road building upon a comprehensive national scheme; his policy is that the jurisdiction of the State and local authorities in the supervision and control of their roads must be prescribed and all possibility for official favoritism in the location or improvement of particular roads must be eliminated; he agrees with and proposes to use his utmost efforts to assist President Wilson in carrying out his poliries; he is for good citizenship, good government, and last, but not least, for the masses who need protection, instead of for classes who have demonstrated too clearly already that they are able to take care of themselves.

Judge Deason is making the race on the simple platform of clean, able, unselfish representation of the voters of the District, and has not the backing of any political ring, "big dailies," railroad or other selfish interest.

The question in the present race is whether or not the voters of the District are going to permit the same small crowd of men, a political ring, to continue running their Congressional affairs as they have done in the past. For the past two terms the voter has not had a chance to select a Congressman by his ballot, but has had to vote for a man who, probably, was selected in the back part of some law office. Blackmon has never had opposition for Congress, and, no one knows how weak he is.



Deason courageously entered the fight against apparent odds, but even a good majority of the voters have pitted to Deason, the cause of this paper and for the people [illegible]

NEWS and GOSSIP of WASHINGTON

Ground Broken for the Great Lincoln Memorial

WASHINGTON.—Ground was broken February 12 for the great memorial which is to be erected in Washington to Lincoln. As would have pleased the great president, the utmost simplicity marked the breaking of the ground.

The day was the one hundred and fifth anniversary of Lincoln's birth. There was no blare of trumpets, no pounding of drums and no burst of artillery salutes. The resident members of the Lincoln memorial commission, accompanied by Henry Bacon, designer of the memorial; M. F. Comer, Toledo, O., the contractor, and Col. W. W. Hart, engineer commissioner in charge of public buildings and grounds, met on the spot down on the "made" ground by the Potomac, and all removed a few spades of earth, and that was all the rites there were.

Of course, there were camera fiends and representatives of all great moving picture firms in the country, making films of the epoch-making incident. It was a freezing day, with a biting wind, but everybody stood with bared heads as the first few spadefuls of earth were turned. There were a few men and women of the common people, whom Lincoln loved, there to see the performance, but only a few—probably not over 20 in all.

Before beginning to turn the earth, former United States Senator Blackburn, who has been appointed chairman of the commission in place of the late Senator Cullom, made a short speech, opening the exercises.

"This great memorial will show that Lincoln is now regarded as the greatest of all Americans," said Senator Blackburn, "and he is so held by the South as well as by the North. Today we let the country know that this great work has been begun and will be carried on steadily until its completion."

The site is on the direct line with the monument to Washington and the capitol and within easy view of the gates of Arlington, which it is planned to connect with the memorial by a memorial bridge.

Government Clerks Just as Selfish as Others

GOVERNMENT clerks are just as selfish as any other body of people that can be got together. They have been howling for years for a retirement law, which will make provisions for retirement at a certain age on one-half or two-thirds of their salary, and the same organization which is known as the "Retirement association" is demanding increased salaries all along the line. The pure selfishness of this United States Civil Service association shows in the fact that the clerks are unable to get together on any one suggestion for retirement. Scores of the younger clerks object to the monthly assessment plan for the purpose of securing an endowment fund on which aged clerks may be retired.

Youth is always hopeful, and these younger clerks think that they will leave the government service long before the retirement age is reached, and then all the money that had been automatically taken from their monthly salaries would be lost to them. And they are strenuously opposed—these younger clerks are—to supporting in idleness any of the aged clerks, who could be immediately retired on part pay if such an endowment fund was established. Their selfishness is really what is retarding the passage of the retirement bill.

One of the finest examples of what may be accomplished without feeling any real loss of salary is shown in the United States Soldiers' home. This home, established in General Scott's time, just after the Mexican war, by an indemnity fund from Mexico, which nobody knew what to do with, is today the most magnificent piece of property in the District of Columbia. It can shelter over 5,000 men without crowding. It has magnificent white marble buildings with marble floors and walls, white marble auditorium and theater, a magnificent library building, a just as magnificent administration building, with a most beautiful cottage for the administration officials, great conservatories and herds of the very finest milch cows—in fact, everything on earth that the heart can wish for, and all done by simply reserving a small sum of 12 cents a month from every enlisted man's pay.

Few Holidays Observed in City of Washington

BE it known that in the District of Columbia mighty few of the patriotic holidays are observed. For instance, congress sits on Memorial day, just exactly as though it were a common, ordinary day, and observes Washington's birthday by some senator reading out Washington's farewell address, while of the birthdays of McKinley and Lincoln absolutely no record is usually made. The Fourth of July, if congress is in session, and June 14 suffer the same neglect.

Secretary of War Garrison, however, taking it for granted that Lincoln's birthday would be a holiday the same as in New Jersey and New York, did not go down to his office in the war department at all, so his secretary called up Mr. Garrison's home to inquire where the secretary of war might be. Mrs. Garrison informed Mr. Garrison's secretary that her husband had gone to New York to address a meeting of the Old Colony club. "Mr. Garrison thought that he might just as well take advantage of the holiday today and make this address," added the wife of the secretary of war.

And those who have been a long time in Washington had a great laugh on Secretary Garrison when he returned to the city to be told that February 12 is not a holiday in the District of Columbia. There are a great many other things that Secretary Garrison might learn of the lack of patriotism of congress and in the District of Columbia.

Light Gray Is Most Inconspicuous for Soldiers

WHAT color can be seen the farthest? What is the most conspicuous color? Experiments to answer these questions have been made by the war department to determine the color best suited for a soldier's uniform. The experiment proved few people realize the difference colors can make or their real relation to one another.

The ideal soldier's costume is one that soon fades into the background, and that does not show at all from a distance, making it invisible to the enemy. In order to prove the relative conspicuousness of colors, 12 soldiers were dressed in colored uniforms and ordered to march off, while a group of officers and color experts remained behind to take notes on the uniforms. Two of the 12 soldiers were clad in light gray, two in dark gray, two in green, two in dark blue, two in scarlet, and two in tan, as these are the colors most fitted for uniforms.

The first to disappear were the light gray. The next two were the tan. The next, surprising as it may seem to those who believe their pale colors were the safest. Then followed the dark gray, while the dark blue and green remained visible long after the other colors had disappeared.

Experiments were also made at firing at targets of various colors, with the same results. Red and blue targets were also experimented with, and it was proved that blue could be more easily seen at a distance, and hit, than anything red.

TO REDUCE THE COST OF LIVING

FARM PRODUCTS TO BE CARRIED DIRECT TO DOOR OF THE CONSUMER.

TEN CITIES ARE SELECTED

By Parcel Post Postmaster General Burleson Will Cut the Cost of Living.

Washington. — Preliminary steps were taken by the postoffice department to perfect its plan for reducing the cost of living by having the parcel post carry farm products direct to the door of consumer. Ten cities were selected to begin the work of establishing direct connection between producer and consumer. Postmaster General Burleson having issued an order permitting the use of crates and boxes for butter, eggs, poultry, vegetables and fruit shipped by parcel post.

Orders went to the postmaster at Boston, Atlanta, St. Louis, San Francisco, Baltimore, Detroit, LaCrosse, Wis.; Lynn, Mass.; Rock Island, Ill., and Washington, directing them "to receive the names of persons who are willing to supply farm produce in retail quantities by parcel post." Printed lists of these names will be distributed among town and city patrons.

"By the use of the lists," said First Assistant Postmaster General Roper, "the city consumer can get in touch with a farmer who will fill his weekly orders for farm produce. The consumer will receive the product fresh from the country, and the personal relationship established no doubt will tend to improve the quality. The farmer will be relieved of carrying his produce to market, as the rural carrier will make daily collections at the farmer's own door of the retail shipments to city consumers.

"The point has been raised that difficulty will be experienced in the return of hampers and other containers. This problem does not appear to me to be difficult, as the farmer may use inexpensive hampers whose value would not warrant their return, or he may use the higher grade hampers for which he may include an additional charge to be credited to the consumer on the return of the hamper by parcel post."

EUROPE CONTROLS RADIUM

Claimed Americans Fail to Recognize Importance of Radium.

Washington.—How the American people failed to recognize the importance of radium as a cancer cure until European countries had obtained virtually all of the present available supply, is graphically told in the annual report of Joseph A. Holmes, director of the federal bureau of mines, made public. The report tells in detail of the bureau's unsuccessful efforts to obtain a quantity of radium sufficient to supply the twenty or more hospitals of the public health service and "serve in part to meet the needs of the various cancer hospitals of the country."

Director Holmes estimates that "in the United States 75,000 persons die each year from cancer. Explaining that radium is considered the most promising cure for certain types of cancer, the director says the most serious barrier to progress in demonstrating this is the scarcity of radium.

"There probably is not more than thirty grams of radium now available for use in such treatment in all countries," the report says. "Of this amount there probably is not more than two grams of radium bromide in the United States, in the hands of a few surgeons. Probably fifteen grams of radium bromide was produced during 1912, and of the fifteen grams nearly 11.5 grams were extracted in various European countries from ores shipped to them from the United States, mainly from Colorado and Utah.

Atlanta.—Edward L. Huie, senior at Tech, and Miss Mabel Bizbie, a milliner, were seriously injured when the Seaboard Express No. 5 from New York City to New Orleans ran them down as they were walking over a trestle near this city. As the fast train swept around the curve, thirty minutes late, the engineer saw the couple crossing the steel structure. Too late, he blew a warning blast. The couple attempted to escape, but before they ran ten feet the pilot of the engine had tossed them into a dry gulley.

DOG SAVES FORTY LIVES

GUESTS OF WINDSOR HOTEL, IN MILWAUKEE, SCURRY DOWN FIRE ESCAPE.

Yelping of Vagabond Pup Awakens Hotel Proprietor, Who Rouses Guests in Time.

Milwaukee, Wis.—Guests of the Windsor hotel, numbering nearly two score, were compelled to flee for their lives when a fire, which destroyed the hotel and the Western Newspaper Union plant, in the southern portion of the building, and burned out the four-story structure. The barking of a dog sounded the alarm in time for escape.

Charles Sandberg, lessee of the hotel, declared that every guest of the hotel got out safely. The property damage is $200,000.

The barking of a vagabond dog aroused Mr. Sandberg, the hotel keeper, and he and policemen went through the halls smashing in doors where the guests failed to answer knocks. Guests were soon scurrying for safety clad in night attire.

Patrolman Wilke was the last to emerge from the mission of awakening the guests. He said the guests had all been awakened and managed to get out.

BANDIT MAKES RICH HAUL

Bandit Robs Express Messenger on Santa Fe Railway.

Beaumont, Texas.—After bundling the messenger, "Reb" Martin, in a gunnysack, a masked man robbed the express car attached to northbound Gulf, Colorado and Santa Fe passenger train No. 202 of several packages of currency, estimated to aggregate about $14,000, and escaped from the train at the village of Helbig, 12 miles north of Beaumont. Posses, which went to Helbig from this city in automobiles, have not found trace of the bandit, who is believed to be hiding in the dense forest about the village.

G. A. Taft, general superintendent of the Wells-Fargo Express company, estimated the amount stolen at $14,000. The money was part of a shipment made by a Houston lumber concern to be used in paying their employes at camps along the road.

Tuscaloosa Swept by Fire.

Tuscaloosa, Ala.—Fire in the business section of Tuscaloosa early did damage estimated at a quarter of a million dollars. Three business houses and their stocks were destroyed. The cause of the fire has not been determined. Rosenau company, department store owners, were the heaviest losers, their building and its contents being valued at $150,000.

Wants $2,000,000 for Atlanta P. O.

Washington.—Among the things recommended by the efficiency commission in its report on the Atlanta postoffice is the erection of a new building to accommodate the increasing volume of business handled by the Atlanta postoffice. In lieu of this, Congressman W. S. Howard has introduced a bill recommending a $2,000,000 appropriation to erect a public building for the postal department. Mr. Howard says that in the event a regional bank is located in Atlanta the present postoffice can be used for it.

ECZEMA ITCHED AND BURNED

Falmouth, Ky.—"Two years ago I was troubled with skin and scalp troubles. I would have pimples that would break out and form sores on my face and head, with terrible itching. The eczema on my face and head itched and burned and when I scratched it, it made sores and I was very disfigured for the time being. My head became so sore I could not touch it with a comb; it became a mass of sores. My hair fell out gradually.

"I was afflicted about a year before I used Cuticura Soap and Ointment and after using them three weeks I was getting better and in less than three months, after using eight cakes of Cuticura Soap and five boxes of Cuticura Ointment, I was completely cured of eczema." A Human Churn

WHEN the food reaches the stomach it is subjected to a peculiar churning movement by the muscular walls of the stomach"—(See Dr. Pierce's Medical Adviser, page 45). In the liver, kidneys and skin, the blood is purified of its waste materials—these organs act as human filters, leaving the blood pure and clean—unless liver, digestive tract and kidneys are clogged.

Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery is a stomach, liver and kidney tonic—by assisting the stomach to assimilate, the liver to filter, the kidneys to act—the poisons are removed, the red blood corpuscles are increased and one feels light, fresh and active instead of logy, dull and heavy. The "Discovery" stimulates the stomach, increases action of heart and arteries and is a most satisfactory alterative to blood-taint of any character. The refreshing influence of this extract of native medicinal plants has been favorably known for over forty years. Everywhere some neighbor can tell you of the good it has done.

PAST GOING FOR TWO YEARS

And This Lady Thinks She Would Have Become Helpless, but for Cardui, The Woman's Tonic.

Waldron, Ark.—Miss Gertrude Houston, of this place, authorizes the following for publication: "I want to tell all ladies who suffer from any kind of womanly trouble, among them, weakness, headache, backache, hurting in sides, pains every month, nervousness, etc., to try Cardui, the woman's tonic. Get it at once, as it is what you need. After you use one bottle, you will never regret your start.

I was just about past going for over two years, with the above ailments, and had it not been for Cardui, I would have been helpless, no doubt.

I took one bottle, and my health began to improve, and before the bottle was gone, I was almost well. Now, my health is perfectly all right.

So, lady friends, if you want a medicine that will do you real good, take Cardui, the woman's tonic."

If you are weak and ailing, think what it would mean to recover as rapidly and surely as did Miss Houston. In the past 50 years, this strength-building remedy has been used by more than a million ladies, who found it of untold value in relieving womanly pains and ailments.

If you are a woman, therefore, try Cardui. You will appreciate its tonic, building effect on the womanly constitution. Begin today.

Had Something to Learn.

The village orchestra was rehearsing. The passage was marked "pp," but the cornet-player was blowing away as if his life depended on it. The new conductor, after an earsplitting blast which effectually drowned the sound of all the other instruments, leaned over to see whether the cornet part was properly marked. Yes, it was.

"My good man," said he, approaching the subject diplomatically, "what do you understand 'ff' to mean?"

"Full force!" answered the rustic. This was unexpected, but it might pass.

"Then what does 'pp' stand for?"

"Plenty of power!" was the illuminating reply.

INDIGESTION, GAS ENDS DYSPEPSIA,

"Pape's Diapepsin" cures sick, sour stomachs in five minutes —Time It!

"Really does" put bad stomachs in order—"really does" overcome indigestion, dyspepsia, gas, heartburn and sourness in five minutes—that—just that—makes Pape's Diapepsin the largest selling stomach regulator in the world. If what you eat ferments into stubborn lumps, you belch gas and eructate sour, undigested food and acid; head is dizzy and aches; breath foul; tongue coated; your insides filled with bile and indigestible waste, remember the moment "Pape's Diapepsin" comes in contact with the stomach all such distress vanishes. It's truly astonishing—almost marvelous, and the joy is its harmlessness.

A large fifty-cent case of Pape's Diapepsin will give you a hundred dollars' worth of satisfaction.

It's worth its weight in gold to men and women who can't get their stomachs regulated. It belongs in your home—should always be kept handy in case of a sick, sour, upset stomach during the day or at night. It's the quickest, surest and most harmless stomach doctor in the world.—Adv.

The Secret.

Mrs. Stuyvesant Fish is known to give the most sumptuous and the most beautiful dinners in the world. She is also known as the possessor of a trenchant wit.

It is said of Mrs. Fish that the remarkable success of a rich but ill-favored New York girl's marriage with a spendthrift nobleman was recently discussed in her presence. No one could understand the happiness of this marriage, which had seemed to bode so ill. But Mrs. Fish shrugged and said:

"The girl won't let her husband touch a penny of her principal—and that you see, keeps up the interest."

CRISIS REACHED IN BRITISH ARMY

MANY OFFICERS RESIGN RATHER THAN ACT AGAINST THE ULSTERITES.

CONDITION UNPRECEDENTED

Number of Withdrawals Cripples the Whole Military Organization in Ireland.

London.—The government's military precautions to preserve order in Ulster have precipitated a crisis without parallel in the history of the British army. Rather than be placed in a position where they might be called upon to act against the Ulster covenanters, numbers of officers have resigned their commissions.

While the war office refuses to say how many have resigned, popular belief is that the number of withdrawals has crippled the whole military organization in Ireland and prevented carrying out the orders for moving several large bodies of troops.

The Marquis of Londonderry, an Ulster leader, said that nothing of the sort had occurred in the British army since the days of the American revolution.

Public curiosity is at fever heat over the question of how the government is to deal with the resignations. The liberal sentiment is that the officers should be court-martialed. Many conservatives argue that the situation amounts to civil war and that the officers should have liberty to choose which faction they should ally themselves with.

The entrance of King George on the scene as peacemaker was the dramatic event of the day. The King held long conferences with the prime minister, Mr. Asquith, his secretary of state for war, Colonel Seely, and several high officers. He afterward summoned Field Marshal Lord Roberts, who has been criticized by liberals for utterances construed as encouragement to the rebellious officers.

From the palace the veteran field marshal drove directly to the war office, where he had a long talk with the secretary for war. The army council held a long sitting at the war offices, generals and lesser officers of the staff coming and going throughout the day.

In the meantime the troop movement continued in Ireland. The center of interest has shifted to Curragh, 25 miles from Dublin, where the Third Cavalry brigade, under Colonel Rolt, are stationed. Gen. Sir Arthur Paget, commanding the forces in Ireland, spent the day in camp. He held a conference with 50 officers of the Curragh, Dublin, Kildare and Newbridge garrisons. It was said that orders had arrived for the dispatch of the Third Brigade to Ulster, but that these could not be carried into execution because nearly all the officers had resigned. Orders for the dispatch o fthe Sixteenth Lancers also failed of execution by reason of the wholesale resignations.

According to some reports the military men have unanimously refused information, but a Dublin dispatch says resignations from the Curragh forces number 10. Other advices place the number at 100.

CLANTON NEGRO LYNCHED.

Taken From Sheriff's Posse, Hanged and Body Riddled With Bullets.

Clanton, Ala.—Charles Young, a negro, was taken from a sheriff's posse two miles west of here, hanged to a tree and his body riddled with bullets.

The negro had entered the home of Mrs. Andrew Wilson, the wife of a well known farmer, robbed, beaten and assaulted her. Mrs. Wilson is 60 years of age and is in a critical condition as a result of the negro's attack.

When news of imminent trouble became known in Clanton, the governor was communicated with by Sheriff Jones and troops were rushed to Clanton, but the negro had been lynched before they arrived.

The crime for which Young paid with his life was one of the most brutal in the history of the county. Going to the home of Mrs. Wilson he demanded and was given all the money in the house. He assaulted her and would have murdered her but for the fact that he was unable to find anything with which to strike the fatal blow.

Gigantic Parade of Unemployed.

New York.—Under a silken black banner, bearing in blood red letters the inscription, "Demolitions," 1,000 men and women—anarchists, the unemployed and members of the Industrial Workers of the World—marched up Fifth avenue last night without waiting to ask the policemen for the permit required by ordinance.

This demonstration, interesting as one of the most picturesque in the city's history, was unmolested by the police, and a grand meeting in the Harlem river speedway followed.

"CASCARETS" FOR LIVER, BOWELS

No sick headache, biliousness, bad taste or constipation by morning.

Get a 10-cent box.

Are you keeping your bowels, liver, and stomach clean, pure and fresh with Cascarets, or merely forcing a passageway every few days with Salts, Cathartic Pills, Castor Oil or Purgative Waters?

Stop having a bowel wash-day. Let Cascarets thoroughly cleanse and regulate the stomach, remove the sour and fermenting food and foul gases, take the excess bile from the liver and carry out of the system all the constipated waste matter and poisons in the bowels.

A Cascaret to-night will make you feel great by morning. They work while you sleep—never gripe, sicken or cause any inconvenience, and cost only 10 cents a box from your store. Millions of men and women take a Cascaret now and then and never have Headache, Biliousness, Coated Tongue, Indigestion, Sour Stomach or Constipation. Adv.

ANOTHER DOCTOR'S EXPERIENCE WITH EX-ZEMA-FO.

Dr. B. F. Hawley, 3646 Chestnut St., Philadelphia, writes: "Some months ago my attention was called to EX-ZEMA-FO, claimed to be a specific for eczema. The remedy was highly lauded by an eminent jurist, who obtained complete relief from its use. I am somewhat loath to employ or recommend secret or proprietary medicine or lotions not knowing their compound; but on investigating I was convinced of its harmlessness and employed it in some dozen or more cases with perfect satisfaction. A strange thing occurred during my observations, viz: A member of my own family was suddenly afflicted with general eczema. I used EX-ZEMA-FO freely with the satisfaction of procuring both prompt and lasting relief. My sense of medical ethics would prevent me in tendering you this testimonial, but my feeling of gratefulness in having obtained both the product and necessary information from you, may perhaps justify my sending you this communication. You are entitled to this." So confident are we that EX-ZEMA-FO will relieve any case of eczema or other skin trouble that we agree to refund the purchase price if results are not satisfactory. 50 cents and $1.00 at dealers, or sent direct on receipt of price by the Nezvoid Chemical Co., 1619 Broadway, Brooklyn, N. GIRLS! GIRLS! TRY IT, BEAUTIFY YOUR HAIR

Make It Thick, Glossy, Wavy, Luxuriant and Remove Dandruff—Real Surprise for You.

Your hair becomes light, wavy, fluffy, abundant and appears as soft, lustrous and beautiful as a young girl's after a "Danderine hair cleanse." Just try this—moisten a cloth with a little Danderine and carefully draw it through your hair, taking one small strand at a time. This will cleanse the hair of dust, dirt and excessive oil and in just a few moments you have doubled the beauty of your hair.

Besides beautifying the hair at once, Danderine dissolves every particle of dandruff; cleanses, purifies and invigorates the scalp, forever stopping itching and falling hair.

But what will please you most will be after a few weeks' use when you will actually see new hair—fine and downy at first—yes—but really new hair—growing all over the scalp. If you care for pretty, soft hair and lots of it, surely get a 25 cent bottle of Knowlton's Danderine from any store and just try it. Adv.

Neptune, being the god of the Seven Seas, very properly comes to the aid of the moving picture in banishing the menace of fire, but he does not offer water—sea-weed is the thing. It is used in the manufacture of non-inflammable films and in the treatment of paper to make it waterproof, flame-proof and germ-proof.

IF BACK HURTS CLEAN KIDNEYS WITH SALTS

Drink Lots of Water and Stop Eating Meat for a While if the Bladder Bothers You.

Meat forms uric acid which excites and overworks the kidneys in their efforts to filter it from the system. Regular eaters of meat must flush the kidneys occasionally. You must relieve them like you relieve your bowels; removing all the acids, waste and poison, else you feel a dull misery in the kidney region, sharp pains in the back or sick headache, dizziness, your stomach sours, tongue is coated and when the weather is bad you have rheumatic twinges. The urine is cloudy, full of sediment; the channels often get irritated, obliging you to get up two or three times during the night.

To neutralize these irritating acids and flush off the body's urinous waste get about four ounces of Jad Salts from any pharmacy; take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days and your kidneys will then act fine and bladder disorders disappear. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for generations to clean and stimulate sluggish kidneys and stop bladder irritation. Jad Salts is inexpensive; harmless and makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water drink which millions of men and women take now and then, thus avoiding serious kidney and bladder diseases.—Adv.

Tidal Wave Submerges Island.

Inishkeeragh, a small island lying off Arranmore, on the Donegal coast, and having a population of about 50 persons, has been almost entirely submerged by a tidal wave.

Rushed by the road of the waters the residents were able to escape with their lives, but suffered severe loss of property, chiefly in regard to their stocks of cornyard stacked ready for hay-making. The tidal wave reached Arranmore also, for the conformation of the land there protected the northernmost from the ravages of the waters.

A Message To Women

Those of Middle Age Especially.

When you have found no remedy for the horrors that oppress you during change of life, when through the long hours of the day it seems as though your back would break, when your head aches constantly, you are nervous, depressed and suffer from those dreadful bearing down pains, don't forget that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound is the safest and surest remedy, and has carried hundreds of women safely through this critical period.

Read what these three women say:

From Mrs. Hornung, Buffalo, N. Y.

BUFFALO, N. Y.—"I am writing to let you know how much your medicine has done for me. I failed terribly during the last winter and summer and every one remarked about my appearance. I suffered from a female trouble and always had pains in my back, no appetite and at times was very weak.

"I was visiting at a friend's house one day and she thought I needed Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. I took it and have gained eight pounds, have a good appetite and am feeling better every day. Everybody is asking me what I am doing and I recommend Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. You may publish this letter if you wish and I hope others who have the same complaint will see it and get health from your medicine as I did."—MRS. A. HORNUNG, 91 Stanton St., Buffalo, N. Y.

Was A Blessing To This Woman.

SO. RICHMOND, VA.—"I was troubled with a bearing down pain and a female weakness and could not stand long on my feet. Of all the medicines I took nothing helped me like Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. I am now regular and am getting along fine. I cannot praise the Compound too much. It has been a blessing to me and I hope it will be to other women."—Mrs. D. TYLER, 23 West Clopton St., South Richmond, Va.

Pains in Side, Could Hardly Stand.

LODI, WIS.—"I was in a bad condition, suffering from a female trouble, and I had such pains in my sides I could hardly move. Before I had taken the whole of one bottle of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound I felt better, and now I am well and can do a good day's work. I tell everybody what your medicine has done for me."—Mrs. JOHN THOMPSON, Lodi, Wisconsin.

For 30 years Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has been the standard remedy for female ills. No one sick with woman's ailments does justice to herself if she does not try this famous medicine made from roots and herbs, it has restored so many suffering women to health.

But, gee! Talk about that frost at Anniston! It didn't compare with the cold storage proposition in Clanton on Saturday. The thermometer in the court house registered about two below.

Don't forget that the Board of Registrars meet in Clanton on Friday and Saturday before the Primary. All young men who have attained the age of twenty-one years should not fail to register and thus be qualified to participate in the April election. Then, too, there may be others who for some reason have neglected this important duty. By all means do not fail to meet the Board on the above dates.

The reports circulated that Mr. Blackmon spoke to a large audience at the court house on Saturday last, are like the claims Blackmon is making that he will carry every county in the District, they have been greatly misrepresented, and it is plain this is done for the purpose of deceiving the voters. The facts are that Mr. Blackmon spoke to an audience of between forty and fifty, composed of men, boys and women.

Concerning the Post Offices.

Former Sheriff J. S. Catts, of Verbena, was in town Monday shaking hands with friends. Mr. Catts stated that he was told at Mountain Creek that Barney Roberts, who is understood to be Mr. Blackmon's campaign manager for Chilton county, was asking support for Mr. Blackmon, and saying that he would dictate post office appointments in Chilton in the future as Mr. Blackmon's representative. Mr. Catts also stated that he has in his possession a number of letters written by Mr. Blackmon to Mr. Catts' friends in which he states that he has nothing to do with fourth-class post office appointments. Somebody is evidently mistaken. Is it Mr. Blackmon or his manager?

30 Cents Was All That He Got

If all the statements printed in the Montgomery are as false as the statements published in that paper as are being made by a man who says that his name is W. P. Thompson and who says that he is a resident of Chilton county, then may the Lord have mercy on the candidates who are relying upon such statements for election. It appears that this man is drawing his support from the State of Alabama, that the taxpayers of this county are being taxed to feed and clothe him, that he poses as an old soldier. It does appear that a human being under these conditions ought at least to try to behave himself and tell the truth.

He appears to be the only man in Chilton county who does not know that Chilton county will cast its vote practically solid for Judge E. B. Deason and Senator Thos. A. Curry. We are going to do this, if for other reason than the fact that they are Chilton county men, Democrats and men of unquestionable ability. He appears to be about the only man in this county who does not know that the Democrats of this county by a large majority, are going to vote for B. B. Comer for Governor. He also appears to be the only man in this county who knows just exactly how the vote will result as to the other candidates. We do not want to censure a man for doing that which he is commanded to do by a domineering political officer, but we do not think that he ought to have imposed in such manner upon a paper like the Montgomery Advertiser and then charged for it.

A FEW WORDS FROM MR. COX

To the Democratic Voters of Chilton County:

Since my friends have announced my candidacy for the office of County Commissioner from the First District of Chilton County, I beg to assure them that I appreciate the honor and hope to receive the vote and support of all democrats. I have been too busy to make a canvass of the county, and have not had the pleasure of meeting with as many of the voters as I would liked to have done; then, too, I am unopposed for the nomination and have not deemed a canvass necessary. I assure all of my friends that after the April primary I shall put forth every honorable and laudable effort to secure my election, as well as the entire democratic ticket and thus bring old Chilton back into the democratic column where she rightfully belongs.

Again assuring my friends of my appreciation of their hearty support, I am yours very respectfully, CHAS. B. COX.

CARD FROM MR. JONES

Owing to the illness of my wife I have not had the pleasure of meeting with a very large number of the voters of the county, and I take this method of assuring them that their vote and influence in support of my candidacy will be greatly appreciated.

The report has gained circulation in some quarters that should I be elected Sheriff I would "farm" the office out to another and would not give it my attention. This report is absolutely false and have no foundation in fact. Should I have the honor to be Chilton's chief executive officer I beg to assure the people of the county that I will devote my whole time to the duties of the office and shall strive to the utmost of my ability to render to the citizens of the county my best service.

Respectfully,
B. E. JONES.

First Assistant Attorney General, Candidate for Attorney General

Mr. Martin is a graduate of the law department of the University of Alabama has practiced law at Montgomery since his admission to the bar, and during that time served three years as Assistant Solicitor of the City Court of Montgomery, and for the last three years has been Assistant Attorney General of the state. In these offices he has gained a valuable experience in the execution of the law and the administration of the affairs of the department of which he seeks to be the head.

Mr. Martin is publicly endorsed as a lawyer of high character, ability, and industry by more than one-third of the members of the bar of Alabama.

The Referee.

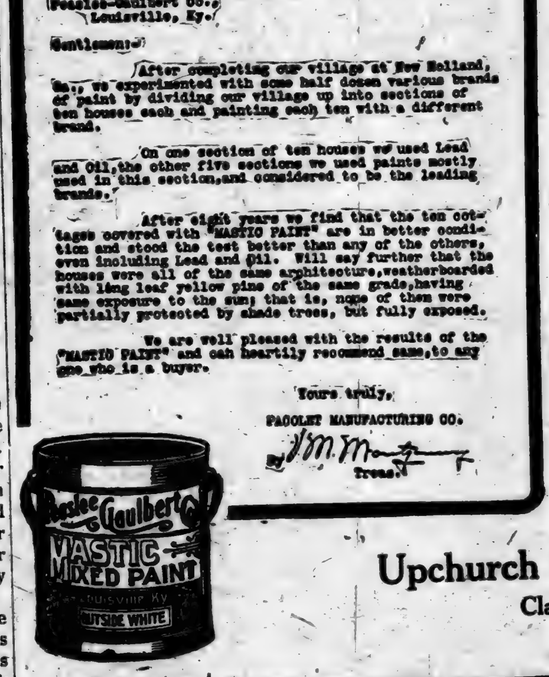
We congratulate Judge E. B. Deason for having said the reign of the Referee has passed. This is as it should be. When Judge Deason is nominated for Congress in the Primary election, then the Democrats of this District who voted for him will not have to submit their petitions to a Referee who is a stranger to them, and who in all probability they had never heard of.

The Democrats of Chilton county have had enough of the Referee business under Mr. Blackmon. And his friends are now assured that even if they work and vote for him and should even bring about his election and then should aspire to some small office or position that all their effort and work shall go unrewarded unless Mr. Voter first secures the approval of the Referee, a party not old enough to cast a ballot. Or possibly the endorsement of a man who refused to vote for the Democratic nominee, openly proclaims that he voted against the regular Democratic nominee, and whose voice is now heard above all others demanding that the bars be put up. How does this sound to the friends of Mr. Blackmon in Chilton county?

Give us a Congressman who with his own ear will listen to us and let us have no more of the Referee system.

PRELIMINARY TRIAL

The preliminary trial of Mrs. Julie Walker, charged with being implicated in the killing of Dr. B. A. Walker, the Birmingham dentist, was held at Thorsby Tuesday before Justice of the Peace J. Bice. After hearing the evidence, which, we are informed, was largely circumstantial, Mrs. Walker was released on a bond of $2,000 to await the action of the next Grand Jury.



MR. CARTER IS HELD IN $3,000 BOND.

Justice Gulledge, on Thursday, held Mr. R. L. Carter on a $3,000 bond, which the prisoner furnished, for the recent killing of Dr. B. A. Walker, near Thorsby.

A large number of frie nds and relatives were present.

Makes Healthy Bowels

THIS simple rule of health is daily called attention to by every doctor in the land, whose first question to the patient almost invariably is, "Are your bowels regular?" Yet there's not one person in fifty who takes proper care of the bowels. And the result of this foolish neglect is nine-tenths of all ill-health.

If today you are unable to free your body of waste matter at the usual time, or if the act causes straining, pains and discomfort, don't let that condition occur again tomorrow. Unless your bowels can carry away the waste materials left after food is digested, decay sets in, the poisons of which, taken up by the blood, increase the risk of Typhoid Fever, Appendicitis, and many other serious diseases.

In treating constipation, there is a right way and a wrong way. The wrong way is to take harsh purgatives which even though they do clear the bowels, cause griping and nausea, injure the delicate tissues, and so disturb the normal functions as to cause the return of constipation. The right way is to help Nature to produce natural movement, without pain or discomfort, by using

Rexall Orderlies

More Than One Hundred Million Were Sold Last Year

This enormous quantity was used with good results by busy men who suffered from constipation, due to lack of exercise, or indigestion caused by overwork—by children whose parents realize the harmful effect of common purgatives—by old people whose systems cannot stand anything harsh—by women during pregnancy, and after childbirth, when any medicine with a violent action would be particularly dangerous. Many of these people are your neighbors and friends. Ask anyone who has ever used them—they'll tell you Rexall Orderlies satisfied and helped them.

—a gentle laxative in the form of a chocolate-tasting tablet. One of these tablets eaten just before going to bed will help to restore your bowels to normal activity at a time when, your body being at rest, the medicine can do its best work. As a result of taking that tablet (or say two, if your case is obstinate), your bowels will move easily and naturally in the morning. The use of Rexall Orderlies for a few days afterward will restore normal regularity. Even chronic constipation is benefited by them, and it is not necessary to continue the treatment for a long time, because, instead of driving Nature, they simply help her to help herself.

Sold only at the more than 7,000 Rexall Stores and in this town only by us. In vest pocket tin boxes, 10c, 25c, 50c

THE SILENT AND ABSENT HOBSON NOT PRESENT IN CONGRESS WHEN FARMERS BILLS AT STAKE

Favors Automobile Speedways Dodged the Immigration Bill, and Was, as Usual Absent When the Shackleford Good Roads Measure Passed the House.

McELDERRY LAUGHS AT CAPTAIN HOBSON

Request was recently made by Hobson's Secretary upon President Ford of the Farmer's Union that he try to secure the services of Mr. Barrett in having the organizers call meetings in order that McElderry of Talladega might take advantage of the meetings to "talk Hobson." It is understood that this effort of Hobson's Secretary to use the Farmer's Union for Hobson's purposes was repudiated, and that President Barrett has expressed great regret at the efforts of certain parties to "use" the Union. We have been shown a telegram from McElderry requesting that the sendee of that telegram try to make it appear that the Underwood people were attacking him in order to discredit a Farmer's Union man. In other words, says McElderry, say anything that will help Hobson—whether it is true or not. As admitted by McElderry, "nothing but the power of God can keep men from lieing.

In writing with reference to Hobson, this same McElderry says that Hobson did not appeal to him (McElderry) in the least, and referred to Hobson as the "Big Navy" man. The reason Hobson did not "appeal to McElderry in the least" and why McElderry declared his intention of supsporting Mr. Clayton against Hobson, will abundantly appear from Hobson's record on agricultural questions shown by the recent letter of Mr. Patten, for many years the legislative agent of the Farmer's Union in Washington, from which we quote below.

McElderry only came into the Hobson fold when Mr. Underwood introduced the Underwood substitute on cotton gambling at the express request of President Wilson, who handed the substitute to Mr. Underwood with his own hands. Since that time McElderry has been furiously for Hobson. Here is Hobson's partial record of absences and silences on legislation of great importance to the Southern farmer:

Vital Measures Affecting South.

"The Congressional Record for the Sixty-first, Sixty-second and Sixty-third Congresses show that when the agricultural appropriation bill was up before those Congresses Underwood was here working and voting for more liberal appropriations for agricultural purposes and that on the other hand Congressman Hobson took absolutely no part in the matter and is recorded as absent and not voting. (Congressional Record Sixty-first Congress, page 1680; Congressional Record Sixty-second Congress, page 4174; and Congressional Record Sixty-third Congress, page 4801.)

The Congressional Record shows that all during the four months' fighting one year ago in the House for parcel post Mr. Underwood was on hand working and voting for parcel post and that Congressman Hobson took no part in that long fight and is recorded as absent and not voting. (Congressional Record Sixty-second Congress, page 11,761 and pages previous.)

The Congressional Record for the Sixty-first Congress, at pages 7765 and 7768, show that Underwood was present arguing and voting when the bill was up for establishing postal savings banks and that Hobson was recorded as absent and not voting.

The Congressional Record for the Sixty-second Congress, page 242, shows that Underwood was present and worked and voted for the proposed amendment to the constitution providing for the direct election of United States senators and that Hobson did not vote.

The Congressional Record for the Sixty-second Congress, page 4236, shows that Underwood worked and voted for the establishment of a children's bureau and that Hobson took absolutely no part in the matter and failed to vote.

The Congressional Record for the Sixty-first Congress, page 4174, shows that Underwood worked and voted for placing agricultural implements on the free list and that Hobson did not even vote on the bill.

The Congressional Record for the Sixty-first Congress, pages 8860 and 8957, shows that Underwood led the fight, argued and voted for the Scott bill, the first time it was up, aimed at gambling in cotton and that Hobson failed to say a word and neglected even to vote.

Immigration Bill.

The Congressional Record for the Sixty-second Congress, at pages 610, 675, etc., shows that Underwood voted for the immigration bill, urged by the Farmers' Union, when it passed the House in December, 1912, and that Hobson failed to say a word and neglected to vote. Likewise when the 60-page immigration bill was up in the House during the 3d and 4th of February, this year, although in the city and present on the floor during the 3d and 4th of February, Mr. Hobson failed to say a word or to even vote while Underwood, on the other hand, took the floor, agued for the bill and voted on every vote.

Speedways or Farm Roads?

The Congressional Record for the Sixty-third Congress, page 3432, shows that Mr. Underwood voted for the Shackelford farmers' road bill and that Hobson did not vote. The vote on this bill came on February 10. It was known when Mr. Hobson was in the city on February 3 and 4 that the Shackelford bill would be up immediately after the immigration bill was disposed of. Consequently, if he had been interested he could have easily stayed over to vote for this needed legislation. But he does not seem to be in favor of market or business roads for the farmer. His preference is for the transcontinental and automobile speedways. For the Congressional Record of January 28, 1914, shows that he introduced a bill, H. R. 24,471, "by request," which authorizes the construction of two trunk line roads. The trunk line proposition is backed by such big interests as the road material manufacturers, certain big engineering concerns, and the automobile manufacturers. The road material manufacturers are opposed to the farmers' little dirt road proposition because it means the improvement of little roads leading from the farm to the market or town. This would get the farmer and his produce out of the mud. The road material manufacturers and the engineering concerns want the government to build transcontinental trunk lines, because that will mean large, juicy contracts for building its links. Likewise the automobile manufacturers and tourists want trunk lines for pleasure purposes.

As I stated above Underwood led the fight for the first anti-gambling in cotton bill that passed the House and the precise thing that the Farmers' Union has always indorsed and still indorses."

COMMANDER-IN-CHIEF OF THE DEMOCRATIC ARMIES OF THE UNITED STATES

THE PRESIDENT

Can any Democrat vote to deprive this Commander-in-Chief of his ablest and wisest general — Underwood of Alabama?

THE FIELD MARSHAL AT THE FRONT

Keep him there, and thank God we have him!

What would the people of the South have replied to a suggestion that Robert E. Lee be retired and replaced by an inferior officer of his army who deserted his duties and attacked the good name of his general?

WHO IS JOHN H. PATTEN?

Mr. Patten is the son-in-law of the late Senator Latimer, of South Carolina, who was known as the leading farmer senator from the South for many years. The family owns a large amount of cotton lands around Belton, S. C., and Mr. Patten is interested in the agricultural development of the South. He is also Assistant Secretary of the Farmer's National Congress of the United States of America. Mr. Patten is and has been for years identified with the World's Purity Federation, of which Rev. B. S. Steadwell is president. This organization is urging the passage of laws curbing the liquor traffic and aimed at the white slave traffic and commercialized vice. A recent issue of "The Light," which is the official publication of the Purity Federation, gives Mr. Patten and Rev. Wilbur F. Crafts the credit for having introduced and pushed the passage of the Kenyon Red-Light bill for the District of Columbia, which is directed at the red-light district of Washington. Rev. W. F. Crafts is the leading spirit in the International Reform Bureau and is well known by the clergy throughout the country.

Mr. Patten occupies a very prominent position as the representative of farmers' societies and uplift societies throughout the country, and is a man of fine character and standing.

HOBSON, THE ABSENTEE.

Are not these record facts, showing Underwood's constancy in the performance of his duties and the eternal absence of Hobson, enough to paralyze the normal mind with the conclusion that the American people and the Democratic party are justified in the faith and confidence reposed in Underwood and in the profound distrust they feel toward Hobson.

FREE WHISKEY AND PROHIBITION.

Oneonta, Alabama.

Captain R. P. Hobson said in his speech here on Feb. 13, 1914, in substance, as follows:

I have very little hope of reforming the old man who has drunk whiskey all of his life. My idea of nation-wide prohibition is not to interfere with the manufacture of wine or whiskey by the individual on his own premises or plantation for his own use. My idea is simply to prevent the sale of or the manufacture of it for sale, by taking the profit out of the traffic of it. I do not want the United States Government to interfere with the individual manufacturing it for his own use. I do not want the strong arm of the law to interfere with the home. THE SOUTH'S ETERNAL PERIL.

Words can not express the orgy of vice, the domestic horror, the murders in the cabin, the unspeakable crimes upon the country road, which would follow Hobson's plan to allow the white man and the negro unrestricted license to make whiskey over his kettle, to allow the old drunkard to make it and give it away to his friends and his children. The editor of the Enterprise-Journal has depicted the results which Hobson invites in these words:

"It means that every negro tenant, every negro turpentine hand, can make all the rum, utilize all the cane skimmings, all the rotten peaches, all the corn whiskey they choose to manufacture, rig up a still with a coffee pot and cane reeds and let a saturnalia or pandemonium reign; passion and lust, murder and arson, rape and assassination stalk abroad and Hell and its Imps will reap a harvest such as has not been visible since the days of Beelzebub and his cohorts broke loose from the chains of Hades.

TALES OF THE ANANIAS CLUBS

Vicious Carpet-Bagger Attacks Upon Alabama's Foremost Democrat in Congress Exposed.

Southern Democrats are Justly Aroused Over the Self-Evident Canards.

The Hobson Committee has been sending out from Jefferson County a circular signed by various so-called Hobson Clubs; and we now find much of it reproduced in the Hobson carpet-bagger hand book, printed in Ohio for the purpose of assaulting Alabama's Democratic leader. This is in line with the other ammunition imported to shoot Underwood in the back, while he is doing the people's work in Congress.

The circulars are filled with false criticism of Mr. Underwood's work in Congress—the best they could find—and they show the foundation of the whole fight against Underwood—false criticism and false statements. Here are a few samples:

LIE NUMBER ONE: "That in the Fifty-sixth Congress, First Session, June 1st, p. 6426, he (Underwood) voted against giving Congress entire control of the trusts," and in the interest of the trusts.

THE FACT: The question was on a proposed amendment to the United States Constitution giving Congress exclusive power to define, regulate, control, prohibit and dissolve trusts, monopolies, combinations, etc. At that time (1900), thirty-one States had laws against trusts, and every one of them had become the subject of judicial inquiry and had been sustained. The effect of this amendment would have been to nullify all of these laws, and leave the trusts absolutely free until Congress should see fit to regulate them and the Federal Court should finally interpret the laws. The adoption of this amendment would have deprived the states of all power to act, and would have conferred legal sanction upon the trusts of their continued control over that which they already held in violation of law.

LIE NUMBER TWO: "That Mr. Underwood, in the Fifty-seventh Congress, on March 11th and April 18th, voted in the interest of the sugar trust."

THE FACT: The amendment for which Mr. Underwood voted would have had the effect of reducing the price of sugar twelve and one-half cents per hundred pounds. No sane man could honestly construe the vote mentioned as in favor of any trust; nor could any honest man.

LIE NUMBER THREE: "That Mr. Underwood voted against a measure to regulate the telephone lines of the District of Columbia, and in the interest of the telephone trust."

THE FACT: The bill against which Mr. Underwood voted was artfully called "A bill to regulate the use of telephone wires in the District of Columbia" but expressly gave the telephone company the power to extend its conduits and maintain its poles, without any limitation as to time, without one word of prohibition on the one hand or requirement on the other. It conferred on the Commissioners of the District unlimited power to grant to that company all future privileges the company might desire, without restraint. The true purpose of the bill was to foster the special privilege, and Mr. Underwood voted against it.

LIE NUMBER FOUR: That Mr. Underwood supported the bill, which as finally enacted, is now resulting in the construction of the great lock on the Warrior River which will facilitate navigation by many years, and save hundreds of thousands of dollars for the government. The Hobson Campaign lie asserts that this was in the interest of the great water power trust.

THE FACT: When this bill came up for consideration, Hobson, was, as usual, absent. It was for the most important bill ever introduced in Congress to facilitate navigation in the Sixth District. It was not in the interest of the water power trust, and the electrical installation which might have been authorized by the bill, would have furnished an independent competitive source of electric current to the people. The facts as to Hobson's inexcusable absence on this occasion are set forth on page 20 of the Underwood campaign book.

The company which received the recommendation of the War Department for the grant of the right to use the surplus water for electricity was a small independant company of men holding no interest in any other electric company, and is not and never was a part of any trust. That assertion is merely an outrageous lie—more abominable than most of them for the reason that W. S. Welch, of Bessemer, Alabama, Hobson's Campaign manager there, and a man who is making speeches for Hobson all over the state, was and is a stockholder in the company.

The charge is merely intended to divert attention from the fact that Hobson was absent, dodging [illegible] for [illegible] rules, and [illegible] for [illegible] when [illegible] before the House.

THE FACT: The vote was merely against limiting the debate upon a banking and currency bill to the inadequate period of five hours for discussion. Instead of voting in the interest of the banking trust, his vote was in the interest of a full and proper discussion of a matter of extreme importance. He voted against the Republican banking and currency bill, and sided with his Democratic colleagues. Captain Hobson was absent, not voting, and unaccounted for at the time of this vote, and he should explain why he abandoned his country and his party on this important measure.

LIE NUMBER SIX: "That Mr. Underwood voted against the publicity of corporation returns, and against the corporation tax, in the interest of big business."

THE FACT: R. P. Hobson was absent, as usual, drawing his pay for services not rendered. Mr. Underwood opposed the resolution in question, because it was inadequate, in that it provided for publicity in favor of the president alone, giving him an arbitrary power and expressly authorizing the president to suppress the facts as to corporate returns, if he so desired. Mr. Underwood's position was expressed in these words:

> "Why not have honest, straightforward, full publicity, and let all know what is going on, and not a subterfuge of this kind?"

LIE NUMBER SEVEN: "That Mr. Underwood voted against the Postal Savings Bank, and in the interest of the banker's trust." (2 votes.)

THE FACT: The best Mr. Hobson could do on one of these votes was to dodge the question and vote "PRESENT;" on the other vote mentioned HE VOTED WITH UNDERWOOD. Mr. Underwood voted with the entire Alabama delegation present and voting, and with practically all the Democratic members of the House. The charge is stupid, ridiculous and false. Citizens, what an outrage for these people to attack Underwood, when on one of these votes Hobson voted with Underwood and on the other did not vote at all, and Underwood voted right. The record shows (61st Congress, p. 7765-7768) that Underwood was present, argued, and voted to establish the postal savings bank—Hobson not voting.

LIE NUMBER EIGHT: "That Mr. Underwood voted against the publication of campaign contributions."

THE FACT: Hobson failed to vote at all, and on these questions Mr. Underwood voted with the Democratic party. We have fully explained the falsity of Hobson's charge in this matter in the Underwood Campaign Book, and have shown that Hobson himself was the offender.

LIE NUMBER NINE: "That in voting and speaking against the so-called Phossy-Jaw Bill, he acted in the interest of the match trust."

THE FACT: The match trust is the Diamond Match Company, and that company was given an absolute monopoly when Congress adopted the bill taxing white phosphorus matches out of existence. The independent match companies were very much opposed to this bill, and showed that with reasonable sanitary precautions employees' lives and safety would be and had been protected. The framers of the constitution never intended that the taxing power should be used for discriminatory purposes; and, as usual, on this vote R. P. Hobson was "not voting." The Match Trust maintained a large lobby and a magazine and newspaper campaign for the bill.

LIE NUMBER TEN: "That Mr. Underwood voted against the parcel post and in favor of the express companies."

THE FACT: This charge is a peculiarly inexcusable lie, but it is characteristic of the statements with reference to Mr. Underwood, which have appeared in Hobson's paper, THE ADVANCE, and in the circular in question. It is absolutely without foundation in fact.

The vote in question was not a vote on the passage of the parcel post measure, nor to adopt any proposition as a part of any law. It was simply a vote as to whether certain things should be in order on the appropriation bill, which otherwise would not have been in order: the Honorable R. P. Hobson, dodging and voting "Present." Underwood not only favored the parcel post measure, but voted for it. The bill when actually adopted was so overwhelmingly approved, that no record vote was called for, the vote on division being 237 in favor and 5ve against the bill.

LIE NUMBER ELEVEN: "That Mr. Underwood is recorded as not voting when a measure to investigate the money trust was being considered."

THE FACT: How can a Hobson Committee have the effrontery to complain because Mr. Underwood, as [illegible] is recorded as not voting, [illegible] Hobson was recorded as not voting. Mr. Hobson was recorded as not voting [illegible] Hobson was present, you were as usual, silent and absent or not voting.

LIE NUMBER TWELVE: "That Mr. Underwood voted for the water power trust in voting for the Coosa River bill.

THE FACT: At the time of the passage of the Coosa River Bill, authorizing the Alabam Power Company to construct a dam on the Coosa River, that Company was in bitter warfare with the so-called electric trust. The General Electric Company's interests were bitterly opposed to the passage of the bill, and it was shown to the Congressional Committee in charge, that the Company proposed to spend nearly two million dollars in improving navigation on the river and for the purpose of manufacturing lime nitrogen to fertilize our farms. Underwood, and the Alabama delegation, who voted for this bill, need no defense before the people of Alabama for their position. Hobson was, as usual, absent.

LIE NUMBER THIRTEEN: "That in the Sixty-third Congress Mr. Underwood voted against a measure requiring the President to make known the endorsers of the appointees for Federal District Judges."

THE FACT: The proposed measure would have been unjustifiable, had so little merit that it has never been revived. Where was Captain Hobson lecturing when this important (?) subject was before the House? Why did he fail to vote on this measure? Absent, not voting and drawing pay!

LIE NUMBER FOURTEEN: "That in the Special Session in 1913, Mr. Underwood is reported as being opposed to the incorporation of the income tax in the Underwood Tariff Bill."

THE FACT: This charge is an absolute falsehood. Mr. Underwood has always favored an income tax to equalize the tax burdens and to give elasticity and productiveness to our revenue system. Mr. Underwood intended and proposed from the very first to incorporate the income tax in the tariff bill, and we challenge Hobson to state over his own signature his responsibility for this false "report" of Mr. Underwood's attitude.

LIE NUMBER FIFTEEN: "That Mr. Underwood is 'reported' to have opposed in caucus the consideration of currency reform questions, etc."

THE FACT: Representative Carter Glass, the author of the currency bill, has indignantly repudiated this lie, and, if Captain Hobson is responsible for this false "report," we challenge him to admit it over his own signature, in order that he may be exposed to the contempt of his colleagues in the Democratic caucus who know the facts.

Additional lies about Mr. Underwood's attitude toward the farmer and toward the New York Cotton Exchange have been repudiated by the records and by officials and persons of unimpeachable character and the highest authority. The Democrats of Alabama should repudiate and overwhelm this effort on the part of a band of political fortune-hunters, maintained in Birmingham by Republican and foreign contributions, to discredit the greatest Alabamian of his time, and destined to go down in the history of the United States as one of the most constructive of American statesmen—and all these lies in the interest of a man who has abandoned his duties, received pay in violation of the Federal Statutes, ignored his oath of office, and deliberately and persistently disregarded the rule of the House of Representatives, which provides that:

> "Every member shall be present within the Hall during its sittings, unless excused or necessarily prevented; and shall vote on each questio nunless he had a direct personal or pecuniary interest in the event of such question."

OSCAR UNDERWOOD AND CLARKE THE COTTON GAMBLER

The falsehood about Underwood introducing legislation in favor of cotton gambling and defeating the Clarke amendment is exploded by the following facts:

Clarke, of Arkansas, after losing $20,000 in cotton gambling introduced an amendment to the Underwood tariff bill, which was intended to destroy the cotton exchange which now provides the market for about eighty per cent of the cotton crop of the South. Mr. Underwood, President Wilson, and his leaders, have for years desired legislation to restrict cotton gambling. Representative Lever and Senator Smith, Democrats, together with Secretaries Burleson and Houston, had prepared a bill which they thought vastly better than the Clarke amendment. In conference with President Wilson, and these gentlemen, Mr. Underwood was requested to introduce the amendment which has been made the subject of such outrageous and bitter attack by Hobson and McElderry. Nothing more contemptible has been seen in the history of American politics.

To criticise Mr. Underwood is to criticise President Wilson. To call him the tool of the cotton gamblers is to call President Wilson and his cabinet the tool of the cotton gamblers. The charge is false and baseless and Hobson knows it, McElderry knows it. Remember, Democrats, Underwood is your representative, laboring for the American people, shielding him from [illegible] upon Alabama, while the frenzied Hobson, the venomous McElderry, and others who have no appreciation for Underwood's services, charge per and receive pay [illegible] to [illegible] in the people. SEED CHALLENGES COMER TO ELIMINATION CONTEST BASED ON COMER'S ABILITY TO PROVE TRUTH OF HIS OWN STATEMENTS

Offers to Select Ten Assertions Made in Comer's Paid Advertisements and if Comer Can Prove Two Out of the Ten Seed Will Withdraw, Provided Comer Will Agree to Drop Out of Race If He Fails to Prove His Own Words—Seed States Facts Which Can Be Verified Easily.

TO THE VOTERS OF ALABAMA:—

Each of the four candidates for Governor claims the people's suffrage, asserting that he is their representative. It has been charged that my claims have not been presented and heralded through the newspapers as have those of my opponents. For this there is a reason.

One candidate, while already wealthy, during his former term as Governor, made such a strenuous effort to steer cotton mills from bankruptcy as to veer sufficiently far the other way to justify investment in another Seven Hundred Thousand Dollars mill. Thus while Governor he controlled legislation so as to earn profits so large that he is now enabled without burden to fill the newspapers with advertising matter in an effort to secure a new lease of power.

Another rich candidate and member of one of the State's wealthiest families has probably expended a sum equally as great with a campaign manager journeying to another State to interview the chief dispenser of liquor boodle.

My third opponent has admitted a contribution of twenty-five hundred dollars by friendly interests in Mobile. The question arises how much more from friendly sources, judging by liberal expenditures in his behalf?

The total financial aid that has come to me from my entire campaign, either directly or indirectly, is one single unsolicited contribution of twenty-five dollars which I insisted upon returning. Should there be surprise then that my candidacy has not received the same prominence through the columns of the press? Can, therefore, any one of the other three candidates more justly than I claim to represent the people? Through personal effort and the mails I have gone direct to the plain masses of the plain people.

It has been fifty years and more since strictly a farmer has occupied our Governor's chair. I am the sole candidate whose chief vocation is that of a farmer, and am, therefore, in a position to best observe the almost total neglect at the hand of the State of the farmers upon the farm. While other states had been appropriating annually from fifty thousand to a half million dollars to promote the agricultural interests through lecturers, institute work, demonstrations, organizers of boys' corn clubs and girls' tomato clubs, prizes for fairs, free distribution of serum to prevent hog cholera, etc., Alabama was, for these purposes, appropriating less than ten thousand dollars annually, our state is at least an avreage state, and by making an average approximation of $200,000.00 (just three per cent of the amount disbursed from our treasury), we ought with the same labor upon the same land eventually to double our production, which would mean the addition of one hundred and ninety millions of dollars annually to the farmers and through them to the wealth of the State. This is a matter which was almost completely overlooked by the former Governor, though ten times as important as railroad rates. We must first produce before we can either ship or buy.

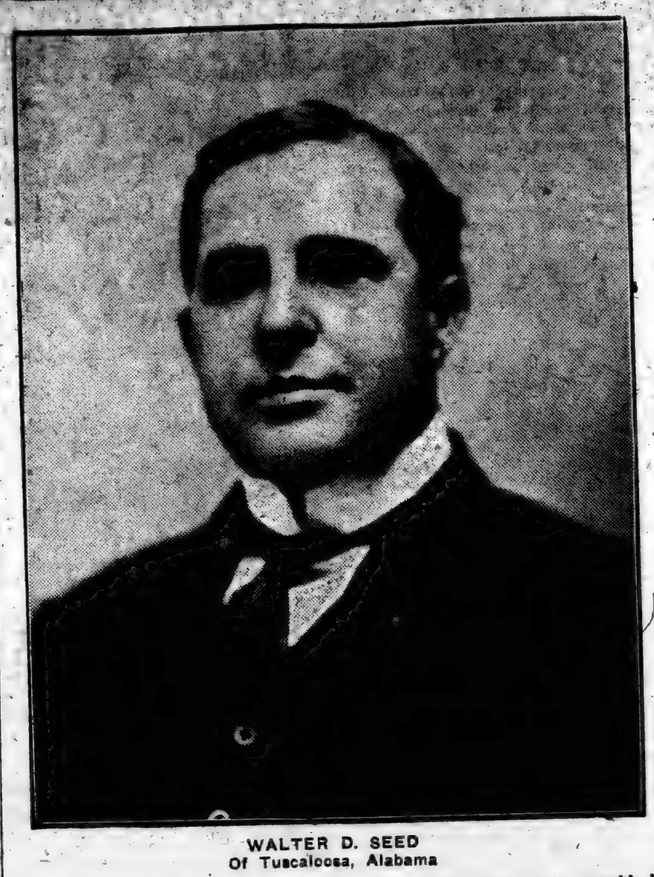
Education is the greatest factor for the creation of wealth. It is true that the higher the institution the greater the cost, yet I hold that Governor Comer can assign no good reason for having given more to the colleges than to all the public schools. He attempts to hide this fact in his published Cullman speech in which he states that his legislature gave to the public schools $2,893.52. From the Acts of Alabama, 1907, page 249, it will be seen that the appropriation for public schools was $300,000 the first year and $350,000 each year thereafter, bill not operative until October after Comer was inaugurated in January, which was for less than 3½ years of his term. Counting it 3½ years you will see that the increased appropriation was less than $1,250,000. If Governor Comer could miss the truth over $1,600,000, where in the world did he get the f-i-f-t-y t-w-o c-e-n-t-s? He evidently attempts to create the impression that he is very exact when he says $2,893,393.52. Is not this garbling of figures a strong confession on Governor Comer's part of an injustice done the public schools? Was it right to increase the appropriation to the colleges by $160,000 more than was the increase to all the public schools, thereby giving more of an increase for the education of the few boys and girls that leave each county for the colleges than for the education of all the public school children of that entire county?

I am opposed to any further increase in the rate of taxation either direct or indirect. An indirect way to still further increase taxation would be by the discontinuance of assessments at 60 per cent cash value. I favor retaining this 60 per cent protecting clause.

The last complete fiscal year of the Jelks' administration $5,179,521.95 was expended as shown by auditor's report 1906, page 15. The last year of the Comer administration $5,698,432.52 was disbursed (page 10 auditor's report 1910), an increase of 78 per cent in disbursements, 19½ per cent for each year, at the rate of 195 per cent in ten years, while the population increased less than 17 per cent; nearly twelve times as fast as our population increased, and yet the raise in the salaries of the elective officers made during the Comer administration could not become operative until during the O'Neal administration. If six successive administrations were to increase expenses at the same ratio, at the close of the last administration the State's running expenses for a single year would be more than half the cash value of all the property in this entire state.

Governor Comer itemizes his increased expenditures at $7,251,525.07, and says that "the difference between these amounts and the $7,500,000 (which difference is $248,474.93) increased expenditures went in the attempt to secure greater efficiency in the departments." This is a sugar-coated way of referring to increased salaries and increased number of salary drawers. If Governor Comer will refer to page four of the auditor's report of 1907 he will see that his own department, the executive department, and the judicial department, were increased to the extent of $60,000 in just seven months, which is at the rate of $400,000 for four years for only two departments, and there are twelve, the other ten departments showing an increase of almost like amount; and yet Governor Comer attempts to hide nearly a million of dollars going in this way as being a part of $248,474.93. But this money justly belonged to the heroes of the Confederacy, if we are to take seriously the demand of the democratic platform adopted September 10, 1906, when Governor Comer was nominated, which states in clause twenty-seven "recognizing the lasting obligations to the heroes who fought for the south in the dark days of our Civil War, we favor the most liberal appropriations for the support of disabled and infirm Confederate Veterans consistent with the revenues and resources of the State." If there was nearly a million of dollars that was thus diverted from the treasury department for officeholders, there was nearly a million of dollars that belonged to the heroes of the Confederacy, and instead of receiving nothing on each fourth quarter as now, they should at that time be receiving nearly as much as on the other three quarters combined; and yet Governor Comer tells us that he kept every plank in his platform.

The constitution demands that three mills of the six and one-half mills paid to the State be given to the public schools. Governor Comer admits necessary expenditures during his four years seven and one-half million, of which nearly three and a half million, according to this basis for appropriations, should have gone to the public schools. The little children of the State were deprived of nearly a million and a half to which they were entitled according to plank twenty-six, which reads as follows:



"We favor increased facilities for education among all classes of our people, particularly in the rural districts; and to that end we urge the next legislature to make as liberal appropriations for all our schools as the finances of the state will allow." The amount originally appropriated by the legislature was $50,000.00 more annually, which was reduced by Governor Comer's own amendment; he thereby deprived the children of Alabama of $50,000.00 each year for three and one-half years, or $175,000.00 during his term.

Another plank broken was the one against lobbying, when he wote for the cotton mill operators to come to Montgomery to look after their interests when he discovered that there had been framed a law not to his liking. Being the Governor of the State he became our greatest lobbyist. We hear that the governor did just what he told us he would do, that he kept every plank to his platform. How did this impression get out? Why, the former Governor said so, and he started saying so from every platform while Governor, and this kind of misinformation has been circulated by him ever since.

Plank twenty-two had the same faithful consideration. It reads:

"That we favor legislation regulating the employment of child labor in the mines and factories of this State, prohibiting the employment of children of tender years in such mines and factories, and requiring children so employed to attend school for a reasonable time during every year." His most earnest efforts were ably directed toward retaining children of tender years to fatten his own pocket book.

In his Cullman speech under the caption of "five false reports corrected," he says, "Neither did we leave unpaid warrants." He left $394,000 warrants unpaid, according to the State Treasurer's books. He further says, "Neither did we entail heavy debts on the succeeding administration." I refer Governor Comer to the State Auditor's report for 1910, page 11, wherein he will see at the close of the last complete fiscal year during his administration on September 30, 1910, that there was a balance in the treasury of $370,739.34, that there were outstanding claims against this amount of $2,667,796.22, an excess of liabilities over assets of $2,297,056.88, which was the then exact deficit. I refer Governor Comer to his first message to his legislature wherein he shows an accurate knowledge of what liabilities were outstanding against the cash on hand at the close of that fiscal year, showing that he knew exactly how to find the surplus when there was a surplus, but when he changed that surplus to a deficit of $2,297,056.88, his vision opportunely fails, while he becomes as blind as a bat to a deficit, and does not know one from a hole in the ground. In fact, he does not want to know what a deficit is, and he merely contents himself with telling the people that there was $973,000 cash on hand, but fails to tell them of about three million dollars indebtedness against that $973,000. Neither does he state the correct balance in the treasury when he retired which, according to the the Treasurer's report for January 14, 1907, as found on page 214, shows the balance to be $709,520.92. In order to make the amount $973,000, he included the amount in the hands of the fiscal agent in New York, which has never been counted as a part of the daily balance in the treasury, but is placed there to protect the interest on the bonds. As to there being no warrants left unpaid, if Governor Comer will look back to January 12, two days before he retired as Governor, he will find that there was only $355.11 in the treasury as shown on page 214, treasury report for 1911; yet the next day $209,674.23 was paid out. This amount could have never been paid out of $355.11 had it not been for receipts on that day of $808,388.94, nearly all of which came in response to urgent calls made by me as Treasurer upon various tax collectors to remit all that they could ahead of time during the middle of the month that we might take care of four or five hundred thousand dollars in warrants already drawn and outstanding, and which could not have been paid without additional funds.

Railroad Rate Reduction.

Gov. Comer seems ignorant of the fact that while compromising with railroads he approved an arrangement which permitted an advance in the freight rates limited in a law then enjoined by the courts at the instance of the railroads. I refer him to Section 5566 of the Code of 1907, which classified railroads, the first-class railroad being required to carry freight at minimum charge; second class railroad being permitted to charge 20 per cent advance on eighty of the one hundred and ten commodities; third class railroad being permitted to charge 25 per cent on eighty of the one hundred and ten commodities. On page 92 of the Acts of Alabama, 1907, special session, in his compromise with the railroads, you will see that he took the A. G. S. from the first class and made it a third class railroad. You will see from the same act that this permitted an advance of 25 per cent on eighty of the one hundred and ten commodities. The Southern with all its branches, which had been a second class railroad, became a third class railroad, permitting an advance from 20 per cent to 25 per cent on eighty of the one hundred and ten commodities. The M. & O., the Northern Alabama Railway and other railroads, seven in all, were thus permitted to advance rates. Gov. Comer secured a small reduction in passenger rates, but if the intra-state only would be affected, did he not give way more in advance in freight rates than he secured reduction in passenger rates? The law giving us the reduced rates had already been passed and was before the Supreme Court. Comer had agreed to give us Georgia rates, yet the statutory rates made in February, 1907, were above Georgia rates, and when this compromise was effected they were given legal authority to charge still higher. Did Milton H. Smith do this? Gov. Comer says that a compromise is where you give and take, but when he gave more than he took did he not make a bad compromise for the people of Alabama?

Proposition to Comer.

I have referred to only a few samples of the glaring misstatements made by Gov. Comer in his advertised Cullman speech. This speech abounds with statements that are either untrue, half true, or that contain truths so stated as to make false impressions. I wish to here repeat openly to Gov. Comer a proposition that I have previously expressed my willingness to make. If he will allow me to select from his paid campaign advertisements ten of his statements, and if he can prove the accuracy of two of them, I will withdraw from the race, provided he will agree in advance to withdraw should he be unable to make such proof.

In view of the unalterable opposition to the candidacy of Governor Comer on the part of perhaps 30,000 laborers in Alabama, would I not be the stronger of the two when pitted against one local optionist in the run-off? It has always been the policy of the Democratic party to place as its standard bearer nationally that Democrat against whom the least opposition could be found. Had the candidate with a plurality been nominated at the last Democratic National Convention, it would have been Champ Clark instead of that peerless Democrat, Woodrow Wilson. Am I not, therefore, the logical candidate for the prohibitionists if I have less antagonisms? On the other hand, to those who are opposed to Governor Comer would I not be the one to represent them in the run-off because I would have a larger share of the prohibition votes than would Kolb or Henderson. If you have twelve men divided six on a side, a change of two from one side leaves four on that side and eight on the other; a change of two creates a change of four in the next result. Then if I should have 15,000 more of the prohibition votes than would Kolb or Henderson and which would be anti-Comer as long as they were Seed supporters, in the event that I was not in the run-off should they go to Comer would it not make a difference of 30,000 of the net result in favor of Comer? And if later, either Kolb or Henderson should be defeated by Comer by 15,000, could it not then be said that had Seed been in the run-off that he could have won by 15,000?

While treasurer I fathered the depository bill whereby every dollar in the treasury department was secured by Alabama bonds, and enough saved in exchange to defray all expenses and salaries in my department; or about $9,000 annually.

I favor convicts on the roads and better roads. I believe that from the natural increase in wealth the main appropriation should go to the old soldiers, educational institutions, chiefly public schools and promotion of agriculture.

From every angle I ask consideration of my claims, pledging myself onwards an economical administration, the retirement of needless officeholders, better roads, proper recognition of the claims of the old soldiers and agricultural promotion. With these factors, working in harmony, I believe we can save the way for that era of industrial prosperity which should today be ours. If elected governor I shall use every effort in the direction of [illegible]

Prompt Execution of Even One Fly Means Much.

Talking About "Figures That Stagger," the Accompanying Table Shows How Summer Pests Multiply If Left to Breed in Peace.

The day is close at hand when a quiver will go through the world and the little buds will start their shooting and there will come a change over the face of the earth. And on that day the trumpet will sound to rouse from its possumish deadness each and every hibernating fly.

This resurrected troop will this year appear with a flourish as great as ever.

Each little member of the troop will find the schedule of a very, very hard summer's work—to judge the fly world by human standards—awaiting it. The schedule, as printed here, speaks for itself. The New York advance agent for the fly kingdom, who now makes public the duty of each and every patriotic fly for the coming season, is the chairman of the Merchants' association's committee on pollution and sewage. His name by the way is Edward Hatch.

The problem is one of eugenics. Considering the enormity of the task which rests on each fly, no one will argue that a fly which may fall short in performing the duties it owes to its race is worthy of contempt. But the matter of manners is also essential. Because the world is so thickly populated with the race the species has become somewhat hoggish, especially with reference to its meals.

It is a matter of common experience to see the greedy creatures come in from any old occupation and rush right to the table without stopping to wash their hands.

Now, back to Mr. Hatch's statistics. They are figured on the basis of one-half the flies being females, allowing only one crop to each mother fly. That is not quite fair, for six crops is not an uncommon yield. Six crops would by September 28 make each mother of June 1 the some kind of a grandmother of—let's see—27 septillions, 201 sextillions, 388 quintillions, 32 quadrillions—and no need of bothering with the trifling trillions, billions, or millions.

Well done. Now, if one fly occupies a quarter of a cubic inch, how many flies make a cubic foot? Two hundred thousand. Then how much space is occupied by the progeny of one successful fly? About 900,000 cubic miles.

Considering the immense potentiality of each fly that is roused by the trumpet blast at hand and the matter of eugenics already presented, it will be seen that conditions can easily be improved by executing at sight one or two of the creatures.

England's Rural Police.

Although rural policemen in England are paid considerably less than their London colleagues, their lot is by no means an easy one. The village constable rarely finds any crime or disorder within his jurisdiction, but the variety of regulations laid down by the board of agriculture keep him busy. He must see that the carcass of an ox, dead of anthrax or some other dread disease, is properly cremated, and that sheep are marked only with the approved dip. The birds scheduled for protection must next undisturbed, and to any collecting boys the constable is a real terror. He must have an eye for a horse, too, as the war office expects him to keep a return of the number of horses in his district suitable for military service.

LOVE, THE LEVELER

Distinctions of Rank Forgotten by Footman Who Lifted His Eyes to Queen

Gaily the young queen raised her arm and waved across the green to a favorite lady-in-waiting. As she did so, her tinkling bracelets made a little clash of sweet music, and a narrow band of finely wrought gold became unclasped and fell to the ground. The queen tripped on unaware of her loss, but the footman in attendance, a mere lad of eighteen, reached hungrily for the glittering circlet and hastily concealed it beneath his scarlet livery. A few hours later the queen missed her bracelet, but being unjeweled and of no particular value, the incident was soon forgotten.

A day and a night passed, and again the queen discovered a loss—this time a serious one—a crown jewel! After vain inquiry the king quietly ordered the royal household searched, and Franz, the young footman, was unaware of the order until the searchers were upon him. Instantly a pallor overspread his features, at sight of which one of the searchers gave a laugh of triumph. "I think we have the thief, my friends," he said to his companions. Hastily the coat was torn from the boy's now resisting shoulders, and the burly searcher, thrusting his hand into the lad's shirt, gave an exultant cry and drew forth the bracelet. "The queen's!" they cried in unison.

No trace, however, of the crown jewel could be found. But feeling sure that Franz knew its whereabouts, in view of the trinket found upon him, he was taken before the king. Fiercely the lad denied any knowledge of the jewel, but about the bracelet his lips remained closed even to his sovereign. Then all eyes turned to the entrance of the room. The queen stood in the doorway.

Slowly she came forward. "Sire, may I ask to be alone with Franz?" she said. And when the boy looked up again there was no one but the queen and himself in the vast room, and the queen's eyes were sad. Franz had been a favorite.

As though goaded beyond endurance, the boy threw himself at her feet, crying out his innocence. "But the bracelet, Franz, the bracelet," said the queen sadly. "You know it was mine and yet—"

The queen was loath to complete the sentence, and a brief silence filled the room. And from the stillness the youth seemed to gather strength, for when he again met the queen's eyes his own were aglow with an inner fire, and his soul looked forth unconscious of class or station—naked and unafraid. "Yes, my queen," he said reverently, "it was next my heart. I kept it there because it once had touched your dear arm—because I love you. I could not bear to give it back—to part with it."

Swift anger filled the heart of the queen at this presumption of a menial. The boy, seeing it was so, kissed the hem of her garment, the light and eagerness of martyrdom upon his face.

Punishment at her hand? Ah, that were ecstasy!

As in a dream the boy felt the queen's light fingers on his hair and heard the tremor in her voice. "Thou shalt still attend me, Franz. The bracelet is thine—a gift from me. May it bring thee—happiness."

And when the searchers returned she said sternly: "The boy stole not the jewel. Search further."—Janet Reese in Philadelphia North American.

Lawsuit Over a Sneeze.

The Green Bag tells of a lawsuit over a sneeze in which in this instance $200 constituted the legal penalty of a sneeze—to be paid not by the sneezer but by the sneezee. The suit was brought by an employe of the Army and Navy Co-operative stores, Westminster, against the superintendent of the drapery department, in which the plaintiff worked, and was tried before an English county judge and a jury. The plaintiff was taking inventory late one night, when he had to sneeze because, as he alleged, he had a cold in the head. The defendant reprimanded the plaintiff for the noise he made and said if he had to sneeze again he must go outside and do it. Shortly afterward the plaintiff put on his hat and coat and announced that he was "going out to sneeze." The defendant told him if he went out he would have to stay out, but the plaintiff went out, had his sneeze and returned. When he got back the defendant took him by the collar and hustled him down two or three flights of a circular staircase, and he sued for the injuries he received while descending. The jury gave a verdict of $200.

The youngster had never seen a black man before and, eyeing the man with wonder, asked his father: 'Father, who painted that man all black?'

"'God did it,' promptly replied the father.

WASHINGTON TO GET THE CONSTELLATION

The U. S. S. Constellation, the second ship built by the United States ay, will probably be taken to Washington and anchored in the tidal basin Potomac park near the statue of Admiral John Paul Jones, where it will e seen by the thousands of tourists who swarm to the national capital. Rear dmiral Victor Blue started the movement to bring the historic old fighting raft from Newport, and the house naval affairs committee reported on it vorably. The white oak sides of the old vessel hold the lead of the French, ith whom she grappled in 1798; of the pirates she fought in the Tripolitan ar, of the British gunboats in 1812 and of the fighting craft of the Confederacy.

BOY SCOUTS' ORGANIZATION OF UNITED STATES IS ONLY FOUR YEARS OLD

American Who Was Lost in British Capital Strongly Impressed With Idea as Conveyed to Him by Youngster Who Rendered Him a Service—Possibilities of the Plan Appealed to Western Man and He Introduced It at Home.

New York.—Somewhat more than four years ago an American man found himself lost in the streets of London one night. He was going to dine at a private home in a quiet neighborhood and when a thick fog settled down he became confused, wandered this way and that and finally stood still on the pavement wondering what to do next. Then he saw some one coming toward him carrying a lantern. Nearer and nearer came the light and soon the American perceived that it was borne by a lad wearing a uniform, who stopped, saluted, and said:

"I beg your pardon, sir, but can I be of service to you?"

"Indeed you can!" the American exclaimed and quickly explained his plight.

"That's all right, sir," the lad responded. "If you will step this way I'll show you where you want to go. It's only a short distance."

The American thanked his young guide heartily and arriving at his destination tried to pay him for the trouble he had taken. But the lad declined.

"Much obliged, sir," he said, "but I can't take money for doing a good turn. That's what I am out for this foggy evening."

"How do you mean?" asked the American, instantly interested and forgetful of idiom.

"Why," the little fellow replied, "it's one of my duties—all Boy Scouts have to do a good turn to somebody every day. If they don't they fail to keep the scout's oath and have to quit."

The American forgot his dinner invitation and all else for the next few minutes, for at once he grasped something of the possibilities latent in the idea of bringing up thousands of boys to perform some good turn, day after day, during their most impressionable years. What might logically happen as a result of this cumulative habit on the part of forty or fifty thousand lads in one country almost stunned him.

He fired question after question at the little chap in uniform, who stood there, lantern in hand, that drizzling, foggy night. He learned that a scout's first duty is forgetfulness of self and service to others, especially in time of danger. He learned that the corner stone was truth and honor, loyalty to God, to family, country and all placed in authority; that a scout learns how to drive out evil thoughts and desires by systematic exercise which hardens his muscles, by cool baths, by proper food and suitable clothing, and, especially by keeping his mind occupied by doing things that are interesting as well as being what older folks call worth while. And finally the American learned that at the head of this wonderful organization of English boys was Gen. Sir Robert Baden-Powell.

The American went in to dinner; his young guide saluted and went on his way. Next day the American sought Gen. Baden-Powell, and before long had so absorbed the spirit of the scout movement that he hastened home full of the idea of organizing a corresponding movement for American lads. And that is how the Boy Scouts of America came to be started.

Since the time when it was placed on a permanent footing, just four years ago, the Boy Scouts of America have grown by leaps and bounds. Today there are more than 300,000 scouts in the whole country, but only 7,000 scout masters, and the need for more men to help develop and guide boy life is growing keener month by month.

The activities of the scouts are most varied and comprehensive. Work in gymnasiums, hikes in the country, experience in building shelters in the woods, lighting fires with one match and without any match at all, cooking plain food, finding edible roots, berries, etc., when food supplies are lacking; instruction in swimming, diving, lifesaving, resuscitation of persons apparently drowned, fighting fires, rescuing persons from burning buildings filled with smoke and flames, skating, snowshoeing, building temporary bridges, cleaning up dirty neighborhoods, exterminating flies, abolishing mosquito pests, all the principal forms of first aid to the injured, stopping runaways, handling small boats in heavy seas, carrying messages with utmost accuracy across short or long stretches of city or country, running, jumping, guarding game and fish, training dogs and horses, setting up and working wireless apparatus in town or open country—these are only a few of the many features which enter into scout work. And at the basis of all is that single principle of self-control and service for others which includes rigidly the rule of "one good turn every day."

In Massachusetts, Boy Scouts are now making a census of trees, describing the species, size, growth and location, so a record may be compiled by the forestry commission. In several states they act as deputy game and fish wardens. In other localities they are regularly enlisted as aids of the official fire wardens of great forest tracts. In city after city, especially in the middle west, they have carried out campaigns of cleaning up neighborhoods.

Philadelphia has enlisted the cooperation of Boy Scouts in protecting the city squares and parks. William H. Ball, chief of the bureau of public property, declares that they can do far more than regular attendants in preventing other lads who are thoughtless from destroying shrubbery and damaging fine trees.

Governor Deneen of Illinois enlisted the services of Boy Scouts in helping the public safety commission of Chicago and Cook county. The job of the scouts is especially to help other children understand and avoid dangers in the streets; to guide very little folks across crowded highways and show them how to keep their heads when unexpectedly caught in a maze of vehicles. Each of these scouts had been furnished with a safety commission button, so that other children—and adults, too—have no hesitation in calling on them for assistance and advice.

Scouts of Texarkana, Ark., have been kind to a woman who was in great need after the death of her husband. In all probability she thanked the boys, but she also wrote a letter to headquarters, in which she told of the material help the lads gave her when she was without means of support and how their cheerfulness and brightness gave her more courage than anything else.

The list of rescues of drowning persons saved by scouts is a long one, and the instances come from almost every part of the country.

One of the most widespread duties rendered by scouts last year was in connection with the county fairs held at various places throughout the country. At fair after fair, where country people gathered by thousands, alert little fellows wearing scout uniforms acted as guides, cared for persons overcome by the heat, found lost children and restored them to distracted parents and in other ways showed that they could do things worth while.

Embargo on Plumas Makes Big Out-of-Work Army.

United States Ban on Millinery Feathers Throws Thousands of Workers Out of Employment in France—Royal Exiles May Return.

Paris.—Because the women of the United States are no longer permitted to wear aigrettes, paradise feathers and certain other plumes of wild birds on their hats, M. Bordeau, president of the Syndicate of Plume Manufacturers here, assets that 50,000 feather workers are menaced by want and that 100,000 workmen are threatened with the loss of their jobs.

The plume manufacturers have taken the matter up with the French government on the ground that, in forbidding the importation of certain plumes, the United States violated the rulings of the commercial treaty existing between America and France.

A committee composed of the presidents of the various local plume manufacturers' syndicates has already called upon President Raymond Poincare, placing the matter before him. The same committee also waited upon the minister of commerce, submitting to him certain documents which, they claimed, proved their case.

Disinterested officials here, however, do not hold out much encouragement to the plume workers, because they say the measure adopted in the United States was not aimed at France, or any other country, but was primarily intended as a humanitarian measure protecting animals and birds now in danger of extinction.

"A little child shall lead them," the good book says, and if the fight now begun to permit French pretenders to the throne to return to this country bears fruit, it will be largely the result of the existence, if not the efforts, of the month-old boy, Napoleon Louis, son of Prince Victor Napoleon, imperialist aspirant to the French crown.

In 1886 France passed a law banishing from the country forever all heads of families once reigning in France, together with their direct descendants. Their presence in the fatherland was deemed perilous to the existence of the republic.

The Duc d'Orleans, royalist pretender, is now an exile in Brussels, in which city also is Prince Victor Napoleon, the imperialist "hope." Both men have repeatedly professed their undying devotion to France, and both have sworn never to molest the home government, and, indeed, never to accept even the throne unless called upon to do so by the people themselves.

Their proclamations have had no effect. Recently, figuratively speaking, they have shed tears of longing at the frontiers of France to the north, east, south, west. Still nobody invited them to come in. Then now their there is a pain and aching heart, a collateral descendant of Napoleon, most famous one an exile from France, because of

DOUBT OLD ADAGE

Do Early Risers Become Healthy, Wealthy and Wise?

Comparison Between the Agricultural Laborer and the Man Engaged in Legislation by Writer in London Publication.

London.—It almost seems as if there ought to be a society to protect us from the effect of the old adages. Most of us, for instance, have been taught that:

Early to bed and early to rise,
Makes a man healthy, wealthy and wise.

But is this really true nowadays? In times gone by, when artificial light had not been invented—or was too costly for general use—it is easy to understand that those people who got up at sunrise made the best bargain, because they got their lighting practically free of charge.

Besides, this adage, like many others of its kind, was born amid agricultural communities, where economy of daylight is and must always be one of the secrets of making money.

Nowadays, however, Arnold Goldsworthy writes in London Answers, most people live and work in towns, and their work is often done—sometimes necessarily done—by artificial light. It does not make any difference to your wages whether your work is done by daylight or by the glare of a jet of gas. Therefore, unless you are engaged in the agricultural business, early rising will certainly not make you any wealthier.

Will it make you any healthier? It is doubtful. Most people have an idea that they ought to get up early in the morning. Nevertheless, they very rarely do it.

It may be that it is more natural to rise with the lark, but we have been living on an artificial system for so many generations now that our constitutions are getting used to the change. Who are the people who get up early in the morning nowadays? Do they represent the "wealthy and wise" of the population? Hardly.

The early risers are usually the "hands" who have to be at their job early in the morning. Wealthy people do not as a rule commence business before ten o'clock in the morning; and if they had to be up early in order to be wealthy, half the big offices in the city would be poverty stricken tomorrow.

Then, does early rising really make people "wise"? Probably the earliest risers in the country are the agricultural laborers; but we do not usually hold this estimable class of men up as samples of our national wisdom. On the other hand, some of the keenest intellects of our times are to be found among our legislators, who begin business about noon, and are rarely able to get to bed till the small hours of the morning.

Of course, if you have to get up early in the morning because your business compels you do so, it is no use arguing about the matter. But if you have the option of that extra hour's rest you need not get the idea into your head that it is a crime to yield to the very pleasant instinct for a little more sleep.

After all, nature is not a bad guide when she talks to us individually. It may be very brave and Spartanlike to spring out of bed at five in the morning. But because that is what your grandpa used to do, it doesn't follow that it is going to do your nervous system any good as the years roll by.

SHRAPNEL A FLYING CANNON

It Must Withstand a Pressure of 35,000 Pounds to the Square Inch.

New York.—The shrapnel is really a flying cannon which shoots its charge while in flight or explodes on impact, says the American Machinist. Its design involves many interesting features, as the case must be strong enough to withstand the bursting pressure and the stresses developed in firing. The smaller cases are now made from bar stock on automatic turret machines at less than the cost of the forgings previously used.

The design and making of a shrapnel case has more behind it than appears on the surface for, in addition to being a piece of steel turned and bored to the right dimensions, it must have special mechanical properties.

It must be able to withstand a pressure of from thirty to thirty-five thousand pounds per square inch from the powder which drives it out of the gun, though it is tested to 40,000 pounds. In addition to this it must resist the charge of explosive in the base of the case; this base charge drives the head and balls out of the case, when a time or distance fuse is used, or explodes it on impact with the earth or any other resisting substance.

This expelling or bursting charge exerts a pressure varying from twenty to twenty-five thousand pounds per square inch. Further than this, the tensional stress when the case is started whirling through the rifling of the gun by the force behind it must be counted. This rotation starts the instant the shell begins its movement from the breech of the gun, and when we consider that by the time it leaves the muzzle it must have attained a velocity of 1,700 feet per second we can begin to see how an acceleration of 500,000 feet per second is attained.

These pressures explain why it is necessary to make the cases of such high quality material, a tensile strength of 135,000 pounds to the square inch, an elastic limit of 110,000 pounds per square inch, an elongation in two inches of 11 per cent., and the contraction of area 25 per cent.

845 CHINESE STUDENTS HERE

New York Leads, With 149, With California Second and Illinois Third.

Ithaca, N. Y.—Eight hundred and forty-five Chinese students are attending educational institutions in the United States, according to statistics published in the Chinese Students' Monthly for February. Of these 45 are registered in Cornell university, which ranks third among the larger schools of the nation in regard to the number enrolled. Columbia has more than 70, the most that any single college can claim. They are nearly all graduate students, however, while those of Cornell are principally undergraduates and very active in university life. Of the total number 149 are studying in New York state, which leads all others in the number of undergraduates. California runs a close second with 145. Illinois has 108, while the rest are scattered throughout 25 other states.

Of the first five courses, in which the largest number of Chinese students are enrolled, four deal with engineering. Civil engineering leads with 42, mining 40 and electrical engineering 39. Following these in order are Economics, 35; chemistry, 31; medicine, 30; education, 27; commerce, 22; politics, 21; naval architecture, 15; law, 13; textile manufacturing, 4; railway administration, 3; physics, 3; army, 3; navy, 1.

LIBELED BY TALKING HORSE

German Spinster Picked Out by Animal as Woman Most in Love Sues Circus.

Berlin.—Butzow, in Mecklenburg, has the distinction of being the first town where an inhabitant has been libeled by a talking horse. Recently a talking horse connected with a traveling circus was instructed by its trainer to select from the audience the woman who was most in love. The intelligent animal sought out an elderly spinster who was present with her fiance, whereat shouts of laughter arose from the audience.

Finally, the fiance, losing his temper, drew a revolver and fired a shot, which he merely intended to frighten the jesters. The bullet struck and slightly wounded a married woman who was some distance off. The victim now claims damages for assault, while the spinster sues the circus proprietor for the insult perpetrated by the talking horse.

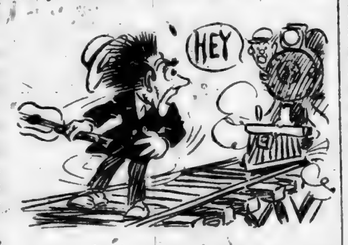
STORIES from the BIG CITIES

Flying Hat Chased by Maiden and Many Men

NEW YORK.—There was a short but exciting chase in Times Square late the other afternoon when the homegoing matinee crowd filled the street. The victim of the prank of the wind was a tall, slender young woman who wore a slit skirt and carried a huge muff. Her hat was one of the latest effects in straw. It resembled an inverted soup plate, and was trimmed with a black lace ruffle and a single feather.



She was crossing the street going toward the subway entrance when a particularly spiteful gust of wind caught the hat, lifted it from her head, and sent it straight up into the air. A young man started to the rescue. He followed the erratic course of the hat with his face turned skyward. So did the owner of the hat. They met in a space between two snow piles in the street, and the young woman was almost knocked down.

Four more men and an elderly woman took up the rescue work while the youth was apologizing to the maiden. All this time the hat refused to come down. It would go soaring 50 feet up and then drop down, only to be caught again and sent upward. The owner of the hat grew very excited, and started on the chase after the collision, waving her great muff above her head. More men, all young ones, became interested in the pursuit of the runaway hat. Its course lay in a northerly direction, and the pursuers plodded gallantly through the snow in the street.

Half a hundred persons gathered along the curb, and several newsboys joined the chase. The hat, after performing spirals and other things in the air, finally came to the ground in a snowbank. Half the pursuers tried to capture it at the same time, but it was a newsboy who got possession of it. His reward was a smile.

Sacrifices Beloved Guitar and Saves His Life

ST. LOUIS, MO.—"Music hath charms to soothe the savage breast," perhaps but it didn't help much to slacken the speed of a freight train which bore down upon Herman Oexner of Belleville as he walked across a long trestle on the Louisville & Nashville railroad early the other day.

Oexner had been attending a dance and was on his way home between midnight and dawn. His only companion was a much-beloved guitar.

To lessen the loneliness of the walk he played, and as he played he sang, losing consciousness of all about him, and no doubt having dreams the while of some fair Juliet upon a balcony listening to his strains.

So engrossed was he in his music that he was well onto the trestle before he heard a noise in the rear, and, gazing back, saw the train. His muse was either not shifty enough or too fickle to offer advice in so urgent a case. She had temporarily departed, and for the moment the instinct of self-preservation was uppermost.

The beloved instrument was sacrificed, Oexner permitting it to drop over the edge of the trestle as he scrambled to safety on the end of a tie just as the train breezed past.

The danger over, he set about to discover the remains of his tried friend. He found it, 50 feet beneath, shattered against a rail of the Southern railroad tracks.

It had picked a hard spot on which to settle, and had poured out its last music in one dismal crash.

As Hard to Negotiate as a "Slide for Life"

INDIANAPOLIS, IND.—The crossing at Pennsylvania and Washington streets was a slide for life as interesting to negotiate as the greased pole at a county fair. But this brother was of different ilk. He wore a pair of spats on big tan shoes, surmounted by a foot of gray striped trouser legs before the tailored edge of his fur collared overcoat shut off the view of the stripes. A roll brimmed, quarter bow derby kept in the aroma of bay rum that held the sandy hair in plastered perfection, and curves as proper as the curved handle of his hickory-rough walking stick. His companion was human.

"Entirely unnecessary, entirely so. If persons watched their footing and stopped walking about like chickens they would not fall in the street in this foolish way. To be sure it is extremely slippery, but falling is only a demonstration that they have not proper control of their equilibrium. Nothing but a matter of care, I say, nothing mo——"

Slisch-ch, plopp—splatter, and the immaculate was down in the center of the North Pennsylvania street car track and about two inches of melting snow. Pride had gone before the fall and the slippery car rail had lacked the politeness of the friend in not opposing his opinion. But the friend was human.

"As you were saying," he remarked, as he helped his friend to his feet, trying to overlook the fall—but the immaculate one only glared.

Dogs Are Always Dogs Even When One Is Bogus

CHICAGO.—Through the window of Karl Kahmann's shop at 2457 Lincoln avenue, a handsome, big-muscled bulldog gazed out the other night on passing traffic, calm and supercilious. He held his head at a haughty angle and the most exciting happenings on sidewalk and pavement did not stir him to the visible extent of a fraction of a wag of his fraction of a tail.

Presently came another bulldog of more active nature, willing to be friend and play or to be an enemy and fight. This second bulldog stopped in front of the window and wagged his tail tentatively. There was no answering wag. He growled. There came no answering growl.

Not even by a glance or a showing of teeth did the insolent, self-centered window dog recognize the existence of his canine brother in the street. It was a dead cut. Plate glass three-eighths of an inch thick stood between them, but the street dog forgot that in his wrath. He leaped at the throat of the offender. The glass crashed. Cut now, physically as well as socially, the street dog closed in. The window dog tumbled over on his side with a hollow thud. The street dog, tearing at his throat, choked on a mouthful of sawdust. He had not been supercilious after all—only stuffed.

The belligerent street dog, after a casual survey of the damage which he had wrought, and smarting with pain from the cuts made by the shattered plate glass window, tucked his tail between his legs and made a dash for the street and safety. The proprietor of the establishment, on hearing the great noise made by the fierce attack, rushed to the front of the store just in time to see the surprised and frightened street dog rapidly disappear around a neighboring street corner. He therefore made no attempt at pursuit.

Kahmann, who is a taxidermist, is in need not only of a new show window but of a new window dog. He says he will make one out of the street dog if he catches him.

DIMINUTION OF SHEEP

DECLINE OF 3.4 PER CENT FROM 1913 IS NOTED.

Has Many Distinct Advantages as Farm Animal—Much More Economical to Feed Than Steer—Leads as Meat-Food.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

A heavy decline in the number of sheep has taken place since 1910, according to the department of agriculture. In that year the number on farms as ascertained by the census was 52,448,000; the estimate for January 1, 1914, is 49,719,000, a decline of 3.4 per cent from 1913 and of 5.2 per cent from 1910.

Among the causes that have contributed to the diminution of number of sheep is the scarcity of labor required for their care, the high prices of sheep and lambs for slaughter, the displacement of sheep by expanding dairying, deficient pasturage and forage on account of drought, destruction by dogs, the settlement of range land previously occupied by sheep, and the low price of wool; also the increasing value of land.

The estimates of the department for the number of sheep on farms in the United States on January 1, 1914, show a decided decrease as compared with 1913, according to the department of Agriculture. The apparent tendency toward a decline in the number of sheep on farms has been noted for some time and has caused sheep raising on farms to be referred to as a waning industry. A word here concerning the economy of sheep and their place in agricultural practice may not be out of place.

As a farm animal per se, the sheep has many distinct advantages. The sheep is a much more economical animal to feed than the steer, returning a larger amount of gain per 100 pounds of feed eaten. When his capacity to consume roughage is considered, he is more economical than the hog. The sheep yields a double return—meat at an economical cost, and wool as a by-product—which will go far toward defraying the cost of keep. Sheep are prolific. A farm flock which does not yield at least 100 per cent increase is very poor indeed. A flock of sheep on a farm will, in time, clear it of weeds, without expense to the owner, if allowed to range the lanes, the stubble fields after grain is cut, and the cornfields after the corn is full grown. As a scavenger, even a goat is not more useful than a sheep.

As meat-food animals sheep have never been sufficiently appreciated in the United States. They are, however, of very great value. They must be classed with hogs and poultry as the most available animals to supply meat for home use on the average farm. They are readily slaughtered, the meat can be kept without difficulty, it cuts up without waste in sizes which are convenient for the average family, and the meat is nutritious, wholesome and palatable when properly cooked. The healthfulness of the sheep alone gives it front rank as a meat-food animal. Sheep rarely have tuberculosis or other diseases communicable to man.

The foregoing statements are axiomatic. If the sheep industry is so inviting, why do the farmers seem to be showing a tendency to curtail sheep raising? There are probably three principal causes.

First — Intestinal parasites, principally stomach worms, cause serious losses in farm flocks over the whole country, and almost entire lamb crops are sometimes exterminated. In no farming sections are sheep free from this danger, and no breed of sheep is immune, although some breeds—the Merinos, for example—are less susceptible than others. No infallible cure for stomach worms is known, but it is possible to control them economically by keeping the lambs away from the ewes except when nursing, and by a system of pasture rotation. Unless a farmer is willing to take precautions in the management of the flock he should not raise sheep.

Second—Our dogs are almost as great a hindrance to the sheep industry as parasites. The only protection against them is to keep the flock during the day where it can be watched and to put it into a dog-proof inclosure at night. An authentic case has recently been reported from Michigan where a flock of more than 200 head were all run to death in one night by two cur dogs. Dog-tight night folds can be built of woven wire at small expense.

Third—Farmers have not generally recognized the proper place of the sheep in agriculture in the settled regions. Too much importance is placed on wool. Except on the range where land is cheap, the wool should be regarded as an incidental—a side line to help defray the cost of handling. Raising sheep for wool alone does not pay on farms, and the attempts of farmers to make it pay is undoubtedly largely responsible for the prevailing opinion that sheep are not profitable on expensive land. Sheep are raised in England on some of the most expensive land in the kingdom, but they are raised as meat animals and not as wool producers; the wool is a by-product, as it should be in farm flocks.

If only 25 per cent of the farms on which there are now no sheep should have a flock of not over 25 or 30 ewes, managed with reasonable care and protected against dogs, not only would farm revenues be materially increased but a decided step in advance would be taken toward the solution of our meat supply problem.

Decline of Hogs on the Farm.

Although the estimated number of swine on farms January 1, 1914, 48,933,000, was 1.3 per cent more than the census number for 1910, the decline from 1913 was 3.7 per cent. This decline is partly accounted for by the extensive prevalence of hog cholera, by high-priced corn, by the deficient production of 1913 because of a severe long-continued and extensive drought and because of the high prices of swine for slaughter. Notwithstanding the high price of hogs for slaughter, farmers found that they could not profitably feed the high-priced corn. At the same time, the price of hogs per hundred pounds was high relatively, although not as high as corn. In this situation hogs were often sent to market undersized.

The average size of hogs on the farm January 1, has never been directly ascertained, but it may be computed from the average price per head divided by the average price per hundred pounds, as ascertained by this bureau. As a result of this operation, the average weight of a hog on the farm January 1, 1914, was 145 pounds; in 1913 it was 144 pounds, in 1912 140 pounds; and in 1911, 131 pounds. The marketing of low-weight hogs which has been frequently commented upon in live-stock and commercial papers during the last three years, is apparent in the foregoing average weights, which are apparently high because the lighter hogs have been sold off.

The average value of swine on farms per head January 1, 1914, was $10.40, or 5.5 per cent above the average value of January 1, 1913, and 13.4 per cent above that of 1910. In consequence of the increased value of swine per head, the total value of all swine on farms is estimated at $612,951,000, or a gain of 1.6 per cent over 1913 and 14.9 per cent over 1910. The diminution of swine January 1, 1914, was more than counterbalanced by the increased price per head of those that were on hand.

SILO IN A SHELTERED PLACE

Much of Trouble and Loss Caused by Freezing Can Be Prevented by Exercising Little Care.

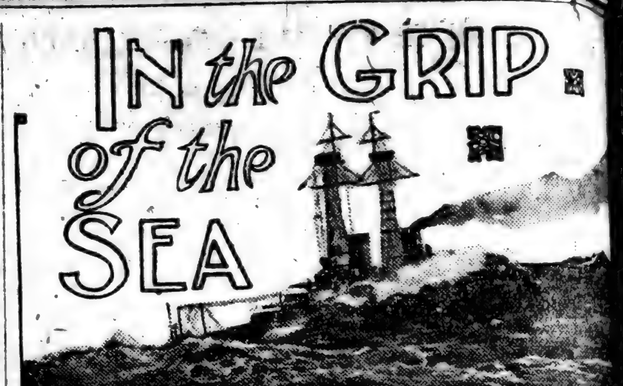
(By A. D. WILSON, Director of Agricultural Extension Division and Farmers' Institute, University Farm, St. Paul, Minn.)

None of the types of silos put upon the market so far will keep silage in this latitude without more or less freezing taking place during the winter months, although those having air spaces in the walls seem to freeze somewhat less than the type having solid walls.

Experience has shown, however, that freezing can be kept within reasonable limits in silos of any common type by the exercise of a little extra care. A good tight roof should be provided and the doors should be kept closed as much as possible to prevent circulation of air above the silage and to keep in the heat generated by the silage.

In using, it is important to keep the surface of the silage level or even a trifle high in the middle, not allowing a hole to form in the center, as is sometimes done when silage begins to freeze around the edges. We have never had any bad results from feeding frozen silage, but it will not keep long after thawing out.

Since most of the freezing is due to cold air above the silage, it is possible to afford considerable protection by keeping the surface covered with hay or straw, or better still, a blanket or canvas.



If in addition to these precautions it is convenient to build the silo in a sheltered place, there should be little loss or trouble from freezing.

Stable Manure.

It is a well-known fact that no system of crop rotation will restore to the soil the potash and phosphoric acid removed by crops. Unless these elements that are removed be returned in some manner, the soil will inevitably become too poor for an ambitious man to cultivate. Common stable manure is conceded to be one of the best fertilizers for general purposes, and it is to be deplored that much of this valuable plant food is dumped away as so much trash, or exposed to the leaching rains, even when intended for use. If it can make poor soil rich it can certainly maintain the fertility of rich soil. It is not insisted that the use of it would be advisable in all cases, since the fertility of the soil and the crop to be raised should be the governing factors, but it is safe to assert that all stable manure can advantageously be used in any general farming community.

IN the GRIP of the SEA

DREADNAUGHT DELAWARE IN RAGING SEA

IT WAS on the bark on which I served my apprenticeship, and we were homeward bound, says a writer in Cassell's Saturday Journal. We had swept up past the foam girt Azores and we were saying that five more days would raise the Lizard light.

As we plunged farther north the breeze freshened and grew until it seemed as though the very powers of the air were conspiring together to waft us onward at our best pace.

Still the gale increased and when at length we breasted the waters of the Bay of Biscay we found it arrayed in all its grim majesty to greet us. As far as our salt filled eyes could see there was nothing save a heaving waste of darkling, greenish-gray water, whipped across by flying sheets of solid spindrift, that ever and anon was lifted in the arms of the storm and flung aboard us in chilling wreaths. Before we could spit out the salt from our mouths the great, green combers rolled sullenly up, the low side of the vessel heeled to meet them and then, rising as a heavy squall struck down upon her, hove aboard a few hundred tons of the Atlantic ocean in one solid mass that filled the deck waist high.

So the night fell, and men looked one another in the face, and perhaps for the first time fear dawned in the eyes of some. The captain hung grimly to the weather shrouds of the mizzen and peered with staring eyes through the vibrating gloom at the overwrought main topgallant sail on which our very safety depended. It was an old sail, for we had not had time to bend the heavy weather canvas properly before these vigorous gales had commenced, and this sail was only the fine weather sheet we carried through the tropics. If that sail split, they said, nothing could save the ship. There would be one hunted heap as a sea caught her up astern, a wild swirling of down dragging water and then—the inevitable end.

Ship on Her Beam Ends.

Though the night was black with the blackness of the grave, there was a sort of ghostly sheen given off from the spray that showed us occasionally how the ship was behaving. Throughout that voyage we had bestowed every anathema in our vocabulary on the craft for her unkindliness, for she was loaded deep with niter, and was as buoyant as an iron bridge. Now she hove her streaming bows high in the air, while her squattering stern sunk down as though it would never rise again. Again, with a swoosh and a sullen roar, she buried her sharp bowsprit to the knightheads and far beyond, while the solid sea climbed up the slope of her decks to the very main hatch. The stern waggled drunkenly against the black gray sky, and we who lay there, with blinded eyes and grasping hands, hung madly to any rope that drifted our way, for dear life.

It seemed impossible that the sky could hold more potent powers than those that were now thundering about us, and yet, as long minute dragged itself away after long minute, the wind gained a velocity that was tremendous. It was more than a hurricane; it was a typhoon, a pampero, a black norther, all welded into one awful whole.

On the stroke of midnight a squall flared upon us with such a whistling velocity that, though we were lying at length on the poopdeck, we were blown like feathers hard against the lee rail. The breath was knocked completely out of our bodies and we said the end was come. The ship was thrown flat on her beam ends. She lurched wildly and a long groan from every straining plate rose above that fiendish din of the storm. A sharp cracking aloft told of something amiss, and when the next lightning flash sizzled overhead we sent our eyes to the main topgallant sail with one accord. But it still held. A dull rumbling crash forward told us where the damage was done; there was the thunder of falling spars and the fore topgallant mast went by the board.

And then, when the squall was at its height, the wind shifted like a flash. It had blown hard from the southwest; it now blew harder from the northwest. We thought no wind could blow so ferociously, but the force of the preceding breeze was as a maiden's sigh compared with what followed. By the light of the binnacle we could see the helmsman and the captain, together with both mates, laboring hard to get the helm up and the ship away before the shifted wind. Their faces gleamed ghastly and we could hear the panting of their breathing where we lay helpless; that shift of wind was just what required to right the ship. She herself with a glorious motion shook herself like a duck; then, wind caught her full astern, sprang forward like an arrow bow.

At half past two the weather man almost fainted at his post had been kept up to his copious doses of grog, but the was too severe to be kept up. next best man in the ship took spokes, the helmsman let go and a second the ship went on as But not, for long. Another, the sweat drops of fear shining forehead, jumped on the table thrust up the skylight in the Immediately the place was half with water. The lamp went out the horrible sound of swishing filled our ears.

An Awful Plunge Into the Deep.

Why dwell on every detail of awful night? Suffice it that the helmsman was sent back to the at once, that his skill made on cape possible, and that after seemed like long years had the chill dawn broke, and showed our plight in all its gruesom Not a thing remained about the save those solid structures that built into the fabric's hull. Every we carried had disappeared, been smashed into splitwood and carried over side.

As we raced through the gray a large bark appeared in sight We ranged toward her, and drew near the red ensign stood it was union down—the signal of tress.

We could not even lift a hand ward her salvation! We had boat that would float, and if we had all the boats of a liner they would not have floated a second in that ing fury of the wind lashed sea. passed on, and a low groan burst a score of throats. That age and experience as a count for more than youth and siasm is a theme sustained vigor by the editor of the American chinist. To illustrate his poi cites the following experience:

EXPERIMENTS OF AUBURN EXPERTS

BULLETINS SHOW NEED OF SOILS IN NORTH AND SOUTH ALABAMA FOR COTTON

NITRATE OF SODA NEEDED

Bulletin 175 Records Results of Thirty-two Experiments With Cotton.

Auburn.—Under the direction of Prof. J. F. Duggar, the Department of Agriculture has recently completed and is now sending out bulletins numbers 174 and 175, published on the results of fertilizer experiments with cotton in South and North Alabama.

These bulletins show the following general results for the State:

Bulletin No. 174 records the results of fertilizer experiments with cotton in South Alabama in 1913. In ten out of 33 experiments, cotton seed meal was more effective than either acid phosphate or kainit. In four experiments, phosphate was more effective than kainit; in five it was about equally as important as kainit, and in six tests it was less effective than kainit, though needed to a greater or less extent.

In eleven experiments kainit was more important than phosphate, and in five instances it was about equally effective as phosphate; that is, in 70 per cent of these experiments, kainit was needed to a greater or less extent.

The average conclusive experiments for the last two years show that 200 pounds of cotton seed meal applied before planting was practically equal in effect to 100 pounds of nitrate of soda applied after the plants were six inches high.

Bulletin No. 175 records the results of 32 experiments with cotton conducted in North Alabama in 1913. Of these 21 are regarded as conclusive. In 17 of these experiments, cotton seed meal was needed and was profitable. In 12 experiments phosphate was more effective than kainit; in three it was about equally as important as kainit, and in two tests it was less effective than kainit, though needed; thus in 81 per cent of these experiments acid phosphate was needed to a greater or less extent. In two experiments kainit was more important than phosphate, and in three cases it was about equally as effective as phosphate, and in 11 instances kainit, though needed, was less effective than phosphate; that is, in 76 per cent of these experiments, kainit was needed to a greater or less extent.

In the general average it was more effective and more profitable in all the most three years to apply 100 pounds of kainit in a complete fertilizer than to use 200 pounds of kainit.

The average of conclusive experiments shows that in 1913 for North Alabama 100 pounds of nitrate of soda applied after the plants were six inches high was more effective and profitable than was 200 pounds of cotton seed meal applied before planting.

MONUMENT TO CONFEDERATES.

Boulder is Being Put in Place on Campus At University.

University.—The boulder commemorating the patriotism and valor of the University students and alumni who fought in the ranks of the Confederates during the War Between the States and of the cadet battalion which resisted Croxton's raiders in their attack on Tuscaloosa until forced to retreat in the face of overwhelming odds, is now being put in place on the campus.

The monument will be set on the site of the old rotunda destroyed by the raiders, near the center of the campus. The grass plot in which it will be set is to be inclosed in curbing, and the main driveway through the campus will divide and pass on either side of it.

The monument is the gift of the Alabama Division of the United Daughters of the Confederacy. It will be unveiled with appropriate ceremonies on May 18.

ONE MILL TAX FOR SCHOOLS.

Believed Measure Will Pass At Election To Be Called.

Troy.—The one mil tax for the public schools of Pike county seems to be practically assured. A petition signed by the requisite number of voters has been presented to the commissioners' court. The court will either order a special election some time in May or submit the question at the regular election in November.

—Montgomery.

Organization of the Bartram Natural History Society of Alabama has been perfected with P. A. Brannon, of the department of archives and history, as president, according to an announcement made by Dr. Thomas M. Owen, director of the departments of archives and history.

Among the charter members are some of Alabama's leading citizens. P. A. Brannon will serve as president during 1914; Dr. W. E. Hinds of Auburn, first vice-president; Truman H. Aldrich of Birmingham, second vice-president; C. H. Billingsley, Tallassee, third vice-president; John Davies, Montgomery, secretary; H. B. Tresslar, Montgomery, treasurer; and Dr. Thomas M. Owen, W. S. Keller, J. H. Wallace, Jr., and A. W. LeBron, members of the executive council.

The objects of the society are the encouragement and promotion of interest in the study of natural history to bring together students for conference and discussion, to make collections of specimens, and to publish results of research. The society will not trespass upon the work of any other organization, but will in its own way undertake to join them in arousing greater interest in the field of natural history in Alabama.

The annual meeting will be held in December each year. Monthly meetings will be held, and out and collection trips from time to time will be made.

The society has been named in honor of William Bartram, a distinguished naturalist, born in 1739, and who died in 1823. The particular reason for honoring Bartram lies in the fact that soon after the war of the American Revolution he explored the territory now embraced in Alabama and published the results of his botanical and other investigations in 1791.

Technical Errors in Franklin Books.

Several minor technical discrepancies were found in the books of some of the officials of Franklin county, according to Examiner of Public Accounts W. R. Foster, who submitted a report on that county to the governor. Examiner Foster reported that A. W. Hargett, sheriff, was due the county $54; and F. R. Freeman, clerk of the circuit court, was due the county $70.

Alleged Yeggmen Remanded to Jail.

John Williams, Frank Moore and Harry Marks, three alleged yeggmen arrested in Montgomery several weeks ago and accused of robbing the Alabama Great Southern train at Bibbville, last September, and J. M. Todd, their companion, accused of carrying explosives on a passenger train, were remanded to the Montgomery county jail by order of John A. Elmore, United States commissioner, before whom they were arraigned. The four men were held under bond.

Alabama Legislator Dead.

A special from Columbus, Ga., says E. L. Wheelis, three times member of the Alabama legislature, and at the time of his death a member of that body from Lee county, died from a stroke of paralysis. Mr. Wheelis resided a few miles east from Phenix City, and was found by the roadside in an unconscious condition. He was removed to his home, where he remained for several hours. He was 54 years old, and of course, three times a member of the Alabama lawmaking body.

Vote for Top Notch Club.

Governor O'Neal has written a letter to the Top Notch Farmers' Club of America, in which he places in nomination the names of Junius Hill of Etowah county and Cecil Adams of Elmore county, as vice presidents of the club from Alabama.

The Top Notch Farmers' Club has headquarters at Springfield, Ill., and has in its membership farmers who have raised more than 100 bushels of corn or oats on one acre of land.

Walker Lee Dunson of Alexander City has already been made a vice president. Dunson raised 232 bushels on one acre. Cecil Adams won first prize in the state corn contest with a yield of 239 bushels and Junius Hill won third prize.

In his letter Governor O'Neal declares that these young men have demonstrated that Alabama soil is unsurpassed for corn raising. There are 761 members of the Top Notch Farmers' Club.

Commemorate LaFayette's Visit.

The eighty-ninth anniversary of the visit of General LaFayette to Alabama will be celebrated April 3 by the Peter Forney Chapter, Daughters of the American Revolution, at the Capitol Hill school. A handsome tablet commemorating the occasion will be dedicated. The tablet will be placed in the Capitol Hill school building, which was erected upon the spot where LaFayette was received by the citizens of Montgomery.

Dr. Thomas M. Owen, director of the department of archives and history, will be master of ceremonies.

Governor O'Neal will deliver an address upon "The Life of LaFayette." Local features in connection with the reception given to LaFayette will be discussed by Mrs. J. M. Wyley, Mrs. J. L. Cobbs is regent of the chapter and Mrs. William T. Sheehan is chairman of the committee on arrangements.

Recently a tablet was placed on the Nicrosi building on Commerce street, which was erected upon the site of the old building in which the public reception and ball were tendered to LaFayette.

Illegally Employed.

Because the commissioners of Baldwin county had no authority to employ a hard labor agent, Charles Hall, employed in this position, owes the state $300, according to a report filed in the office of Governor O'Neal by J. T. Gorman, examiner of public accounts.

Mr. Hall was employed as hard labor agent and since he was employed the attorney general has ruled that a county has no authority to employ a man for this position.

Books and accounts of other officials of Baldwin county are correct, according to the report of Examiner Gorman. Those whose books were examined were J. H. Smith, probate judge; C. B. Richerson, sheriff; W. T. Richerson, clerk of the circuit court; W. J. Hall, tax assessor; C. B. Stapleton, tax collector; J. B. Lambert, county superintendent of education; W. B. Stapleton, treasurer county school funds, and J. M. Volts, county treasurer.

Observe Seventh Bird Day.

Alabama's seven "Bird Day" will be observed in the public schools of the state on Friday, May 1, and in connection with the event, the seventh annual Bird Day Book has been compiled and printed by John H. Wallace, Jr., state game and fish commissioner. This book is by far the handsomest ever printed by the department of game and fish.

This work is printed in colors and contains many original articles written by Mr. Wallace and other contributions. Miss Sophia Watts, chief clerk of the department of game and fish, aided in the compilation of the work and she has contributed a number of original poems that add to its attractiveness.

Inspect Highway.

Inspection of a proposed route of the State highway between Birmingham and Montgomery was made in Chilton by W. S. Keller, State Highway Engineer. The link will be between Clanton and Mountain Creek and work will start immediately, as the Chilton County Commission has appropriated $9,000 and the State will give about $4,000.

Billingsley for Legislature.

C. Homer Billingsley of the pure food department of the state department of agriculture is a candidate for the legislature from Elmore county.

Will Have Exhibit at Panama.

Word comes from Birmingham that at a meeting of the members of the Alabama executive committee of the Panama exposition, held there, an organization was formed for the purpose of obtaining an Alabama exhibit at the Panama-Pacific exposition to be held at San Francisco in 1915.

This movement, which was stated several days ago, had gained considerable impetus, and it is stated that already $30,000 of the $50,000 that it is proposed to raise for the Alabama exhibit is now in sight.

New Bank Incorporates.

The Bank of Valley Head, DeKalb county, has filed papers of incorporation with the secretary of state. Its capital is $25,000 with $11,000 subscribed. N. S. Davenport and many others are the incorporators.

The South Brilliant Coal company of Cullman has also incorporated for the purpose of operating, dealing in and developing coal and other mineral lands. Its capital is $10,000, with $5,000 subscribed. The incorporators are George H. Parker, A. J. Griffin and C. A. Cassady.

LACY DECLARES HE GAVE GOVERNOR $27,500, O'NEAL SAYS STATEMENT FALSE

Montgomery Paper Publishes Sensational Charge of Convicted Convict Clerk.

GRAND JURY WILL INVESTIGATE CHARGES.

MONTGOMERY, Ala.—The Montgomery County Grand Jury reconvened March 24th, upon an order of Judge Armstead Brown of the Montgomery City Court to investigate the charges of Theodore Lacy, in connection with the convict scandal. Judge Brown's action in calling the inquisitorial body together was in compliance with a request from Governor O'Neal that he do so.

It was stated by friends of the Governor that only a complete investigation by the Grand Jury of Lacy's charge that Governor O'Neal received $27,500 James G. Oakley gave Lacy in May or June, 1911, will prevent an extra session of the Legislature.

Montgomery, Ala.—In a brief but a vigorous statement tense with pent up feeling and sounding the clarion call of battle, the governor of Alabama gave out an interview charging that Theo Lacy's statement that he had given him the $27,500 was absolutely false and declaring that he would have the alleged libel investigated if it required a special session of the legislature.

Lacy's statement was the third he has made since he was convicted of embezzling $50,000 of state funds and sentenced to serve ten years in the penitentiary, and the governor arose from a sick bed to answer the alleged libelous charge.

The governor's first act after reaching the capitol was to write a letter to Judge Armstead Brown of the city court of Montgomery requesting that the grand jury be assembled for the purpose of investigating the charge. The governor further requested that the solicitor of the county subpoena before the grand jury anyone in Alabama who has made any statement in support of Lacy's charge, or who has made similar charges. Lacy's statement that he had given the governor the $27,500 which James G. Oakley, former president of the convict board, declared on the witness stand he had given to his chief clerk, is the most sensational charge that has yet been made in connection with the convict department scandal. The statement is not believed by even those who are unfriendly to the governor.

The governor declares that Lacy's statement is the most "diabolical libel that was ever instigated by cowardly conspirators," who used a "practically self-confessed thief as their tool."

"My conduct in the vigorous prosecution of the criminals who were responsible for the recent convict scandal damns the statement," declares the governor. He declares that the libel was uttered for the purpose of diverting the minds of the people from the real criminals.

Regarding the publication of the statement given out by Lacy, the governor says that he will prosecute "vigorously every newspaper in Alabama or elsewhere that indorses this libelous and damnable villification."

Lacy's statement was in effect that he had given to the governor the $27,500 which Oakley gave him in May or June, 1911. Lacy further declared that he did not know whether the governor had ever "returned this or any other money."

The governor later conferred with Judge Armstead Brown of the city court in regard to an immediate grand jury investigation of the libelous charge. The letter to Judge Brown, requesting that the grand jury be immediately assembled.

"Unless the grand jury, an impartial body, makes a full, exhaustive and complete investigation of the entire matter, I will see that is is investigated by an impartial body, even if I have to call the legislature together to do it," said the governor.

Governor's Statement Follows:

"My friends have advised me to await the action of the grand jury, which I confidently believe will be called, but I cannot afford to let such a charge as has been made by the convicted thief go undenied for even one day.

"I do now most solemnly state that there is not one word of truth in Lacy's statement. The entire statement and every part thereof is totally false and made for the wilful and malicious purpose not only of trying to besmirch me, but to have an effect on the speech I am to deliver Monday next at the Grand theatre.

"Word has been brought to me several times that it would be better for me not to make this proposed speech but I will make it if I live, and no such infamous conspiracy shall deter me in the least.

"The political purpose is made plain from the fact that these conspirators, who have thus used this convicted felon in this nefarious attempt, waited until the eve of the election, thinking that there would be no way for an impartial tribunal to investigate this libel—the most diabolical that was ever instituted by cowardly conspirators—using this practically self-confessed thief as their tool.

"These conspirators had the opportunity to make this statement on the witness stand in the open, where I could have met it as a man before my peers, but this did not suit their deep dyed and hidden purpose. My conduct in the vigorous prosecution of the criminals who were responsible for the recent convict scandal damns the statement, but it was thought that I could probably be deterred from further pressing the other charges, but if I live the guilty ones shall not escape.

"There is a desire to divert the minds of the people from the criminals by making this and no doubt other charges, but this shall not occur.

"I shall prosecute vigorously every newspaper in Alabama or elsewhere that indorses this libelous and damnable villification.

"The sinister political purpose that underlies this charge is made more manifest by the method adopted in securing it.

"The Montgomery Journal states that Theo Lacy stated to a 'reporter,' but I am informed that this 'reporter' was no other than one Horace Hood, the editor of the paper, who happens to be also sheriff of Montgomery county, and in charge of the criminal and an ardent supporter of my political enemies.

"It is well known to those who read the Montgomery Journal during the recent trial of Lacy and Oakley that the influence of this sheet was thrown against the successful prosecution of these cases.

"If this investigation by the grand is not sufficiently full, exhaustive and conclusive, it is my purpose to have such an investigation, even though it shall take a special session of the legislature."

Lacy Says He Gave $27,500 Given By Oakley to Governor.

Montgomery, Ala.—The Montgomery Journal of March 20 published the following:

Theo Lacy Friday morning told the reporter of the Journal that he gave the governor of Alabama $27,500 in June of 1911 to keep for him, and that so far as he knows the money is still in the hands of the governor.

Lacy stated that the money was given to him by James G. Oakley shortly after Mr. Oakley went into office as the president of the state convict board.

The Lacy statement springs the greatest sensation yet brought out in the famous embezzlement case. It corroborates the statement of Oakley and will doubtless have a decided effect in the trial of the other cases against Mr. Oakley and Mr. Lacy.

Lacy's simple, but astounding statement follows?

"Mr. Oakley did give me that $27,500 in cash in May, or June, 1911. The governor got that $27,500 from me that day. When Brooke was examining the books, and after I had been ordered to get up all the state's money that was shown to be due, according to the cash books in the convict department, I went to the governor and asked him for the money he had, and he told me he did not have it then, but could arrange to put it back by Friday.

"This was Tuesday of the week I left here. He told me he would hold Brooke off for a few days and for me to get up what convict money I could, so that it could be deposited in Birmingham and draw checks on it and he would arrange to have the $27,500 deposited to meet the checks.

"He did not do this and he has never returned this money or any other money, so far as I know."

MANY DENOUNCE LACY STATEMENT AS FALSE.

Montgomery, Ala.—Since the news was heralded abroad last March that Theo Lacy, chief clerk of the convict department, had absconded with $50,000 of state funds, nothing has stirred Montgomery more than the statement of that former official implicating the governor of Alabama in the crime.

Lacy's charge, it is stated, is believed to have been instigated by certain persons unfriendly to the governor. Many denounce the statement as false.

LACY SAID HE DID NOT LOOK FOR SENSATION

Theodore Lacy, when he was told that all Alabama was aroused over his charge implicating the governor in the convict department scandal, expressed great surprise. Lacy's comment was: "Why, I didn't know the statement would create a sensation."

The Montgomery county grand jury will assemble according to reports to investigate Lacy's charges. Then will be summoned as witnesses all who have made public statements concerning the defalcation.

The VALIANTS of VIRGINIA

SYNOPSIS.

John Valiant, a rich society favorite, suddenly discovers that the Valiant corporation, which his father founded and which was the principal source of his wealth, has failed. He voluntarily turns over his private fortune to the receiver for the corporation. His entire remaining possessions consist of an old motor car, a white bull dog and Damory court, a neglected estate in Virginia. On the way to Damory court he meets Shirley Dandridge, an auburn-haired beauty, and decides that he is going to like Virginia immensely. Shirley's mother, Mrs. Dandridge, and Major Bristow exchange reminiscences during which it is revealed that the major, Valiant's father, and a man named Sassoon were rivals for the hand of Mrs. Dandridge in her youth. Sassoon and Valiant fought a duel on her account in which the former was killed. Valiant finds Damory court overgrown with weeds and creepers and the buildings in a very much neglected condition. Valiant explores his ancestral home. He is surprised by a fox hunting party which invades his estate. He recognizes Shirley at the head of the party. He gives sanctuary to the cornered fox. Gossips discuss the advent of the new owner and recall the tragedy in which the elder Valiant took part. Valiant decides to rehabilitate Damory court and make the land produce a living for him.

CHAPTER XIII—Continued.

They stood on the edge of a stony ravine which widened at one end to a shallow marshy valley. The rocks were covered with gray-green feathery creepers, enwound with curly yellow tendrils of love-vine. Across the ravine, on a lower level, began a grove of splendid trees that marched up into the long stretch of neglected forest he had seen from the house.

"You love it?" he asked, without withdrawing his eyes.

"I've loved it all my life. I love everything about Damory Court. Ruined as it is, it is still one of the most beautiful estates in all Virginia. There's nothing finer even in Italy. Just behind us, where those hemlocks stand, is where the duel the children spoke of was fought."

He turned his head. "Tell me about it," he said.

She glanced at him curiously. "Didn't you know? That was the reason the place was abandoned. Valiant, who lived here, and the owner of another plantation, who was named Sassoon, quarreled. They fought, the story is, under those big hemlock trees. Sassoon was killed."

He looked out across the distance; he could not trust his face. "And—Valiant?"

"He went away the same day and never came back; he lived in New York till he died. He was the father of the court's present owner. You never heard the story?"

"No," he admitted. "I—till quite recently I never heard of Damory Court."

"That was the last duel ever fought in Virginia. Dueling was a dreadful custom. I'm glad it's gone. Aren't you?"

"Yes," he said slowly, "it was a thing that cut two ways. Perhaps Valiant, if he could have had his choice afterward, would rather have been lying there that morning than Sassoon."

"He must have suffered, too," she agreed, "or he wouldn't have exiled himself as he did. I used to wonder if it was a love-quarrel—whether they could have been in love with the same woman."

"But why should he go away?"

"I can't imagine, unless she had really loved the other man. If so, she couldn't have borne seeing Valiant afterward." She paused with a little laugh. "But then," she said, "it may have been nothing so romantic. Valiant's grandfather, who was known as Devil-John, is said to have called a man out because he rode past him on the wrong side. Our ancestors in Virginia, I'm afraid, didn't stand on ceremony when they felt uppish."

He did not smile. He was looking out once more over the luminous stretch of fields, his side-face towards her. Curious and painful questions were running through his brain. With an effort, he thrust these back and recalled his attention to what she was saying.

"You wonder, I suppose, that we feel as we do toward these old estates, and set store by them, and—yes, and brag of them insufferably as we do. But it's in our blood. You Northerners think we're desperately conceited," she smiled, "but it's true. We're still as proud of our land, and its old, old places, and love them as well as our ancestors ever did. Do you wonder we resent their passing to people who don't care for them in the Southern way?"

"But suppose the newcomers do care for them?"

Her lips curled. "A young millionaire who has lived all his life in New York, to care for Damory Court! A youth idiotically rich, brought up in a superheated atmosphere of noise and money!"

He started uncontrollably. So that was what she thought! He felt himself flushing. He had wondered what would be his impression of the neighborhood and its people; their possible opinion of himself had never occurred to him.

"You think there's no chance of his choosing to stay here because he actually likes it?"

"Not the slightest," she said indifferently.

"You are so certain of this without ever having seen him?"

She glanced at him covertly, suddenly sensible of the impropriety of the discussion, since the man discussed was certainly his patron, maybe his friend. But his insistence had roused a certain balky wilfulness that would have its way. "It's true I've never seen him," she said, "but I've read about him a hundred times in the Sunday supplements. He's a regular feature of the high-roller section. His idea of a good time is a dog-banquet at Sherry's. Why, a girl told me once that there was a cigarette named after him—the Vanity Valiant!"

"Isn't that beside the point? Because he has been an idler, must he necessarily be a—vandal?"

She laughed again. "He wouldn't call it vandalism. He'd think it decided improvement to make Damory Court as frantically different as possible. I suppose he'll erect a glass cupola and a porte-cochere, all up-to-date and varnishy, and put orchid hothouses where the wilderness garden was, and a modern marble cupid instead of the summer-house, and lay out a kite-shaped track—"

Everything that was impulsive and explosive in John Valiant's nature came out with a bang. "No!" he cried, "whatever else he is, he's not such a preposterous ass as that!"

She faced him squarely now. Her eyes were sparkling. "Since you know him so intimately and so highly approve of him—"

"No, no," he interrupted. "You mistake me. I shouldn't try to justify him." His flush had risen to the roots of his brown hair, but he did not lower his gaze. Now the red color slowly ebbed, leaving him pale. "He has been an idler—that's true enough—and till a week ago he was 'idiotically rich.' But his idling is over now. At this moment, except for this one property, he is little better than a beggar."

She had taken a hasty step or two back from him, and her eyes were now fixed on his with a dawning half-fearful question in them.

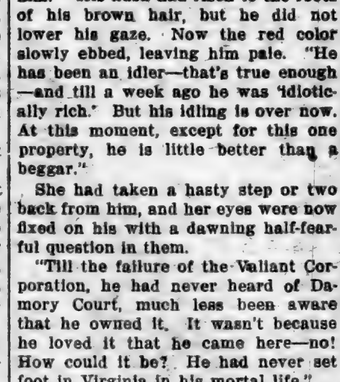
"Till the failure of the Valiant Corporation, he had never heard of Damory Court, much less been aware that he owned it. It wasn't because he loved it that he came here—no! How could it be? He had never set foot in Virginia in his mortal life."

She put up her hands to her throat with a start. "Came?" she echoed. "Came!"

"But if you think that even he could be so crassly stupid, so monumentally blind to all that is really fine and beautiful—"

"Oh!" she cried with flashing comprehension. "Oh, how could you! You—"

He nodded curtly. "Yes," he said. "I am that haphazard harlequin, John Valiant, himself."



CHAPTER XIV.

On the Edge of the World.

There was a pause not to be reckoned by minutes but suffocatingly long. She had grown as pale as he.

"That was ungenerous of you," she said then with icy slowness. "Though no doubt you—found it entertaining. It must have still further amused you to be taken for an architect?"

"I am flattered," he replied, with a trace of bitterness, "to have suggested even for a moment, so worthy a calling."

The Next Moment, With Clenched Teeth, He Was Viciously Stamping His Heel Again and Again.

At his answer she put out her hand with sudden gesture, as if bluntly thrusting the matter from her concern, and turning went back along the tree-shadowed path.

He followed glumly, gnawing his lip, wanting to say he knew not what, but wretchedly tongue-tied, noting that the great white moth was still waving its creamy wings on the dead stump and wondering if she would take the cape jessamines. He felt an embarrassed relief when, passing the roots where they lay, she stooped to raise them.

Then all at once the blood seemed to shrink from his heart. With a hoarse cry he leaped toward her, seized her wrist and roughly dragged her back, feeling as he did so, a sharp fiery sting on his instep. The next moment, with clenched teeth, he was viciously stamping his heel again and again, driving into the soft earth a twisting foot-like something that slapped the brown wintered leaves into a hissing turmoil.

He had flung her from him with such violence that she had fallen sidewise. Now she raised herself, kneeling in the feathery light, both hands clasped close to her breast, trembling excessively with loathing and feeling the dun earth-floor billow like a canvas sea in a theater. Little puffs of dust from the protesting ground were wreathing about her set face, and she pressed one hand against her shoulder to repress her shivers.

"The horrible — horrible — thing!" she said whisperingly. "It would have bitten me!"

He came toward her, panting, and grasping her hand, lifted her to her feet. He staggered slightly as he did so, and she saw his lips twist together oddly. "Ah," she gasped, "it bit you! It bit you!"

"No," he said, "I think not."

"Look! There on your ankle—that spot!"

"I did feel something, just that first moment." He laughed uncertainly. "It's queer. My foot's gone fast asleep."

Every remnant of color left her face. She had known a negro child who had died of a water-moccasin's bite some years before—the child of a house-servant. It had been wading in the creek in the gorge. The doctor had said then that if one of the other children. * * *

She grasped his arm. "Sit down," she commanded, "here, on this log, and see."

Her pale fright caught him. He obeyed, dragged off the low shoe and bared the tingling spot. The firm white flesh was puffing up around two tiny blue-rimmed punctures. He reached into his pocket, then remembered that he had no knife. As the next best thing he knotted his handkerchief quickly above the ankle, thrust a stick through the loop and twisted it till the ligature cut deeply, while she knelt beside him, her lips moving soundlessly, saying over and over to herself words like these: "I must not be frightened. He doesn't realize the danger, but I do! I must be quite collected. It is a mile to the doctor's. I might run to the house and send Unc' Jefferson, but it would take too long. Besides, the doctor might not be there. There is no one to do anything but me."

She crouched beside him, putting her hands by his on the stick and wrenching it over with all her strength. "Tighter, tighter," she said. "It must be tighter." But, to her dismay, at the last turn the improvised cord snapped, and the released stick flew a dozen feet away.

Her heart leaped chokingly, then dropped into hammer-like thudding. He leaned back on one arm, trying to laugh, but she noted that his breath came shortly as if he had been running. "Absurd!" he said, frowning. "How such—a fool thing—can hurt!"

Suddenly she threw herself on the ground and grasped the foot with both hands. He could see her face twitch with shuddering, and her eyes dilating with some determined purpose.

"What are you going to do?"

"This," she said, and he felt her shrinking lips, warm and tremulous, pressed hard against his instep.

He drew away sharply, with savage denial. "No—no! Not that! You shan't! My lord—you shan't!" He dragged his numbing foot from her desperate grasp, lifting himself, pushing her from him; but she fought with him, clinging, panting broken sentences:

"You must! It's the only way. It was—a moccasin, and it's deadly. Every minute counts!"

"I won't. No, stop! How do you know? It's not going to—here, listen! Take your hands away. Listen!—Listen! I can go to the house and send Uncle Jefferson for the doctor and he—No! stop, I say! Oh—I'm sorry if I hurt you. How strong you are!"

"Let me!"

"No! Your lips are not for that—good God, that damnable thing! You yourself might be—"

"Let me! Oh, how cruel you are! It was my fault. But for me it would never have—"

"No! I would rather—"

"Let me! Oh, if you died!"

With all the force of her strong young body she wrenched away his protestant hands. A thirst and a sickish feeling were upon him, a curious irresponsible giddiness, and her hair which that struggle had brought in tumbled masses about her shoulders seemed to have little flames running all over it. His foot had entirely lost its feeling. There was a strange weakness in his limbs.

Moments of half-consciousness, or consciousness jumbled with strange imaginings, followed. At times he felt the pressure upon the wounded foot, was sensible of the suction of the young mouth striving desperately to draw the poison from the wound. From time to time he was conscious of a white desperate face imbued with hair that was a mist of moven sparkles. At times he thought himself a recumbent water statue in a wood, and her a great tall golden-headed flower lying broken at his feet; again he was a granite boulder, and she a vine with yellow leaves clinging about him. Then a blank—a sense of movement and of troublous disturbance of insistent voices that called to him and inquisitive hands that plucked at him, and then voices growing distant again, and hands falling away, and at last—silence.

* * * * * * * *

Inky clouds were gathering over the sunlight when Shirley came from Damory Court, along the narrow wood-path under the hemlocks, and the way was striped with blue-black shadows and filled with sighing noises. She walked warily, halting often at some leafy rustle to catch a quick breath of dread. As she approached the tree-roots where the cape jessamines lay, she had to force her feet forward by sheer effort of will. At a little distance from them she broke a stick and with it managed to drag the bunch to her, turning her eyes with a shiver from the trampled spot near by. She picked up the flowers, and treading with caution, retraced her steps to the wider path.

She stepped into the Red Road at length in the teeth of a thunder-storm, which had arisen almost without warning to break with the passionate intensity of electric storms in the South.

There was no shelter, but even had there been, she would not have sought it. The turbulence of nature around her matched, in a way, her over-strained feeling, and she welcomed the fierce bulge of the wind in the up-blowing whorls of her hair and the drenching wetness of the rain. She tried to fix her mind on near things, the bending grasses, the scurrying red runnels and flapping shrubbery, but her thoughts wilfully escaped the tether, turning again and again to the events of the last two hours. She pictured Unc' Jefferson's eyes rolling up in ridiculous alarm, his winnowing arm lashing his indignant mule in his flight for the doctor.

At the mental picture she choked with hysterical laughter, then cringed suddenly against the sopping bark. She saw again the doctor's gaze lift from his first examination of the tiny punctures to send a swift penetrant glance at her, before he bent his great body to carry the unconscious man to the house. Again a fit of shuddering swept over her. Then, all at once, tears came, strangling sobs that bent and swayed her. It was the discharge of the Leyden jar, the loosing of the tense bow-string and it brought relief. After a time she grew quieter. He would get well! The thought that perhaps she had saved his life gave her a thrill that ran over her whole body. And until yesterday she had never seen him! She kneeled in the blurred half-light, pushing her wet hair back from her forehead and smiling up in the rain that still fell fast. In a few moments she rose and went on. At the gate of the Rosewood lane stood a mail-box on a cedar post and she paused to fish out a draggled Richmond newspaper. As she thrust it under her arm her eye caught a word of a head-line. With a flush she tore it from its soggy wrapper, the wetted fiber parting in her eager fingers, and resting her foot on the lower rail of the gate, spread it open on her knee.

She stood stock-still until she had read the whole. It was the story of John Valiant's sacrifice of his private fortune to save the ruin of the involved corporation.

Its effect upon her was a shock. She felt her throat swell as she read; then she was chilled by the memory of what she had said to him: "What has he ever done except play polo and furnish spicy paragraphs for the society columns?"

"What a beast I was!" she said, addressing the wet hedge. "He had just done that splendid thing. It was because of that that he was little better than a beggar, and I said those horrible things!" Again she bent her eyes, rereading the sentences: "Took his detractors by surprise * * * had just sustained a grilling at the hands of the state's examiner which might well have dried at their fount the springs of sympathy."

She crushed up the paper in her hand and rested her forehead on the wet rail. Idiotically rich—a vandal—a useless, purse-proud flaneur. She had called him all that! She could still see the paleness of his look as she had said it.

Shirley, overexcited as she still was, felt the sobs returning. These, however, did not last long and in a moment she found herself smiling again. Though she had hurt him, she had saved him, too! When she whispered this over to herself it still thrilled and startled her. She folded the paper and hastened on under the cherry-trees.

Emmaline, the negro maid was waiting anxiously on the porch. She was thin to spareness, with a face as brown as a tobacco leaf, restless black eyes and wool neatly pinned and set off by an amber comb.

"Honey," called Emmaline, "I'se been fearin' fo' yo' wid all that lightnin' r'arin' eroun'. Yo' got th' jess'-mine? Give 'em to Em'line. She'll fix 'em all nice, jes' how Mis' Judith like."

"All right, Emmaline," replied Shirley. "And I'll go and dress. Has mother missed me?"

"No'm. She ain' lef' huh room this whole blessed day. Now yo' barth's all ready—all 'cep'n th' hot watah, en I sen' Ranston with that th' fus' thing. Yo' hurry en peel them wet close off yo'se'f, or yo' have one o' them digested chills."

Her young mistress flown and the hot water despatched, the negro woman spread a cloth on the floor and began to cut and dress the long stalks of the flowers. This done she fetched bowls and vases, and set the pearly-white clumps here and there—on the dining-room sideboard, the hall mantel and the desk of the living-room—till the delicate fragrance filled the house, quite vanquishing the rose-scent from the arbors.

As the trim colored woman moved lightly about in the growing dusk, with the low click of glass and muffled clash of silver, the light tat-tat of a cane sounded, and she ran to the hall, where Mrs. Dandridge was descending the stairway, one slim white hand holding the banister, under the edge of a white silk shawl which drooped its heavy fringes to her daintily-shod feet. On the lower step she halted, looking smilingly about at the blossoming bowls.

"Don' they smell up th' whole house?" said Emmaline. "I know'd yo be pleas', Mis' Judith. Now put yo' han' on mah shouldah en I'll take yo' to yo' big cha'h."

They crossed the hall, the dusky form bending to the fragile pressure of the fingers. "Now heah's yo' cha'h. Ranston he made up a little fiah jes' to take th' damp out, en th' big lamp's lit, en Miss Shirley'll be down right quick."

A moment later, in fact, Shirley descended the stair, in a filmy gown of india-muslin, with a narrow belting of gold, against whose flowing sleeves her bare arms showed with a flushed pinkness the hue of the pale coral beads about her neck. The damp newspaper was in her hand.

At her step her mother turned her head: she was listening intently to voices that came from the garden—a child's shrill treble opposing Ranston's stentorian grumble.

Dudley Field Malone, the new collector of the port of New York, said to a reporter:

"I'm too new to my job to talk about it yet. If I talked about it I might, like the mountaineer, give away my ignorance.

"A man was hunting in Pike county, and up around Porters lake he visited a settler's house.

"'It must be a handy thing away up here to have an encyclopedia.'

"'Yep,' said the mountaineer. 'Yep, she's handy. I only got the first book.'

"'Why haven't you got the others?'

"'He dug, too. Nine year ago it was. I ain't more'n half through her yet. The wife, she's about quarter through. It took a lot o' brains to write this book, but it's my opinion, all the same, and I don't mind tellin' ye, that I think she's got her dry streaks, like most everything else.'"

Chinese Soldiers Are Good Fighters.

Till within the last two years or so the general impression was that the Chinese soldier was intended to run away. The revolution of 1911 dispated some of this absurdity. The events of the present year have dispersed the remainder. It is now recognized that there is no finer material than that which could be selected from among the sturdier of China's sons. Nothing is wanted but training, arms of precision, good leading and a good cause. With these China could walk into its own. The improvements that have been made during recent years in such things can be appreciated only by those who know what the old troops from the Bannermen [illegible]

FRUIT LAXATIVE FOR SICK CHILD

"California Syrup of Figs" can't harm tender stomach, liver and bowels.

Every mother realizes, after giving her children "California Syrup of Figs" that this is their ideal laxative, because they love its pleasant taste and it thoroughly cleanses the tender little stomach, liver and bowels without griping.

When cross, irritable, feverish or breath is bad, stomach sour, look at the tongue, mother! If coated, give a teaspoonful of this harmless "fruit laxative," and in a few hours all the foul, constipated waste, sour bile and undigested food passes out of the bowels, and you have a well, playful child again. When its little system is full of cold, throat sore, has stomach-ache, diarrhoea, indigestion, colic—remember, a good "inside cleaning" should always be the first treatment given.

Millions of mothers keep "California Syrup of Figs" handy; they know a teaspoonful today saves a sick child tomorrow. Ask at the store for a 50-cent bottle of "California Syrup of Figs," which has directions for babies, children of all ages and grown-ups printed on the bottle. Adv.

SAGE TEA DARKENS GRAY HAIR TO ANY SHADE. TRY IT!

Keep Your Locks Youthful, Dark, Glossy and Thick With Common Garden Sage and Sulphur.

When you darken your hair with Sage Tea and Sulphur, no one can tell, because it's done so naturally, so evenly. Preparing this mixture, though, at home is mussy and troublesome. For 50 cents you can buy at any drug store the ready-to-use tonic called "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Hair Remedy." You just dampen a sponge or soft brush with it and draw this through your hair, taking one small strand at a time. By morning all gray hair disappears, and, after another application or two, your hair becomes beautifully darkened, glossy and luxuriant. You will also discover dandruff is gone and hair has stopped falling.

Gray, faded hair, though no disgrace, is a sign of old age, and as we all desire a youthful and attractive appearance, get busy at once with Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur and look years younger.—Adv.

Modern War Fireworks.

The most elaborate fireworks in the world are those reserved for use in time of war. The possibilities of signaling for long distances and of illuminating the enemy's position by night have been carefully studied and fireworks of unprecedented size and brilliancy have been constructed.

Let another great war be fought and the fireworks display would completely eclipse our most elaborate Fourth of July celebrations. One of the most beautiful of these fireworks is the star shell. By means of a large rocket arrangement these stars are sent to great altitudes, and on bursting throw a powerful white light over a considerable radius.

The war-rockets are the largest ever constructed, measuring eight feet or more in length. On exploding at great altitudes combinations of colored stars are set free which will signal widely scattered troops.

WANTED TO KNOW

The Truth About Grape-Nuts Food.

It doesn't matter so much what you hear about a thing, it's what you know that counts. And correct knowledge is most likely to come from personal experience.

"About a year ago," writes a N. Y. man, "I was bothered by indigestion, especially during the forenoon. I tried several remedies without any permanent improvement.

"My breakfast usually consisted of oatmeal, steak or chops, bread, coffee and some fruit.

"Hearing so much about Grape-Nuts, I concluded to give it a trial and find out if all I had heard of it was true.

"So I began with Grape-Nuts and cream, soft boiled eggs, toast, a cup of Postum and some fruit. Before the end of the first week I was rid of the acidity of the stomach and felt much relieved.

"By the end of the second week all traces of indigestion had disappeared and I was in first-rate health once more. Before beginning this course of diet, I never had any appetite for lunch, but now I can enjoy the meal at noon-time."

UNDERWOOD THANKS FRIENDS

Tells of Work of Present Congress

Can't Leave For Campaign, But Appreciates Generous Support

OSCAR W. UNDERWOOD.

UNDERWOOD'S LETTER.

In a letter to Chairman Forney Johnston, Oscar Underwood tells his friends he must stick to his post of duty, as there is very important legislation coming before Congress daily. He speaks of the splendid record the Democrats have made in writing constructive legislation upon the statutes and alludes to the highly important legislation that will be enacted before Congress adjourns. The letter well shows the man and the servant.

SIXTY-THIRD CONGRESS.

Oscar W. Underwood, Chairman Committee on Ways and Means, House of Representatives.

Washington, D. C., March 6, 1914.—Mr. Forney Johnston, Chairman Underwood State Campaign Committee, Birmingham, Ala. My Dear Mr. Johnston: I wish to state to you how greatly I appreciate the splendid work that yourself and my other friends in Alabama are doing for me in my absence, and I feel that it is hardly fair that I should leave the burden of the work of this campaign to rest on my friends and not carry a fair share of the burden myself, but I find myself in this embarrassing position: For nearly nineteen years I have served the people of the Ninth District of Alabama in Congress. I have always felt that as long as I held their commission and received my salary from the government that it was my duty to remain in Washington and attend to the business of the constituency that I had the honor to represent. I have with practical uniformity adhered to this rule during my entire service in Congress and now that I have been selected as floor leader of my party, having additional responsibilities placed on my shoulders both to the country and to the Democratic party, I feel that an additional duty rests on me to remain in Washington and give my attention to the business of Congress.

Will Not Neglect Duty.

I feel that my friends in Alabama will forgive me for not coming home to fight for myself, for should my absence cause delay or serious embarrassment to the important legislation now pending in the House of Representatives it would be a serious neglect of duty on my part, and a reflection not only on my own constituency, but on the people of Alabama, who for the first time in the history of our government have had one of their representatives selected as the leader of the House.

Great Work Accomplished.

Let me tell you briefly what the Democratic administration has done since we took charge of the government on the 4th of March last year. Congress convened in extra session on April 7, and we immediately began to carry out our platform pledges. We placed on the statute books the tariff bill, which bears my name, and which is the lowest tariff enacted since the Walker tariff law of 1846. We promised to write a tariff for revenue only, lessening the burdens of taxation that rests on the backs of the American people, and we have kept that pledge. We have placed on the free list bagging for cotton and cotton ties and all agricultural implements that are used by the farmers of America. In this law we provided for a graduated income tax, which compels the rich to bear a proportion of the burdens to bear a proment based on their incomes. The people have clamored for this reform for a quarter of a century. In my judgment, an income tax law is the wisest and most just form of equitably distributing the burdens of taxation. We have reinforced our banking and currency laws, and thereby fulfilled another platform pledge. This is one of the greatest pieces of constructive legislation enacted within the last half century. This law takes the control of the money and the credits of the country out of the hands of money lenders and speculators in the great cities, and places it in the hands of the government—in the hands of the people—where it properly belongs. We have given to the country one of the most effective parcel post laws in the world. All of this legislation was earnestly supported by me and I aided earnestly and faithfully in its enactment.

Yet Things to Do.

I assume that our people are familiar with the many important measures which have been before Congress since it reassembled on January 10, and with the important measures considered and adopted by the House.

We have now pending in Congress, legislation of vast interest to our people: The agricultural bill is now before the House, carrying about eighteen millions of dollars in the way of appropriations to improve agricultural conditions in America. The river and harbor bill, in which our people are greatly interested, is on the calendar, as is also the naval appropriation bill. Both of these bills will be considered and acted upon by the House before the 6th day of April. The Democratic party is pledged to revise the anti-trust laws. Two committees of the House are now working on this legislation and will shortly report bills of vital importance to all the people. The Committee on Banking and Currency has for several weeks, been holding hearings on bills to establish a system of rural credits in this country that will enable our farming classes to borrow money at low rates of interest on long-time loans. The hearing are about over and the Committee on Banking and Currency is preparing to formulate its bill, which will be reported within the next thirty days and enacted into law before the adjournment oft his Congress.

Good Roads Appropriation.

We have within the last month passed a bill through the House of Representatives carrying $25,000,000 to aid the States in the construction of good roads. That bill is now pending in the Senate and may come back and go to conference at any time.

I have assisted, and will continue to assist my Democratic colleagues in Congress, in carrying out these reforms stated. We are making a great fight for Democratic principles; we are carrying out the pledges we made to the people; we are keeping the faith.

I should be glad indeed to return to Alabama and take part in the campaign if I felt that I could do so without neglecting the work ahead of me. I do not believe the people of Alabama, whether they are for or against me in the senatorial fight, will misconstrue my attitude in remaining here.

Assuring yourself and your associates in my campaign of my sincere appreciation of the work you are doing for me, I am, cordially yours,

O. W. UNDERWOOD.

CLANTON - ALABAMA

FORMER CHILTONIAN WRITES

PREDICTS GREAT THINGS FOR CLANTON AND CHILTON COUNTY.

Birmingham, Ala., March 23

Editor Press—Can you give a little space to an old Chiltonian?

It has been several years since I had the pleasure of residing in Chilton, but as the place of my birth and of my boyhood days it holds many pleasant memories for me.

I want to congratulate you on the neat and clean paper you are getting out. In my humble judgment it is the cleanest and most ably edited paper Chilton has produced in many years. I can't understand why the management should be scouring the minor leagues for an editor when they had a man of big league calibre already on the ground.

I noticed a few lines in the papers some time ago stating that Judge Deason would oppose Mr. Blackmon for Congress. Since then I have been reading daily that "Mr. Blackmon, pale from illness and with his arm in a sling tells large numbers of euthusiastic supporters of the work he has accomplished in Congress." They didn't give any details about the work. Knowing the kind of man the News and Age-Herald invariably line up behind I decided to see what Mr. Blackmon had done. I found he had done it. When would-be Senators Glass and Barrett line up behind a man he has generally done it, or can be depended upon to do it at the proper time.

The Webb Bill is too well understood to need discussion. When I found out Mr. Blackmon had opposed a bill to prohibit the Government from forcing whiskey into dry territory I began to see the lights from afar, and was reminded of Mr. Comer's words: "there is a reason, the people understand." I sincerely hope and believe Mr. Deason will be the next Congressman from the Fourth District.

I have heard more from Chilton and Clanton the past few months than for four or five years before. The people must be wide awake. The automobile people here are boosting Chilton as the most prosperous part of the State, and I heard several well-known traveling men predicting that Clanton would be the principal summer resort in the State within a short time. Electric lights, paved sidewalks, telephone exchange, water works, the next Lieutenant Governor and the next Congressman. Go on old Chilton and Clanton.

PERSONS

FOR

Commissioner of Agriculture.

The time is ripe in Alabama for a scientifically trained man to be put in charge of the Agricultural Department at the Capitol. A man who knows the composition of soils, and fertilizers, and who understands how the latter are made and applied, who appreciates the necessity of diversifying our farming interests, of practicing crop rotation, of instructing on the value of winter cover crops, and who is familiar with modern scientific methods now being practiced on the farms.

The Alabama Farmer, the official organ of the State Farmers' Union, after a thorough investigation of the qualifications of the various candidates who are seeking the position of Commissioner of Agriculture, has centered upon Dr. A. A. Persons, who was educated at Auburn and taught Chemistry and Agriculture there and at the A. and M. College of Florida ten years, and who was for ten years head of the Chemical Department of the State University, as the right man to measure up to the present Agriculture requirements of Alabama, and in this connection this paper says editorially:—

There was never a time before when the farmers were so intensely interested in scientific and practical farming, and this interest certainly should not be retarded by placing a man at the head of this department who is incompetent to instruct the farmers, and whose only aim is to get in line for the salary check. Dr. A. A. Persons is a man qualified in every sense of the word. He is both scientific and practical, and his experience, both in a scientific and practical way, eminently fits him for the position to which he aspires. And he is a scholarly, Christian gentleman.

WHY WE SHOULD SUPPORT DEASON FOR CONGRESS.

1st. He is a clean man—conscientious in his dealings, he would not scruple to do a low or mean thing.

2nd. He is one of our foremost citizens, intelligent and with the courage to stand by his convictions. His association with his fellowman has made him familiar with their needs.

3rd. He is free from any "special interests" or political ring. He has come up from the ranks of the common people and being free from the "higher powers" he would naturally allign himself with the masses.

4th. He stands for the enforcement of the prohibition laws. On a measure like the Webb bill he would be found voting for the interest of the people.

5th. If we might mix a little sentiment with our politics, home pride would prompt us to stand by him and send him to the legislative halls of our government, the only man we have had an opportunity of voting for from Chilton county.

COMING HOME TO VOTE

Hot Springs, Ark., March 30.

Editor of the Press:—I hope to get back home in time to vote in the Democratic primary on April 6th. My health and condition is much improved, and I am much stronger than when I left home. At all events it will only be a short time before I return, even though I do not get back to the Democratic Primary. I am very impatient to get back among my own people. Very respectfully,

Wm. M. Adams.

FAVORABLE COMMENT AS TO JUDGE DEASON

[From the Selma Mirror.]

Marion, Ala., March 25.

Editor Selma Mirror:—I am watching the congressional race in your district with a good deal of interest. I was born and raised in the Fourth District and have known Judge Deason for a long time. Your people will make no mistake in honoring him at this time, as he is a gentleman of immaculate character and has in him the making of a first-class Congressman. Yours very truly,

J. P. Haley, D. D. S.

Judge Deason looks to be a sure winner for Congress in this the Fourth Congressional District.—Selma Mirror.

Jude Deason broke the power of the republican party that had held sway in Chilton county for twenty years. He is asking your support for member of Congress from this the Fourth District. Don't forget that on April 6th.

From what we can learn about Judge Deason of Chilton county, who is now aspiring to a seat in the lower House of this great Nation of ours, seems to us to be eminently fitted.

First. He is clean, just, and upright in all his dealings, strictly moral, but not a fanatic on the great question of prohibition, yet he comes out boldly and says that you can place him on the moral side of every question.

Second. Judge Deason is the son of a noble Sire, who died when he was only four years old, leaving him and his mother in meager circumstances so that he had to at once begin work for a living.

Third. Judge Deason is a self-made man if there ever was one, and he is making the race against Mr. Blackmon on the simple platform of clean, able and unselfish representation of the voters of this district. While in Piedmont a few days ago we learn from his own language that he is not backed up by any political ring, railroad, or other selfish interest.—Piedmont Journal.

STRONG ENDORSEMENT OF JUDGE DEASON.

FROM SELMA JOURNAL.

The Journal herewith prints a Postal Card that is to-day being mailed to the voters of Dallas County. It is signed by six of the best known citizens of Selma, men in whose judgment and honesty of purpose the people of Dallas County has the greatest confidence, they are representatives of the different political issues and candidates in this county, which goes to show that Judge Deason is that high order of man upon whom all factions have united.

It seem that there is a general demand for a man in Congress from the Fourth District who is closer in touch with and more representative of the people than is Mr. Blackmon. Judge Deason is recognized as a man who will faithfully and honestly represent the interests of the entire district. It looks as if a majority of the voters of this District are dissatisfied with Mr. Blackmon and that upon his record in Congress the people have endorsed the one word "Tekel."

The following is the Postal now being mailed out to the Dallas County voters giving to our citizens the benefit of the unprejudiced investigation and unbiased opinion of men who are ever zealous for the welfare of their country and the best interests of their people.

"For the nomination for Congress from this District in the coming Democratic Primary, we recommend for your consideration Judge Deason, who is now Probate Judge of Chilton County, being the first Democratic Judge of that county in twenty years. We endorse him as a man of unimpeachable character, of upright, moral life, and a citizen of the highest type. He is a Democrat and a man of the people. He knows their wants and needs, and in Congress, will, in our opinion, be a representative of ALL THE PEOPLE and NOT of a FAVORED FEW."

Editor Press:

I have been thinking for several days of writing you a letter in behalf of Judge E. B. Deason, our candidate for Congress from the Fourth Congressional District. For twenty years I have been a resident of this county, and this is the first opportunity I have ever had to vote for a democratic candidate for Congress from our county, and now that the opportunity has come I am sure all the democrats will rally around our "home product" and give him a solid vote. As Probate Judge he has done more for us in the shape of good roads than any other Judge we have had, and I am sure if we place him in Congress where his power will be greater that he will be in a much better position to do more for us. I have known him since boyhood and have ever found him loyal to every trust, and know that he is a man to whom we might well [illegible]

TO THE DEMOCRATIC VOTERS OF CHILTON COUNTY

As stated in my letter last week, owing to the illness of my wife, it has been, and is now impossible for me to attempt to make a personal canvass of the county. My wife is still in the infirmary at Montgomery, in a serious condition, and when I am not with her, it is absolutely necessary that I remain in close touch with the telegraph and telephone, that I may be gotten at a moment's notice.

However, I was born and raised in this county, as were practically all of my kinspeople, and the democratic voters of Chilton county know me, my record, and my qualifications for the otfice of sheriff and I am perfectly willing to risk my candidacy to their good judgment and sense of fairness.

Someone, I do not know who, has started the rumor, that if I were elected sheriff, I would place the office in the hands of another, and not give it my own personal efforts. I do not understand why anyone could start such a baseless report, and I assure the people here and now, that if I am honored with the democratic nomination, and succeed in the election, I shall devote my entire time to the office, and will endeavor to make the county one of the very best sheriffs it has ever had.

I am deeply grateful for the many assurances of support, which have come to me from every part of the county; but, whether I am nominated or not, I shall exert every honorable effort to bring about the election of the entire democratic ticket.

Faithfully yours,
B. E. JONES.

COUNTY COURT NOTICE.

TO WHOM IT MAY CONCERN:

As April 6th is election day and the people cannot be forced to leave their voting place, the Chilton County Court will not be held April the 6th, 1914. The court is continued and will be held on April 7th, 1914. All parties interested, witnesses and defendants are hereby notified to be present at this Court on Tuesday, April 7th 1914.

HON. W. L. LANCASTER

FOR STATE TREASURER.

The friends of W. L. Lancaster of Wetumpka, Alabama, believe him eminently qualified both by training and experience for the highest measure of efficient public service and they submit his record for your careful consideration in the belief that the Democrats of Alabama desire

LESS OF POLITICS and MORE OF BUSINESS.

LESS OF PROMISES and MORE OF PERFORMANCE.

A native born citizen of Elmore county, Alabama, a life-long Democrat and active party worker, President of the Bank of Wetumka and President of the Alabama Bankers' Association, 1910-11; State Senator 1902-06; Representative in the Legislature 1906-10. In an extensive farming and livestock raiser. In fraternal circles he is active member of the Masonic Brotherhood, an Odd Fellow, a K. of P., a Red Man, and Woodman. For [illegible] years he has been [illegible]

TO THE DEMOCRATIC VOTERS OF CHILTON

I am taking this opportunity of saying a few words in behalf of Hon. Ray Rushton, who is a candidate for United States Senator, short term. Owing to the lateness of calling the election of a short term Senator, by the State Committee, it has rendered it practically impossible for Mr. Rushton to get into every part of the State to personally place his claims before the people, and he has to rely upon the activity of his friends to look after his interest at these points where it is impossible for him to go.

Owing to the important measures now pending in Congress, it is highly important that the Democrats of Alabama elect to the short term Senatorship a strong patriotic man, and one who is thoroughly in accord with our great President and the principles of the Democratic party.

Mr. Rushton needs no introduction to the citizens of Chilton county, most all of us know him personally. He has practiced extensively at the Chilton County Bar, and all of the people have had an opportunity to observe his great learning and splendid bearing. He is a native Alabamian, and one who has by dent of his splendid ability and character, has made for himself a place in the front rank of the eminent jurists of the South.

Ray Rushton, the man, is summed up in his own patriotic language: "Claiming nothing more than high ideals of government, and promising nothing but to serve with an honest heart and such strength as I have to the very utmost of my ability, I submit to the Democrats of Alabama my candidacy for the unexpired term of the late Senator Johnston." Surely the Democrats of Chilton county and Alabama would make no mistake in electing as their Senator the man capable of such simple and yet sublime sentiments.

I am writing this letter to the Democrats of Chilton county, not as Chairman of the Executive Committee, but as a citizen of the State and a democrat who has the interest of his State at heart and who wants Alabama to resume her place in the United States Senate which it occupied when represented by John T. Morgan and Edmund W. Pettus. Faithfully yours,

E. M. PINCKARD.

Notice to Voters.

Having been tied up with court matters, it has not been my pleasure to meet with the voters and make as thorough canvass of the county as I had hoped for, and I am taking this method of assuring all my friends that I will appreciate their efforts in my behalf at next Monday's election, promising them should I receive the nomination, to do my utmost to bring the Democratic ticket to trimphant victory in the November election. However, if the voters decide at the primary that some other man is better qualified for this position, I will gracefully bow to their decision.

Respectfully,
W. F. Fallon.

We are glad to see Mr. Horace Smith out again after a three week's illness with pneumonia.

Hon. Charles Henderson Of Troy, Alabama.

Mr. Henderson is the champion of the railroad rate fight in Alabama, which has been in litigation for several years, and has cost the State hundreds of thousands of dollars, on account of the unconstitutional laws that were passed during Comer's administration—the lawyer fees alone were $143,000. Mr. Henderson took this matter of reform up in a legitimate and businesslike way, and the railroad companies have given up the contest, and Mr. Henderson, who is president of the Railroad Commission, has not paid out any fees to lawyers, but has succeeded in his undertaking, without any expense to the tax payers of the state, thus proving by his actions that he believes in economy, business and efficiency. Should Mr Henderson be elected governor, he will save the state's money, and not spend it trying to boost his political aspirations, at the expense of the tax payers.

Should Mr. Henderson be elected Governor of Alabama, the State will be [illegible] his administration [illegible] of business and progress [illegible] the interest of the people [illegible]

MRS. WILLIAMS' LONG SICKNESS

Yields To Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Elkhart, Ind.:—"I suffered for fourteen years from organic inflammation, female weakness, pain and irregularities. The pains in my sides were increased by walking or standing on my feet and I had such awful bearing down feelings, was depressed in spirits and became thin and pale with dull, heavy eyes. I had six doctors from whom I received only temporary relief. I decided to give Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound a fair trial and also the Sanative Wash. I have now used the remedies for four months and cannot express my thanks for what they have done for me.

"If these lines will be of any benefit you have my permission to publish them."—Mrs. SADIE WILLIAMS, 455 James Street, Elkhart, Indiana.

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, made from native roots and herbs, contains no narcotic or harmful drugs, and to-day holds the record of being the most successful remedy for female ills we know of, and thousands of voluntary testimonials on file in the Pinkham laboratory at Lynn, Mass., seem to prove this fact.

If you have the slightest doubt that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound will help you, write to Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co. (confidential) Lynn, Mass., for advice. Your letter will be opened, read and answered by a woman, and held in strict confidence.

FORMAN FOUND GUILTY.

Given Life Sentence at Ashville. Charged With Murder.

Gadsden.—G. B. Forman was found guilty of the murder of Connie Compton and given a life sentence. The defendant took his fate calmly. An appeal will be made.

The crime for which Forman was convicted was the murder of Connie Compton, a 19-year-old youth, at Springville, last November. The trouble followed a dispute about a dog. Because of the prominence of the principals in the case, it aroused intense interest, especially in St. Clair county, and standing room was at a premium throughout the trial.

FEARFUL DEATH OF ITALIAN.

Ground to Pieces By Car and Then Burned to Ashes.

Bessemer.—An Italian who was an employe of the Woodward company at the by-product plant at Woodward was killed by being burned and cut to pieces. It seems that the man was on the track, when he was knocked down, his leg being cut off. Immediately following this a carload of hot coke was dumped on the body of the man. Then the body was dumped into a hole and carried about 200 feet in the air in an elevator, after which it was dumped into a car. The body was shipped to Laurel, Miss., for burial.

FRUIT ESCAPES COLD.

Experts Declare Present Indications Point to Record-Breaking Yield.

Huntsville. — Fruit experts declare that the crop in this section has a splendid chance so far. The late freezes caught some peach, pear and plum trees in bloom, but few of them were far enough advanced to amount to anything serious. Conditions up to this date are the same as two years ago when a record-breaking crop of fruit was grown in North Alabama.

FOUR TABLETS UNVEILED.

Impressive Ceremonies Attend Exercises By U. D. C.

Auburn. — Most impressive ceremonies attended the unveiling in Auburn by the Admiral Semmes chapter of four tablets marking historic spots. The entire student body of the college and citizenship of the town, together with many prominent visitors, crowded in Langdon hall for the initial exercises.

Among the prominent visitors present were Dr. Howard M. Hamil, chaplain general of the United Confederate Veterans, Nashville; Mrs. Leigh of Montgomery, U. D. C., historian; Mr. and Mrs. A. F. McKissick of South Carolina, Mrs. L. M. Bashinsky, chairman of the scholarship committee, Troy; Mrs. R. P. Dexter, representing the Montgomery chapter; Dr. Thomas M. Owen of Montgomery, and many visitors from Opelika. Mrs. B. B. Ross, life president of the local chapter, presided and introduced the speakers in her usual happy manner.

STATE CONFERENCE POSTPONED

Proposed Meeting of Educators and Business Men Conflicts.

Birmingham. — The conference of business men throughout the State of Alabama and State educators, which was to have been held in Birmingham on April 8, immediately preceding the Alabama Educational association convention here, has been postponed indefinitely. Official announcement of the postponement was received in Birmingham from Bruce Kennedy, of Montgomery, chairman of the committee making arrangements for the conference. W. C. Radcliffe and Dr. J. H. Phillips, of Birmingham, were also on the committee, and both express their regrets at having to postpone the meeting.

The postponement of the conference was made necessary for the fact that the date set for the conference of business men and educators in Birmingham conflicts with the date of the Southern Educational association convention in Louisville, a number of the men who were to have taken a leading part in the conference in Birmingham, being on the program for the Southern Educational association in Louisville and consequently, being unable to attend the conference in Birmingham.

MORE EQUITABLE TAXES URGED.

Realty Association Addresses Letter to All Candidates for Legislature.

Birmingham. — Candidates for the Legislature from Jefferson county are being urged by the Real Estate Association of Birmingham, to take up the question of equitable tax assessments over the State. A cord, addressed to the candidates of the House and Senate and signed by officers of the association, calls attention to the present condition, which, it is said, places a burden on the wealthier counties of the State that is not exacted of the smaller counties.

It is claimed that it is so much easier to raise assessments in the wealthier counties that tax commissioners devote most of their activities in those counties. The real estate men of Birmingham claim that they bear an unequal share of the burdens of taxation and want relief.

STATE BRIEFS.

TRUE TO PRINCIPLE

Democrats Have Right to Be Proud of Administration.

Party Has Used the Power and Responsibility Conferred Upon It in a Manner Worthy of Its Great Traditions.

There will be difference of opinion as to the greatest achievement thus far of the Wilson administration. Some will find it in the income tax, which is the first successful attempt since the Civil war to shift part of the burden of government from poverty to wealth. Some will find it in the banking and currency law, which is the most important financial measure enacted since the original national banking act was passed as a war measure. Some will find it in the final submission of big business to public opinion as represented by the administration, and some will find it in the separation of the national government from Wall street, which is the most conspicuous result thus far of the president's policies.

These achievements are all of the highest importance; but they are all subordinate parts of a still greater accomplishment—the restoration of responsible, representative government. This is the supreme thing that has taken place under Mr. Wilson's leadership. Everything else is an effort following from this cause.

Without responsible, representative party government republican institutions cannot long endure. The policies and pledges of a party may be wise or unwise. They may be sound or weak, but unless that party when it is intrusted with the power and responsibility of government is prepared to redeem those promises in good faith and carry out its professed principles only political anarchy can follow. We do not mean that a political platform is sacred in all its planks, or that it is to be followed to the letter, regardless of common sense, or common honesty, or the common welfare. But we do mean that when a party in power pledges itself to a general line of policy it must adhere to that general line of policy, or representative government becomes a fraud and a lie. There can be no "government of the people, by the people and for the people" on any other terms. And when the people have finally lost all confidence in the integrity of representative government we have reached the beginning of the end.—New York World.

President's Official Family.

Surely, in union there is strength. One can use the president's felicitous expressions in speaking of Secretary of State Bryan and say of his whole official family that it seems to be bound together by ties of confidence and affectionate admiration. And that feeling that binds it into such an effective instrument of service is more and more inspiring a like feeling for it among all the people of the United States.

Bluff That Failed.

If the United States Steel corporation had unfilled orders for 4,282,108 tons of steel on New Year's day, with the certainty that further orders would come in faster than they could be supplied, why were apparently inspired statements going round that the steel industry of this country had gone into a decline, and that the great trust didn't know whether it could hope to do business at a fair profit or not?

Taft's Point of View.

Mr. Taft is notoriously not a politician and yet even he has political sense enough to see that under present conditions the election of a Democratic president is inevitable, unless there is a panic or hard times. If these be avoided, Mr. Taft says, the Democratic nominee can lose to Roosevelt the votes of those who do not think the present administration is radical enough and still be successful.

Credit Belongs to Wilson.

Only for President Wilson's intelligent, high-minded and stubborn devotion to the cause, currency legislation would have been postponed from month to month and from session to session, while the money trust cemented its power and perfected plans for a great central bank under Wall street control.

Excusable Bitterness.

What if a note of bitterness does creep into former President Taft's discussion of the Wilson administration? Can you blame a man who wrestled with Cannonism, Aldrichism, the insurgents and T. R. for envying a successor who gets things done?

Can Get Along Without Him.

Colonel Roosevelt's popularity has not diminished, but even his greatest admirers are no longer able to argue that he is invincible.

Triumph of American Institutions.

In his inaugural address Mr. Wilson said: "This is not a day of triumph; it is a day of dedication." Even the strongest opponent of his policies cannot impeach that pledge. The president has kept the faith. Under his leadership his party has kept the faith. That is what happened [illegible]

The Only Way.

Little John was full of mischief and during his first year at school hardly a day passed that he was not sent to stand in the corner.

When the schoolhouse burned down and a new one was immediately begun, the little boy went to his father, who was the county superintendent.

"Don't you think we could get the carpenter to build a round schoolhouse this time, father?" he said.

"Why, son?" his father asked in astonishment.

"Because," the little fellow answered, "I'm getting very tired of corners."

SAGE TEA AND SULPHUR DARKENS YOUR GRAY HAIR

Look Years Younger! Try Grandma's Recipe of Sage and Sulphur and Nobody Will Know.

Almost everyone knows that Sage Tea and Sulphur, properly compounded, brings back the natural color and lustre to the hair when faded, streaked or gray; also ends dandruff, itching scalp and stops falling hair. Years ago the only way to get this mixture was to make it at home, which is mussy and troublesome.

Nowadays we simply ask at any drug store for "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Hair Remedy." You will get a large bottle for about 50 cents. Everybody uses this old, famous recipe, because no one can possibly tell that you darkened your hair, as it does it so naturally and evenly. You dampen a sponge or soft brush with it and draw this through your hair, taking one small strand at a time; by morning the gray hair disappears, and after another application or two, your hair becomes beautifully dark, thick and glossy and you look years younger. —Adv.

How He Did It.

A famous clergyman tells of a lay preacher's conference in which a veteran described his method of sermon preparation.

"I take my text," he said, "and divide my sermon into three parts. In the first part I tell 'em what I'm going to tell 'em. In the second part—well, I tell 'em. In the third part I tell 'em what I've told 'em."

Bugs to Cost Uncle Sam $800,000 in Year 1915

WASHINGTON.—Bugs! Bugs that fly and bugs that burrow, bugs that bite and bugs that sting, big bugs and tiny bugs, ladybugs, and bugs anything but ladylike, are going to cost the federal government $800,000 during the fiscal year of 1915. That is the amount carried in the agricultural bill before congress. Dr. L. O. Howard, chief of the bureau of entomology and Uncle Sam's champion bug hunter, has pointed out, however, that these insects will cost the country fully 100 times that amount in cotton destroyed; corn and wheat and other grain crops injured; forests devastated; root crops ruined and fields laid almost bare. It is to stop such ravages as these that the bureau is maintained. That it saves many times its cost every year is demonstrated easily by statistics.

The biggest bug from the standpoint of destructiveness is the boll weevil, which is slowly but certainly retreating before the attacks of government scientists. But the "sinews of war" provided by the appropriation bill also are wanted for campaigns against the gipsy moth, which attacks tree foliage; the horn worm, that destroys tobacco plants; the cane insect that lays low cane fields; the alfalfa weevil, which attacks that crop; the cinch bug, that sucks the life from wheat and cornstalks; the codling moth, that spoils tree fruits; the pine beetle, and the bark beetle. The latter insect is a serious menace to the national and private forests, because it destroys millions of feet of standing timber.

"We have undertaken an extensive study of the house fly," said Dr. Howard. "In the small farm and village 99 per cent of the house flies are bred in stable refuse, and we have been co-operating with the bureau of chemistry to find some substance that will kill the larvae and not impair the fertilizing value of the refuse.

"We have several lines of work now going on in regard to the effect of insects on the health of man and animals. We wish, in the first place, to complete the records of longevity of the cattle ticks. Then, as to stable flies: This insect has been shown to be instrumental in the carriage of infantile paralysis. We also expect to undertake a series of malarial fever studies and the bionomics of malarial mosquitoes, in order to provide remedies for the requirements of plantations, especially in the Mississippi delta."

Thought He Read From Congressional Record

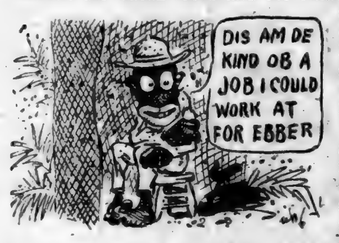
EVERY one who has read "Chimmie Fadden" knows "Ned" Townsend, the author, and now representing a district in northern New Jersey. So much for the introduction. "Ned" Townsend had to make a speech in Newark the other day, and as he had some serious thoughts to impart, he went to the trouble of writing out a portion of the things he really wanted to deliver to that after-dinner audience. When he reached Newark a reporter for the Call spotted him and asked him if he had an advance copy of the stuff he was about to get off his chest.

"I have this bunch of notes," said Townsend, "and that is all."

The reporter said he could take the notes to the office, have them set up in type and promised to send a proof of the remarks back to Townsend in plenty of time for dinner. All of which he did.

Mr. Townsend arose in his appointed time, and after delivering himself of the usual introductory remarks, said that as he had a serious purpose in mind he would like permission to read some of the things he had written on the train going north. And he pulled out the proof.

The next speaker was a bank examiner. He started off something like this:



"Gentlemen, you have been imposed upon. You have heard Mr. Townsend say that he wrote out his speech on the train, but I have been watching him every minute and I tell you upon my word of honor that he did not read from a written manuscript at all. He read from the Congressional Record."

Whereupon every one laughed. Townsend can tell that story to men who know the speed with which newspaper proofs are "pulled" after the "copy" goes into the composing room, but it would never have done to try to explain at a dinner that he read from the proof of a speech he had handed to a newspaper reporter only an hour or two previous. No, indeed. The ordinary idea of a piece of proof brings up visions of careful writing, long dickering with a printer, seeing a first proof, waiting three days for a corrected proof, and then finding an error perhaps in the "corrected" proof.

No. It won't do. The people at that dinner probably firmly believe that Ned Townsend worked a week or a month on that speech.

Negro Used for Mosquito Bait in Canal Zone

COL. WILLIAM L. SIBERT, U. S. A., builder of the Gatun locks, the Gatun dam, the breakwater at Colon harbor, and the excavation of the channel between the Gatun locks and the Atlantic ocean, has written an interesting article on the Panama canal, his first contribution on the subject, for the National Geographic society. In his article, Colonel Sibert humorously writes of the effort to rid the Canal Zone of mosquities.

"In 1912 Gatun had probably the greatest influx of malarial mosquitoes in its history," he writes. "The sanitary department determined to locate all the breeding places of mosquitoes near Gatun, catch mosquitoes at each place, and after painting them turn them loose, and determine from the color of the mosquitoes caught in Gatun from what point they came. I went down there one morning to see how they were caught and painted. Mosquito bars were suspended from limbs tied up at the bottom. They had thousands of mosquitoes in them ready to be sprayed with a colored liquid, and the sanitary inspector was asked how he caught them. He said, 'We have a more scientific way, but this had to be done in a hurry. We simply let the mosquito bar down, as you would open a bed, left one side of it open, and put a Jamaica negro in there for bait.' As soon as the mosquito bar was full the bait was removed and the end tied up. I saw a Jamaica negro standing there. 'John, were you the bait in that bar?' I asked, and he replied, 'Yes, boss; that is the easiest money I ever earned—10 cents an hour for sitting there and doing nothing but just inviting the mosquitoes in.'"

No Secret in the Manufacture of Money Paper

THERE is an erroneous idea, very generally held, that paper money is printed on paper manufactured by a secret process, which is carefully guarded from the public. The truth is that almost any paper house could make the identical paper, were it not prohibited by law from doing so. The matter of getting the silk fiber into the fabric is comparatively simple, and the appearance of these tiny shreds, often cleverly imitated with a fine pen, but infrequently induces the inexperienced to accept a counterfeit bill of which they are suspicious. With the development of photo-engraving the shady art of counterfeiting received a big impetus. Prior to that industry only experts could hope to produce bills that would pass even casual inspection. And as man's handwork always expresses his individuality, the "thumb print" of every counterfeiter was literally on every bill he put out. Today, however, bills may be duplicated by a purely mechanical process; but the lines are heavy and uneven, easily visible and no imitation may get by an inexperienced eye. The expert can spot it at a glance.

BROUGHT HER BACK TO LIFE

Remarkable Cure That Was Effected By the Administration of Ardent Spirits.

On his return to his native heath a year or two ago, P. J. O'Keefe found the neighborhood very much agitated. Nellie, the oldest woman in the parish, was dying.

Her friends, arriving at her home, found her lying back in her easy chair, apparently about to pass over the last threshold. Nellie, being a good housewife, carried a bunch of keys at her girdle and, thinking that she was now gone, one of the neighbors reached under the folds of her dress to find the key that would unlock the closet where her shroud was kept. As the good woman was fumbling at the girdle she felt a sly pinch of her hand and knew by that that there was still a spark of life remaining.

"Perhaps," she suggested, "a wee drop of brandy would revive her."

A teaspoonful of brandy was administered, but with only a flickering response. So the friends departed sorrowfully, forgetting, however, to remove the bottle from her side. On their return a few hours later they discovered that the brandy had vanished and that Nellie had completely recovered. She lived to be more than one hundred years old. "But that," says Mr. O'Keefe, "was the story of Nellie's dying."

DOES ALL OF HER OWN WORK

And is Glad to Do So, as She Was Denied this Privilege For Two Years.

Richmond, Ky.—Mrs. N. V. Willis, of this place, says: "I suffered for over three years with womanly trouble, and tried many different treatments, but none of them seemed to do me any good. I had almost given up to die, when a friend of mine begged me to try Cardui, the woman's tonic. I got a bottle, and began to feel a great deal better after the first few doses. I then got four bottles, and after taking these I was cured.

I don't know what a female pain is now, do all of my work, eat anything I want, and feel like a 16 year old girl.

I never expect to be without Cardui in my house as long as I live, as I firmly believe it saved my life, and I will praise it to all of my suffering lady friends."

Cardui is a purely vegetable remedy, containing no harmful mineral products. Its ingredients act in a helping, building way, on the womanly constitution. It has been relieving womanly troubles for over half a century, during which time it has proven of more than ordinary value as a tonic for weak women.

You can rely on Cardui. It will do for you what it has done for thousands of others. Begin taking it today.

In a Roman School.

The Osservatore Romano, the official organ of the Holy See, relates that in one of the female secondary schools of Rome the teacher of history is an atheist and that recently, while explaining the crusades, she asked her pupils whether they believed in Jesus Christ. All the young girls replied in the affirmative, whereupon the teacher sadly shook her head and said it was a pity that not one girl was sufficiently intelligent to be an atheist.—Chicago Tribune.

Uric Acid is Slow Poison

Unseen in its approach, hard to detect in its early stages, and cruelly painful in its later forms, uric acid poisoning is a disease too often fatal.

Bright's disease is one of the final stages of uric acid poisoning. It kills in our country every year more men and women than any other ailment except two—consumption and pneumonia. Bright's disease and uric acid poisoning usually start in some kidney weakness that would not be hard to cure, if discovered early, so it is well to know the early signs of kidney disease and uric poisoning.

When uric acid is formed too fast and the kidneys are weakened by a cold, or fever, by overwork, or by overindulgences, the acid collects, the blood gets impure and heavy, there is headache, dizziness, heart palpitation, and a dull, heavy-headed, drowsy feeling with disturbances of the urine.

Real torture begins when the uric acid forms into gravel or stone in the kidney, or crystallizes into jagged bits in the muscles, joints or on the nerve tubings. Then follow the awful pains of neuralgia, rheumatism, gout, sciatica, neuritis, lumbago or kidney colic.

"I don't know what ails me."

It is but a further step to dropsy or Bright's disease.

Be warned by backache, by sediment in the kidney secretions, by painful, scant or too frequent passages. Cure the weakened kidneys. Use Doan's Kidney Pills—a medicine made just for weak kidneys, that has been proved good in years of use, in thousands of cases—the remedy that is recommended by grateful users from coast to coast.

Doctors Couldn't Help Her

Georgia Woman Almost Gave Up in Despair

Mrs. Sabra Burgess, Toccoa, Ga., says: "Twelve years ago I began to suffer from rheumatic trouble and kidney disease. Doctors said my system was filled with uric acid poisoning. The kidney secretions were scanty and too frequent in passage and bothered me greatly at night. My back got terribly weak and painful and there was a bearing-down sensation through my loins. As the disease progressed, severe pains ran from my head and neck, down through my shoulders, into my right side and limb. I tried almost everything, but nothing helped me, even six months' treatment by doctors brought no relief. I was in despair. While in this critical condition, I began using Doan's Kidney Pills and the relief was miraculous. By the time I had used six boxes, all the ailments had left me. That happened four years ago and I have never suffered since."

Too Much to Ask.

Little June Marie's mother is very indulgent, but there are times when even she draws the line.

One very hot day last July, when all nature drooped, a neighbor saw June Marie and her mother toiling along the street under a blazing sun. June Marie was weeping aloud, struggling and holding back, but her mother dragged her firmly on over the road.

"Why, what's the matter with June Marie?" the neighbor asked.

Her mother looked patiently at the neighbor, while the perspiration ran down her glowing face. "She's crying because I wouldn't let her wear her mittens," she said.—Youth's Companion.

RINGWORM SPREAD ON HAND

R. F. D. No. 2, Box 67, Ellijay, Ga.—"My son's ringworm began on the back of his hand. A fiery red spot came about as large as a dime and it would itch so badly he would scratch it till it bled. It began to spread till it went all over his hand. He would just scream every time I went to wash it. The nail came off on the middle finger.

"I used ——— and it got worse all the time. The trouble lasted two or three months. Then I sent and got some Cuticura Soap and Ointment and began to use them. I would wash his hand with the Cuticura Soap and dry it good and apply the Cuticura Ointment. WAS NOT REVENGEFUL MAN

But at the Same Time Dog Owner Meant That His Pet Should Have a Fair Show.

"I am not a revengeful man," said a Brooklyn real estate dealer, "but now and then I do want to get even. A few days ago I drove out as far as Mineola in a horse and buggy, and my dog followed me. He's no fighter as a dog, and it was a bad trip for him. Every time we passed a farm house a dog came rushing out to roll my canine in the dust, and he was licked 36 different times before we got home. I was sorry for him and mad at the other dogs, and three or four days later I got a loan of a mastiff and made the trip over again. There was fun from the start to finish. The same farmers' dogs came bounding off the fence to chew up something, and most of them got hold of the mastiff before they knew whether he was a poodle or an elephant. They saw their mistake too late. Lord, he slayed 'em right and left. He simply left a trail of howling, limping dogs from Prospect park to Mineola and back, and I've been told that some of the farmers along the road have offered as high as $20 for my scalp. No; I'm not a revengeful man, but I want to see my dog have a fair show in this world, don't you know."

This is the last week of the campaign, the election taking place on Monday next. As a matter of county pride, as well as for other reasons, every democrat should go to the polls and rally to democracy's standard.

Chilton will return handsome majorities for Senator Curry and Judge Deason.

The people in the Fourth District want a man in Congress who will be the representative of all the people, and for that reason they are going to elect Judge Deason by a large majority.

The campaign for State officers has been hard and stubbornly fought, from Governor on down to the smallest office candidates have canvassed the State from one end to the other, ond have flooded every county with literature. We doubt if there is a hamlet in Alabama that has not been invaded by at least one candidate.

We wish to commend to the voters the candidacy of Judge William H. Thomas, of Montgomery for Associate Justice of the Supreme Court. Judge Thomas served ten years as Judge of the City Court of Montgomery, and his long experience as a jurist renders him most eminently fitted for a place on the highest judicial tribunal in Alabama. Aside from being an able jurist Judge Thomas is a high-toned Christian gentleman, and a good clean man in every respect. You will make no mistake by voting for him.

The meeting of the County Executive Committee which was called for last Saturday at the Court House at Clanton was not held on account of no quorum. The meeting was called on short notice and some of the members did not receive notice in time to come. There was no special business on hand the meeting having been called to discuss the political situation in the County, and Mr. Pinckhard states that the Committee will not be called together now until after the Primary of the 6th inst.

Coroner's Inquest.

We, the jury summoned by J. W. E. Gulledge. N. P. & Exof. J. P., and Exof. Coroner of said state and county, to make an inquiry concerning the death of a certain person upon the view of his body, and being duly sworn to enquire concerning his death, who he was, when, where and by what means he came to his death, did assemble near the residence of A. J. Wilson and later in the office of J. W. E. Gulledge at Clanton, Alabama, do render this our verdict:

We find that the deceased was a negro, that his name was Charlie Young, that he came to his death by being hung by the neck and further by being shot by a party or parties to this jury unknown, that the deceased came to his death about 8:30 o'clock p.m, March 21st, 1914

From the evidence and proof before this jury we find that the deceased had assaulted, beat and ravished the wife of Mr. A. J. Wilson on the morning of the day of his death.

We further find from the proofs and evidence that the deceased was never, at any time, in the custody or in charge of the Sheriff of Chilton County, or in charge or custody of any person representing said Sheriff.

"The People of Chilton County Want to Know" how the watch sale come out last Saturday. It's like this every Saturday just to advertise his business, Dr. Higgins, the reliable watch and eye man, sells in front of his store a nice watch to the highest bidder for cash. Two weeks ago a nice $16.00 Elgin watch, in gold case was sold to Mr. Marion Driver, near Cooper, for $5.30. Saturday, the 28th, (last) Mr. Tippett, of Clanton, bought a nice Waltham gold case for $6.75. worth $18.50, but some seem to want one size watch and some another. Some want an open face and some a hunting case (or closed face). So now he will continue to sell one watch each Saturday, but, he has changed his mode of selling just a little bit—he will put up three watches, one hunting, one open face and one ladies' gold watch, and the watch that brings the most dollars and cents will be the sold watch for that day. MASTIC PAINT

A Lesson in Real Economy

Take two houses—both alike—
Spend about $50 to MASTIC PAINT one—
Let the other go unpainted—

Offer them both for sale—
You'll wonder why the unpainted house finds no buyer at even $500 less than the MASTIC PAINTED house will bring.

At the beginning both houses represented equal value.

The Lesson: A few gallons of MASTIC PAINT properly applied at the right time greatly increases the value of your property.

Your building needs painting Right Now, but don't use keglead or hand-mixed paints. It may be cheaper at the start, but is costly and unsatisfactory in the end.

UNDERWOOD AGAINST ADMINISTRATION

USES DEMOCRATIC PLATFORM AS EXCUSE FOR FIGHT AGAINST WILSON THE SAME PLATFORM THAT HE DENOUNCED IN ALABAMA.

Oscar W. Underwood, candidate for the Senate in Alabama, supported staunchly by the Republicans in Congress, is leading the fight in the House of Representatives against President Wilson's administration bill, which proposes to repeal the exemption from canal tolls of American coastwise vessels.

The opening guns were sounded Friday.

When Representative Campbell, who is leading the fight for the REPUBLICANS against the Wilson administration, yielded to Mr. Underwood, there were cheers from the Republican side of the House, according to the press reports.

Representative Adamson of Georgia is leading the fight for the Democratic administration. Mr. Adamson in bitter language declared that no friend of the administration could vote against President Wilson. His language was as follows:

"Whoever fights this repeal now, not only fights the honest equality and domestic economy of his people's duty, but he fights the administration on the foreign policy of the government, and if disaster results he must take his place and share the odium and responsibility for whatever disaster may come."

After the lines had thus been so clearly drawn, Mr. Underwood took his place with the Reactionary Democrats and Republicans and started his fight against the administration. His reason for thus opposing President Wilson in the latter's effort to keep the Shipping Trust from victory over the plain people and the United States from breaking an honorable treaty, was the fact that the Democratic Platform called for it.

Quotes the Platform.

The Associated Press dispatch read as follows:

Mr. Underwood quoted the tolls exemption plank from the Baltimore platform and continuing said: "There can be no contention as to the meaning of this language. No one can raise the issue that the bill now pending before the House introduced by the gentleman from Tennessee (Mr. Sims) is not in direct conflict with the declaration of the Democratic platform. Personally I believe that the party pledge should be lived up to in good faith by those who claim allegiance to party principles."

Judging from this, Mr. Underwood evidently considers it a heinous crime to go back on the Democratic platform. One is a little startled therefore, when he recalls the plain dictates of the Democratic platform on the question of COTTON GAMBLING and Captain Hobson's bill to protect the dignity and honor of the American Uniform.

THE DEADLY PARALLEL.

Mr. Underwood went through Alabama boasting of the fact that he single-handed and alone defeated the Clarke amendment. The Clarke amendment would have abolished gambling in cotton futures and stopped the robbery of the farmers.

The DEMOCRATIC PLATFORM speaks in very plain language on that subject. It says:

"We favor the enactment by Congress of legislation that will suppress the pernicious practice of gambling in agricultural products by organized exchanges or others."

THEN AGAIN

Oscar Underwood went through Alabama denouncing Captain Hobson's bill to protect the dignity and honor of the Uniform of the American soldier. This bill passed the House unanimously. It provided against discrimination against the soldier because OF THE UNIFORM and did not say that discrimination could not be made for some other reason.

The DEMOCRATIC PLATFORM speaks in very plain language on that subject. It says:

"We commend to the several States the adoption of a law making it an offense for the proprietors of places of public amusement and entertainment to discriminate against the Uniform of the United States SIMILAR TO THE LAW PASSED BY THE CONGRESS applicable to the District of Columbia and the territories in 1911."

WILSON & UNDERWOOD

The Deadly Parallel

Oscar Underwood says he and Wilson stand together on all important questions. The following is cited:

Wilson favors the Initiative, Referendum and Recall.	Underwood is against these measures and made speeches to that effect.
Wilson votes dry in local option elections.	Underwood votes wet.
Wilson scorned Ryan's contribution.	Underwood accepted $35,000 from Thos. F. Ryan.
Wilson says: We must not in honor break the Hay-Pauncefote treaty.	Underwood says: What's honor got to do with it?
Wilson made Bryan Secretary of State.	Underwood called Bryan a liar.
Wilson was the people's choice for President.	Underwood was run by Wall street.
Wilson is in favor of conservation of nature's resources.	Underwood believes in giving giant corporations control of natural resources as proved by his vote on Coosa River steal.
Wilson is a total abstainer.	Underwood, according to his own confession, "takes his drink when he likes it."

These differences, Democrats of Alabama, are about as wide as a church door.

SEN. CLARKE RE-ELECTED IN ARKANSAS ON SINGLE ISSUE OF COTTON GAMBLING

WAS OPPOSED BY BARRELS OF WALL STREET MONEY, BUT HIS STAND ON THIS ISSUE BROUGHT HIM VICTORY. CLARKE DENOUNCED UNDERWOOD.

On the single issue of cotton gambling, Senator James P. Clarke of Arkansas has been returned to office in that State by a decisive majority. The primary was held last Wednesday and though William G. Kirby, his opponent, claimed that he would be elected by 25,000 or more, the solid rural vote of the State more than overcame the efforts of the clique which was opposing Senator Clarke.

Senator Clarke is the author of the Clarke amendment to the tariff bill, which proposed such a heavy tax on the handling of cotton, as to drive all of the Cotton Exchange gamblers out of existence.

The amendment passed the Senate, but when it came to the House Oscar Underwood, who is now a candidate for the Senate in Alabama, by throwing the weight of the whole tariff bill and his own personal influence against it, managed to bring about its defeat.

His accomplished this by offering a substitute. Senator Clarke was familiar with the Underwood substitute. It had been shown him first by A MEMBER OF THE NEW ORLEANS COTTON EXCHANGE.

It proposed to REGULATE the Cotton Exchanges. So did Senator Clarke's, but it proposed to regulate by SUPPRESSION.

Democrat Platform Called for It.

Senator Clarke had every reason to believe that his constituents wanted the suppression of cotton gambling. In fact every Democrat did, for the Democratic platform plainly declared against cotton gambling in the following language:

WE FAVOR THE ENACTMENT BY CONGRESS OF LEGISLATION THAT WILL SUPPRESS THE PERNICIOUS PRACTICE OF GAMBLING IN AGRICULTURAL PRODUCTS BY ORGANIZED EXCHANGES OR OTHERS.

The Underwood substitute, if it had been a meritorious measure, would have benefited the farmers none and the reactionaries in the House never thought that it would when they voted for it. Some of the younger members in the House, honestly thought that it would. They didn't realize that it was an old parliamentary trick, intended only to defeat the Clarke amendment.

When Senator Clarke opened his campaign for re-election at Morrilton, Ark., he declared in unmistakable language: "It took all the trickery that Oscar Underwood could command to defeat this amendment." This was the keynote of all his speeches.

With this as the main theme, he went into the highways and byways of Arkansas. The farmers saw the truth. And the farmers have returned Senator Clarke to the Senate ON THAT SINGLE ISSUE.

There was determined opposition to Senator Clarke. Barrels of Wall street money was spent in Arkansas on account of his militant stand against the cotton gambler.

But the farmers saw the truth.

BURLESON ADMITS UNDERWOOD FAVORS COTTON EXCHANGES

Underwood Substitute First Shown to Senator Clarke by Member of New Orleans Cotton Exchange.

In a letter to Oscar W. Underwood, printed this week in the Birmingham Age-Herald, A. S. Burleson admitted what the Hobson forces have always contended that the Underwood substitute to the Clarke amendment proposed to perpetuate and not destroy the cotton exchange.

The Clarke amendment, which was supported by practically every progressive in the House, proposed to abolish the cotton exchanges. The abolition and not the regulation of the cotton exchange has always been the object of such legislation as was approved by the Farmers' Union and the abolition and not the regulation is what the Farmers' Union now wants.

The question of cotton exchanges has been taken up exhaustively by different investigators. The principal research work along this line was done by Senator George of Mississippi and he came to the conclusion that cotton gambling and its attendant evils, could only be abolished by the exchanges.

Practically the same sort of investigation was made by Thomas Lawson and Everybody's Magazine has been engaged for several years in fighting the cotton exchanges.

Member of Exchange.

In regard to the Underwood amendment, which Mr. Burleson says was partly framed by him, it was shown to Senator Clarke before it ever came up in the House. The man who showed it to Senator Clarke was A MEMBER OF THE NEW ORLEANS COTTON EXCHANGE.

But Senator Clarke refused to temporize with the evil. Accordingly his amendment which would have abolished the Cotton Exchanges and therefore cotton gambling, was introduced and only failed to pass the House when the Underwood substitute was introduced.

Incidentally Mr. Underwood's substitute was also lost in the shuffle. His introduction of this amendment was done principally to defeat the Clarke amendment and it was a well-known fact that his substitute would have made no particular difference to the Cotton Gambler.

Mr. Burleson's admission, coming as it does from a man who has always fought Hobson, makes doubly strong Captain Hobson's claim that Underwood is in favor of perpetuating the Cotton Exchange.

Mr. Burleson not only had a part in framing the Underwood substitute, but he voted against the Webb bill and he fought with all his might the Jones-Works amendment to remove saloons from the neighborhood of school houses and churches.

WALTER D. SEED.

Walter D. Seed favors educational appropriations mainly for public schools; the payment of old soldiers in full; appropriations directly for the advancement of the farmer upon the farm, and the repeal of the Back Tax Commission law. He opposes any further increase of taxation; any further raise in salaries, or added number of office holders.

After the railroads surrendered, the benefits to be derived from reduction in railroad rates have been delayed until after May 18th, just one week after the second primary. Is not this delay caused in order that Charles Henderson may continue his candidacy undisturbed? If the reduction in freight secured should prove to be three or more millions of dollars annually, has not this delay for several months cost the people of Alabama a million of dollars?

Mr. Seed is a farmer; not a single farmer has been Governor of the State since the sixties.

The impression prevails that about one hundred thousand dollars has been spent in the interest of the two candidates for Governor virtually trying to buy the office. Do you endorse this? The impression is growing that Seed is the only man who can certainly win if in the second primary, and should therefore be voted for in the first. Every Seed man has been made a vice-president of the Seed Club; let him post himself and either deliver speeches in his behalf, or work in his behalf, from now until the close of the election day.

FOUND THE MEANEST MAN

Little Doubt That Turk's Bequest Was Bestowed as He Intended It Should Be.

A Turkish story runs that, dying, a pious man bequeathed a fortune to his son, charging him to give $500 to the meanest man he could find, and $500 to the most foolish.

The most foolish man is another story; as to the meanest, accounts agreed that a certain cadi filled the bill. Accordingly the dutiful son offered him $500.

"But I can't take your $500," said the cadi. "I never knew your father; there was no reason why he should leave me money."

"It's yours all right," persisted the mourning youth.

"I might take it in a fictitious transaction," said the cadi, relenting. "Suppose—I'll tell you what I'll do. I'll sell you all that snow in the courtyard for $500."

The young man agreed, willing to be quit of his trust on any terms. Next day he was arrested, taken before the cadi, and ordered to remove his snow at once. Being unable to comply he was fined $100 for contumacy.

"At least," he said, ruefully, as he left the court, "father's $500 went to the right man."—New York World.

Fatal Premonition.

Grant Duff in his diary tells a curious story of a "seeress." Mlle. Lenormand was consulted by Robespierre and Napoleon I. Grant Duff's father had a strange experience with Mlle. Lenormand. He said a friend went to consult her, and after she had told him what he wanted to know, she tried with the friend, but became confused, said her heart failed her and begged him to leave the house. He persuaded her to try again, and again the same result followed. Then, declaring that this had never happened to her before, she lost all patience and implored him to leave instantly. He did so, and as he passed out of her door was knocked down and killed by a heavy wagon.

An Arab who visited New York city is said to have sent this letter home: "People in America travel like rats under the ground (meaning the subway), and like squirrels in the air (meaning the elevated railways), and the buildings are so high that people have to be put in square boxes and pulled to the top by heavy ropes (meaning the elevator). In this way the sun furnishes the light the same as in Morocco, so might the Moors as pious as they are, but people here do

MALICE IN HOST'S REMARK

Even Thick-Skinned Man of Wealth Could Hardly Fail to Understand the Insinuation.

It was probably only Robinson's wealth that had allowed his intrusion in the very select shooting party. He was certainly quite the worst shot that had ever happened in the neighborhood, and everyone was determined after the first day that either he should retire or that on the morrow he should have the moors to himself. Blissfully unconscious of the impression he had produced, he was talking very big after dinner.

"By Jove, yes!" he remarked, in reminiscent mood. "In my young days I brought down a grizzly in the Rockies. They told me it was the biggest they had ever seen."

His host leant forward very quietly. "You don't say so," he observed, with glassy eye. "And what were you aiming at?"

Bruno Was Vindicated.

A lady leading a Scotch terrier by a silver chain entered a street car, eastbound, the other afternoon. The dog crawled under the seat and went to sleep. Presently a stout man carrying a market basket took the vacant place beside her. In a few blocks the woman began to get nervous. "Stop it, Bruno!" she cried in a shrill whisper. She had no dog permit and the situation was delicate.

Presently she turned pale and, jerking the chain, cried: "Lie down Bruno, and behave yourself!" A moment later she jumped up and began to do a solo dance. The fat man beside her stared at her in astonishment. Then an idea struck him, and he stooped over and looked at his basket. Recovering himself with a great effort, he said:

"Madam, when you are through with my lobster will you kindly return it to me?"

It took smelling salts to bring the lady to herself. But Bruno was vindicated.—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

The old and good jokes some precious near to being matched in real life. Phil May's little girl, watching the boy at the hokey-pokey stand, and remarking: "Don't he make a mawd of his stummick? That's the second 'ag'orth I've seed 'im have this morn-in'," was cupped by a certain pony-tailed one of the "tactile print-ups" at a tango tea. A slim and satisfied-looking young man had just made her acquaintance. He was also another acquaintance of the same kind.

"Does your mother know that you actually eat food?" he asked the most

THE WILSON ADMINISTRATION DEFENDS O. W. UNDERWOOD

Burleson Crushes Attacks of Hobson and McElderry on Cotton-Futures Bill.

Hobson and McElderry and the Hobson writers have fiercely attacked Mr. Underwood on account of his substitute for the Clarke amendment to the tariff bill, saying that Underwood was in conspiracy with the Wall Street gamblers. (Hobson's Tuscaloosa speech, March 21, and everywhere. Shamed out of all other charges, they have stuck to this to the last.

Underwood's Statement.

Many months ago Mr. Underwood stated the facts about this matter in the following words:

"As to the Clarke amendment (relating to the cotton exchange dealings), the amendment we offered in the House was prepared by Postmaster General Burleson and the Secretary of Agriculture, Houston, and handed me by the President of the United States in the presence of Senator Simmons, of North Carolina. He asked me to offer it as a substitute for the Clarke amendment, all of these gentlemen believing that it better protected the farmer's interests and at the same time did not work the injury that would have been done by the Clarke amendment.

As stated in my former letter, I offered this substitute in the House, passed it and sent it to the Senate, and we would have legislated on the subject if the Senate had not receded from its own amendment and carried my substitute out of the bill."

The Final Word.

Office of Postmaster General,
Washington, D. C., Mar. 23, 1914.
Hon. O. W. Underwood,
House of Representatives:

My Dear Mr. Underwood—My attention has been attracted by an article which appeared recently in the Birmingham Ledger, wherein it was sought to show that you, in proposing and advancing your cotton amendment to the Underwood tariff bill, acted in a manner prejudicial to the interests of the cotton growers.

The statements contained in this article are calculated to do you a grave injustice, and it is in the interest of fairness that the public be correctly informed as to the true origin of the amendment and its real merits.

The amendment originated with the Secretary of Agriculture and myself, and was sponsored by you at the request of the President. Both Mr. Houston and myself are intimately acquainted with the conditions in the cotton industry and are keenly sensitive to the needs of the producers. Our plan was designed to free the cotton growers from the iniquitous trade conditions, the correction of which has for several years engrossed the attention of the best friends of the cotton growers. The amendment, as approved by the President and advocated by you, was the result of our combined judgments.

Cotton Legislation.

Under the present economic conditions the cotton exchange is a necessary institution designed to perform a useful function for the industry, and if properly regulated it will contribute materially to the welfare of the grower. The amendment proposed by you would have defined the proper field for the exchange and would not in any way have impaired its usefulness. The growers would be protected against these speculators whose operations for many years have created artificial trade conditions under which the value of cotton has been depressed. It is conceivable that such speculators might oppose this proposed legislation, but there is no possible ground on which it might be opposed on behalf of the producers.

Underwood's Untiring Efforts.

It therefore seems clear that in no act in your long record of untiring effort in the interest of your agricultural constituents have you ever displayed greater foresight or more zeal in their behalf than in promoting this amendment.

H. C. SELHEIMER SAYS O'NEAL STATEMENT ABOUT HIM IS "FALSE"

State's Chief Counsel in Rate Litigation Says His "Opinion Was Not Asked as to Whether the Compromise Should Be Made," and It Was a "Humiliating Surrender to the Railroads."

SAYS AGREEMENT WAS SIGNED TEN DAYS BEFORE IT WAS MADE PUBLIC

Declares That He Had Advised the Governor and the Railroad Commission That the State Would Be Successful In All the Litigation"—Says O'Neal and Henderson Ignorant of Rate Litigation.

UNMASKS THE COMPROMISE CONSPIRATORS

(From Mobile Register, March 27, 1914)—Special to The Mobile Register.

Birmingham, Ala., Mar. 26.—When Governor O'Neal made his speech in Montgomery Monday night he little realized that he had stirred up a hornet that would turn on him and sting him as a Governor of Alabama has seldom, if ever, been stung. This hornet is Mr. H. C. Selheimer, chief counsel for Alabama in the railroad rate cases that have been in process of litigation for the past seven years. He issued today a reply to that part of Governor O'Neal's address which related to the compromise with the railroads, in which Governor O'Neal stated that Governor Comer had toyed with the truth when he said that Mr. Selheimer had not been consulted and had not agreed to the settlement.

Mr. Selheimer characterizes the statement of the Governor as it relates to himself as "utterly false," and again as "false in all its parts." He says further that his "opinion was not asked as to whether the compromise should be made," and that the "entire proceeding was a humiliating surrender to the railroads." Declaring that the Governor and the president of the railroad commission, Charles Henderson, were "entirely ignorant of the facts" in the State's litigation, he says that the only attorneys they seem to have consulted were railroad attorneys.

Mr. Selheimer also makes the startling disclosure that the agreement was signed with the railroads ten days before it was made public, and that he had advised the Governor and the Railroad Commission that the State would "be successful in all the litigation."

Quotes Governor's Words.

Mr. Selheimer's statement in full:

"In his speech at Montgomery on Monday night, as the same is printed verbatim in Tuesday's Birmingham News, Governor O'Neal is reported to have used the following language with reference to my connection with the recent settlement of the rate cases:

"'Before the agreement was signed Mr. Selheimer was called up at his office in Birmingham and had the agreement fully explained and read over to him, and every suggestion which he made embodied in the agreement. Not one word of objection did he express to the compromise.'

"This statement was evidently made for the purpose of conveying the impression to the people of Alabama that I was consulted with as to the advisability of making the compromise agreed upon between the railroads and Governor O'Neal and the railroad commission, and that I approved the compromise so effected. As such the statement is so utterly false, so misleading and inconsistent with the fact that I feel that I should not allow it to pass unchallenged. It is false in all its parts (except the bare fact that I was called up over the phone) and in the inference that was intended to be drawn from the whole.

Selheimer's Connection.

"My sole connection with the matter was as follows: The agreement of compromise was signed on Saturday, February 21, 10 days before it was made public. Between 1 o'clock and 1:30 on that day the Attorney General called me up over the long distance phone and told me that the railroad people (naming them) were in Montgomery to settle the rate cases. He said they had agreed to put in a 2 1-2-cent rate for intrastate and interstate passenger travel, and that all litigation was to be dismissed. He then said he wanted to read to me 'one paragraph' of the agreement and get my opinion about it. He then read to me over the phone the third paragraph of the agreement which provides that nothing in the agreement nor in the decree of Judge Jones shall be construed or pleaded so as to preclude the railroad commission from exercising its lawful powers to revise the passenger and freight rates in the future. This was the only part of the agreement that was read to me and the only part that was explained to me except that the railroads agreed to put in a 2 1-2-cent rate. Not a word was said about that part of the agreement which relieves the railroads from liability to redeem the passenger coupons and freight receipts, representing excess charges in the past. The part of the agreement read to me was so unimportant and so unnecessary that I gave it no particular thought. I made some suggestion in regard to it so unimportant that I do not now recall what it was.

"I then inquired what the railroads had agreed to do as to the freight rates. He replied that they had not made any agreement as to the freight rates. I then told him to insist on their settling the freight rates as well as the passenger. He replied that they were unwilling to agree upon a settlement of the freight rates then; that they wanted to take that matter up with the railroad commission later. I then asked him if he wanted Judge Weakley and myself to come to Montgomery. He replied by asking whether we could get there by o'clock. I replied that we could not; that the train did not get there until about 7. He then said that the railroad people intended to leave at 6 o'clock. I ended the conversation by asking him to let me know if anything definite was determined on.

Called a Second Time.

"About 3:30 the same afternoon the Attorney General again called me up. He said the railroads had adopted my suggestion as to the third paragraph above mentioned. I asked him if the agreement had been signed. He replied, 'Why, it was signed this morning.' He then said he would send me a copy of the agreement for my opinion. On the following Monday, February 23, I received from him by mail a copy of the agreement. It was dated February 21, and was signed 'Louisville and Nashville Railroad Co., by Henry L. Stone, general counsel, and William A. Colston, general solicitor; Nashville, Chattanooga and St. Louis Railway, by H. F. Smith, vice president; Western Railway of Alabama, by R. E. Steiner, its attorney in fact and assistant general counsel; Central of Georgia Railway, by R. E. Steiner, its attorney in fact and special counsel. Charles Henderson, president, * * * constituting the railroad commission of Alabama. Approved by: Emmet O'Neal, Governor of the State of Alabama; Robert C. Brickell, Attorney General.'

"In reply to the Attorney General's request for my opinion of the signed agreement, I wrote simply that the agreement seemed to express the intention of the parties. I perfunctorily congratulated him on the fact of the settlement (not on the terms) and on his being relieved of the burden of the rate cases, and expressed my pleasure at being likewise relieved.

"The telephone conversation with the attorney general above detailed in full was the first intimation I had that any compromise was even being contemplated. This conversation, it will be observed, was after all the terms of the compromise had been agreed upon and reduced to writing.

False and Misleading.

"So I repeat that the statement alleged to have been made by GOVERNOR O'NEAL, IN ALL ITS PARTS and in the inference to be drawn from it, is FALSE and MISLEADING. First, IT IS FALSE wherein it states that the agreement was fully explained to me. Second, IT IS FALSE wherein it states that the agreement was read over to me. The agreement was not fully explained to me, nor was it read over to me, except as above stated. NOTHING WHATEVER was read or explained to me relating to the immunity of the railroads from liability for passenger coupons and freight receipts representing excess charges in the past. Third, IT IS FALSE wherein it says that every suggestion which I made was embodied in the agreement. THE ONLY material suggestion I made, and this was merely volunteered, was to insist that the FREIGHT RATES be settled as well as the passenger rates. This suggestion was not adopted. NOT A WORD is said in THE AGREEMENT about the FREIGHT RATES. The failure or refusal to adopt this suggestion CHARACTERIZES the entire proceeding as a HUMILIATING SURRENDER TO THE RAILROADS and deprives it of all semblance to a compromise. Fourth, IT IS FALSE wherein it says 'not a word of objection did he express to the compromise.' My objection, expressed to the attorney general that the agreement did not settle the question of freight rates was certainly a sufficient objection. Even this objection was volunteered. My opinion was not asked as to whether the compromise should be made. Neither the governor nor the president of the railroad commission asked or desired my opinion as to whether the railroads' proposition of compromise should be accepted, although Mr. Henderson says that the matter of compromise had been under negotiation by him for some time. They knew that I would NOT RECOMMEND a settlement of the PASSENGER RATES ONLY thus leaving the question of the FREIGHT RATES OPEN TO LITIGATION IN THE FUTURE.

Studied Cases Seven Years.

"I had worked over and studied these cases for seven years. I WAS THOROUGHLY FAMILIAR WITH ALL THE FACTS NECESSARY TO BE taken into CONSIDERATION in determining upon a just settlement of the litigation. The GOVERNOR and the PRESIDENT of the railroad commission were ENTIRELY IGNORANT of THESE facts. Yet upon a presentation to them by the railroads of a proposition of settlement they accepted the proposition, agreed upon the terms thereof and reduced the same to writing before I had any intimation that a settlement was even contemplated. Under these circumstances DOES ANYBODY BELIEVE that the GOVERNOR or the RAILROAD COMMISSION DESIRED ANY ADVICE FROM ME as to the advisability of accepting the proposition of the railroads? Is it not apparent that from SOME MOTIVE NOT YET DIVULGED, but EASILY SURMISED, THEY DID NOT want either of the special counsel to have ANYTHING to do WITH THE COMPROMISE or to be CONNECTED WITH IT IN ANY WAY? The only attorneys with a knowledge of the facts whom the governor and the railroad commission seem to have consulted were R. E. Steiner, attorney for the Western of Alabama and the Central of Georgia, and Col. Henry L. Stone and William A. Colston, attorneys for the Louisville & Nashville railroad. I do not believe even the attorney general's advice was asked as to whether the compromise as proposed should be made. I believe he was consulted only as to whether the agreement already prepared expressed the terms that had been already agreed upon. I do not believe that the attorney general knew that a compromise was even contemplated until the railroad attorneys appeared at the capitol with an agreement already prepared. These, however, are surmises based upon the fact that the attorney general was in New Orleans most of the week with Judge Weakley submitting the Nashville, Chattanooga & St. Louis cases to the three judges, and that he did not return to Montgomery until the morning of the day on which the agreement was signed.

Success Was in Sight.

"At the time this compromise was made there was EVERY PROSPECT THAT THE STATE WOULD BE SUCCESSFUL IN ALL THE LITIGATION. The passenger rate had already been won and the 2 1-2-cent rate was in force on all the roads, except the Nashville, Chattanooga & St. Louis, whose case had not yet been decided. There was every probability that on the appeal that had been taken from the decree of Judge Jones that decree would be reversed and the freight and passeengr rates would be declared by the United States Supreme Court to be valid. Of these facts the governor had been advised by the special counsel. Every prospect was favorable to the people winning their fight all along the line. The railroads knew this and the governor and the railroad commission knew it. Yet, notwithstanding these facts, they made an agreement with the railroads the effect of which was, in the words of a prominent citizen of Birmingham, who was himself once connected with railroads, that 'the railroads graciously permit the State to retain the fruits of its victory, the 2 1-2-cent passenger rate, and graciously permit it to litigate the freight rates in the future.' The governor's statement in his speech as to the enormous cost to the State of the appeal, being a large annual amount for five or six years, is ridiculous, coming as it does from a lawyer. The appeal could have been submitted to the Supreme Court within a year and the expense would have ended with the submission. It could not have exceeded $75,000, and if the appeal had been successful a part of this would have had to be refunded by the railroads. In return for this expenditure the people who have been saving their passenger coupons and freight receipts would have received the full amount of the excess charges paid by them in the past.

Historic Discovery.

Mr. W. T. Oldrieve, chief architect of the government office of works in Edinburgh, has announced that he has discovered remains in Edinburgh castle of the ancient fortress known as King David's Tower, and also the wall which supplied the castle and garrison with water. Excavations revealed much of King David's Tower still standing, its walls eight feet thick, and rising to a height of nearly fifty feet above the original rock surface.

Wife—Hank, I think I hear some one knocking outside.

Husband—Oh, let the knocker alone.

THE OLD SOLDIER'S CALL

CAPT. FRANK S. WHITE, OF JEFFERSON COUNTY

Candidate For the United States Senate (Short Term)

"Yes," said the old, one-armed Confederate Veteran, General E. W. Rucker, "I am for my old comrade, Captain Frank S. White, for United States Senator, for the short term. Everything I can do for him I am gladly doing, and I would do more if I only knew how I could lend him more than all the strength and influence I have got.

"Did you know that he and I rode with Forrest together? He was a young man then—a boy soldier, as brave and gallant as any that ever followed the 'Wizard of the Saddle.' And he was with us to the last, doing his last fighting here in Alabama at Selma, defending your State and mine, and the honor of his beloved Southland. His head is white now with the snows that never melt, but his heart is as stout and his patriotism as abounding as it was in the war times, and in the dark days of reconstruction times that followed after—the times that tried men's souls. I believe all the old Veterans will vote solidly for our old comrade. He is the last of them to seek so high an honor, and we will all be there on election day.

"But the trouble, my young friend, is that there are so few of us left. Why should not the sons of our old comrades come and stand with us and vote with us this last time before we all go? It will cheer every Confederate heart in the land to see you with us at the ballot box one more time, and it will do every young man good to have it shrined in his memory that he voted for so true and tried a man as this old soldier I am talking about. Remember your fathers, boys, and your grandfathers and your mothers. My friend, Frank White, appeals to you through them, and I am but seconding his claim on your affectionate and reverent support. The voices of the past call to you as well as to me. Don't ignore the past, young man. Its claims are sacred.

"Let the Veterans of this grand old State of Alabama and their sons join with all the citizenship of our State in giving Capt. White, the fittest man in all our borders, an overwhelming majority to the place he seeks."

Planting Hardy Azaleas.

The hardy azaleas are usually increased by seed sown as soon as ripe, or in early spring, in boxes placed in greenhouse or frame. The soil is sandy peat; the seeds are scattered on the surface, and a little soil sifted over them, then well watered. Seed may also be sown in live sphagnum moss where it germinates promptly, but the seedlings must be moved as soon as they can be handled. As soon as the little plants appear, they need plenty of air, and a daily syringing. In fall they are transplanted into boxes or frames, the proper soil being sandy peat. The second year, in spring, they are planted out in well prepared beds, with space for two years' growth; long and ungainly shoots should be pinched back to form a compact plant. —Rural New-Yorker.

Supervised Play.

During the past ten years the idea of organized and supervised play has had a wonderful spread. It has developed into a world movement; there is not a civilized country in either hemisphere that has not adopted the scheme upon a more or less extensive scale. Three other cities in Maryland, besides Baltimore, now maintain summer playgrounds, but the towns and villages have not yet fully awakened to the significance of the movement. Every town in the states with a thousand population ought to have a playground with sports organized and directed in accord with the ideals of the national association.—Baltimore Star.

Stewing Apples.

When preparing apples to stew first wash them well and wipe dry. Then cook the peelings first. When soft drain through a colander. Cook the apples in this liquid and when nearly done add the sugar. The flavor is delicious. A half dozen cloves make it still better.

DEMOCRATS OF ALABAMA STAND TO YOUR GUNS

Democracy Attacked and Alabama Humiliated in Hobson Publications. Preparing an Assault on President.

To the Alabama Democracy:

We present the name of Oscar W. Underwood, a Congressman from Alabama, for nomination to the Senate. We ask your approval of his services to State and Nation. Christian citizen, renowned Alabamian, and one of the foremost Democrats of his time; to speak evil of him does credit to no man.

Big enough to have been overwhelmingly elected by his colleagues to the position of leader in the House, he has made good—beyond the record of any Southerner since the early days of the Republic—and he is big enough to stand to his guns, with the guns on the enemy, and with a courage that is past the understanding of mean souls.

In this State there are men who charge this great and simple Democrat with every vicious motive, and rejoice in vulgar reference toward him and toward those who present his claim to his people. Beware the bears of Abraham!

Where the Fight Leads.

Behind Underwood is the President and the first successful Democratic administration for 50 years—just beginning its wholesome career, together with an overwhelming majority of the Democrats of the Nation. Behind Hobson are many good people in Alabama, and more in other States who look without favor upon our party and people—eager for the disintegration to begin, eager for a revolution in Southern social and political conditions.

Win or lose, the resentment of Hobson toward the administration, coupled with his recklessness of statement and his ambition, are certain to result in an attack on the President and his administration for their estimation of Underwood and their concern to retain his fine efficiency in active service. Will you give official dignity to that inevitable assault? You put both President and party in power. Yours is the privilege and duty to sustain them.

The Inevitable Assault.

That Hobson is preparing to go before the people of other sections in pursuit of his ambition, with bitter charges against Woodrow Wilson and his administration, is certain and inevitable fact. In his Tuscaloosa speech (March 21) he charged that Woodrow Wilson was in conspiracy with or duped by Governor O'Neal and Mr. Glass; that the administration substitute for the Clarke cotton futures bill, handed to Mr. Underwood by Pres. ident Wilson, and offered by Mr. Underwood as an administration measure, was a conspiracy with Wall Street interests. Even now, after Burleson's just and honorable statement, Hobson and his followers sound the bitter charge.

With scant restraint now, win or lose, the primary will release the flood gates of his fury.

Imagine Underwood, with the battle on—shot down intentionally by his own people! Imagine Hobson, at large with a Senator's commission and the habits of a privateersman, revenging himself upon the President! We would excite the derision of the world, the everlasting resentment of Democracy.

The Distant Scene.

Success in this contest for Captain Hobson would bear no suggestion of patient service in the Senate. It would mean, for him the distant scene, the conquest of new horizons, under the remorseless pressure of his ambition. His platform for the approval of distant sects and alien sympathies has been laid bare with astounding frankness. Sent here for the purpose, and after conferring with Hobson or his managers, Angus McSween has written the most remarkable series of articles ever reproduced in a Southern paper, defining the issues as seen by the Hobson forces, and stating Hobson's appeal for the approval of the distant people.

War Declared.

Declaring war against Democracy, State and National, and against the traditions of the State of Alabama, the articles ring with defiance and picture Hobson as a leader, towering above a backward, sullen, sordid people.

Remember, Democrats, these articles, written in conference with Hobson or his managers, were featured and reemphasized in his campaign speech (Address and Citizen), and are Backward State and Ignorant People.

"Whiskey and special privilege fighting together against the aroused prohibition sentiment and progressive spirit of a backward Southern State * * * are the real issues.

Whiskey and special privilege * * * are tremendous forces in controlling the action of voters especially when many of those voters are ignorant and can be easily misled, and a great many of them are poor and easily intimidated."

Down With Traditions.

"This effort to defeat Underwood * * * is the first * * * organized effort to break away from the traditions of the past."

The Old Appeal.

The articles display the old appeal to alien prejudices, complaining that segregation of the races "tends to make the situation worse, for the white man has more self-control, and he has a great restraining influence upon the negro," adding that here in Birmingham and throughout the State the negro is now the victim of the cruelest oppression, without any rights which the white man feels bound to respect, and without the right to vote. Then follows the loathsome statement that respected white firms in the liquor trade—mark you, respected firms—sold whiskey to negroes in bottles with indescribable pictures and mottoes, leading to the inevitable result and punishment, and that the negro has no justice because the fees of his prosecutors depend upon his conviction. What degredation of bitterness to proclaim of Alabama, all to gild Hobson as an heroic spirit risen out of so vile a Nazareth; and all of it approved, republished and defended by the Captain's managers.

The Cloven Hoof.

The reason for it all is declared, republished, approved and defended by the Hobson forces in this pregnant sentence, threatening war upon Underwood, Wilson and Democracy.

"Oscar Underwood, Democratic leader in the House of Representatives and Democratic organization candidate for the United States Senate in this State, with the support of President Wilson and the whole national administration, is charged with being a * * * representative of the special interest. The evidence in support of this charge is so manifest and overwhelming that the charge has to be set down as true. It is not only true with respect to Underwood, but it is true concerning the whole Democratic organization behind Underwood."

Wilson, Underwood, Democracy.

In short, says the Hobson summary, Woodrow Wilson and Oscar Underwood, scholars, gentlemen and Democrats, have seduced the Democracy of the State and Nation into a conspiracy to keep Alabama "backward" in morals and defeat Hobson's effort to change our traditions and disintegrate our social status.

Will you, on such a theory as that, commission Hobson as Senator to go abroad through the land after his changing gods, seeking the approval of a distant people, or will you stand by your President, your party and the man proven in the house of his fathers?

"The Angels Smile."

A nation looks with curious gaze upon Alabama. Democracy stands tense with alarm—but the angels smile with the knowledge that you, Democrats of Alabama, are going to kill the fatted calf for the son who deserted not the house of his fathers.

Legal Notice.

In accordance with the provisions of Section 6 of an Act "To further regulate elections in the State of Alabama," approved Dec. 22nd, 1909, the Board of Registrars of Chilton County, Alabama, have given notice that the following appointments are set for the purpose of registering qualified voters as follows: [illegible]

HEADS OF NORMAL SCHOOLS ELECTED

RESOLUTIONS PROVIDING FOR REARRANGING COURSES ALSO ADOPTED.

STATE CAPITAL HAPPENINGS

Doings in and Around the State House Chronicled for Our Readers.

—Montgomery.

Presidents of the four Class A normal schools of the state were elected at a meeting of the state normal school board. The presidents of those schools were all re-elected, including C. W. Daugette of the Jacksonville Normal school, G. W. Brock of the Livingston Normal school; H. J. Willingham of the Florence Normal school, and E. M. Shackelford of the Troy Normal school.

In electing the presidents of the four leading normal schools of the state, the board adopted a series of resolutions, prepared by Superintendent of Education William F. Feagin, looking to a complete reorganization and readjustment of courses of study, teaching forces and other matters in connection with the schools.

The first suggestion contained in the resolution offers the key to the complete plan proposed—that the specific work of the normal schools be "confined to the preparation and training of teachers for our elementary rural and small town schools."

Another plan proposed in the resolution looks to raising the standard of training, or its equivalent, being required for entrance. The resolution further provides that four years be required for graduation.

The members of the state normal school board are: The governor of Alabama, Superintendent of Education William F. Feagin, Will T. Sheehan of Montgomery, Charles S. McDowell, Jr., of Eufaula, John B. Weakley of Birmingham, R. B. Evins of Greensboro, W. W. Lavender of Centreville, and Col. Glen of Florence.

District Schools Disburse $63,197.

Nine District Agricultural schools in Alabama disbursed a total of $63,197 during the period from April 1, 1913, to February 28, 1914, according to a report filed in the office of Governor O'Neal by Major J. T. Gorman, examiner of public accounts. Major Gorman has just finished an examination of the books and accounts of the nine District Agricultural schools and W. F. Feagin and Spright Dowell, secretary of these schools.

Books of all the schools are accurately kept, according to the examination. Summarizing the receipts and disbursements of the schools, Major Gorman made the following report:

First District school at Jackson, R. F. Reeves, president, $5,459; Second District school at Evergreen, J. T. McKee, president, $7,946; Third District school at Abbeville, C. E. Crossland, president, $6,466; Fourth District school at Sylacauga, J. S. Ganey, president, $6,055; Fifth District school at Wetumpka, J. W. Crowell, president, $9,908; Sixth district school, at Hamilton, H. O. Sargent, president, $6,996; Seventh District school at Albertville, S. L. Gipson, president, $7,866; Eighth District school at Athens, J. M. Atkinson, president, $8,130, and Ninth District school at Blountsville, W. B. Crumpton, Jr., president, $4471.

Reports in Pamphlets.

Pamphlets containing the reports of the State Examiners of Public Accounts for the last year will be mailed to all the newspapers of the State by Governor O'Neal. These reports are filed as they are finished in the Governor's office, but Governor O'Neal believes that the people should be permitted to see them, hence he will compile a condensed statement of the reports and send them to the papers in various parts of the State.

This is the first time these reports have been handled in this fashion.

Accounts of Ex-Officials Correct.

Books and accounts of Arthur Cunningham, former Treasurer of Conecuh county school funds; J. N. Grenade, former treasurer of Washington county school funds, and G. M. Harper, former superintendent of education of Conecuh county, were correctly and accurately kept, according to a report filed in the office of Governor O'Neal by J. T. Gorman, examiner of public accounts.

These examinations were made by Examiner Gorman in order to check up the old accounts of these officials.

R. R. Commission Meets April 8.

Owing to the conflict in date of the primary election on April 6, and the monthly session of the state railroad commission, announcement has been made of the postponement of the meeting of the commission until Wednesday, April 8. The commission will have under consideration at that time a lengthy docket, the various coal rate cases having been set for the April session. A large number of other matters are also scheduled to come before the commission at its next meeting.

Count Covers Election Day.

Members of the Alabama Supreme Court are preparing for the spring term, which will begin April 6, with the call of the first division cases. During the first division week the impeachment proceedings brought against Probate Judge W. T. Lawler, of Madison County, will be argued before the court. The testimony in this case was taken at Huntsville last week by Addison White, special master for the court.

Judge Lawler is charged with corruption in office and wilful neglect of duty. The charge of incompetency was ruled out of the proceedings. The charges against Judge Lawler grew out of an examination of his accounts made by Judge W. F. Wilkinson, examiner. It was charged by the examiner that warrants were illegally issued by Judge Lawler and that these warrants were not entered on the minutes of the commissioner's court.

Cases from the first division will be heard during the first week of the court. The counties composing the first division are Mobile, Baldwin, Washington, Choctaw, Monroe and Clarke.

Deficit Noted By State Auditor.

The long looked for annual report of the state auditor was put on in printed from, showing that the state, during the fiscal year which closed October 1, 1913, spent $256,903,67 more than was received from all sources.

The entire receipts were $6,288,992.07, and the disbursements were $6,545,895.74.

"The balance in the treasury at the close of business on September 30, 1913, was $99,267.54," the auditor said, in a foreword to the governor. The previous year he said it was $262,052.38. The outstanding warrants on October 1, 1913, were $482,464.61, and a temporary loan of $100,000. "You will see from this report, that our expenditures are far in excess of our receipts," he said.

A comparative statement by the auditor shows the disbursements for the past fiscal year to be $266,874.91 in excess of those for the previous year.

May Go Before Grand Jury.

The governor of Alabama is willing to appear before the Montgomery county grand jury at any time and furnish any information the body desires in connection with the charge made by Theo Lacy that he gave to the governor in 1911 $27,500.

The governor declared that he has notified Solicitor Temple Seibels of this fact, and that he will go before the body and testify freely.

Two examiners of public accounts were summoned to appear before the grand jury, but when they arrived the body had adjourned until Friday. These were H. Y. Brooke and former Examiner Frank V. Evans. They were summoned to give testimony in connection with the Lacy charge.

The governor declared that Examiner Brooke is not making any examination of the state convict department and that no examination of any kind in that department is under way.

Second Trial of Oakley.

Attorneys for the State are preparing the records, which will be submitted to the Shelby County Circuit Court on April 7, when James G. Oakley will be tried on a charge of embezzling about $3,500 of State funds. When this case was called at the last term of the court Oakley's physician appeared and stated that his patient was too ill to stand trial.

Oakley is charged with the conversion of about $3,500 of State funds, which he is alleged to have used personally. When he was tried in Montgomery County recently on another indictment, Oakley admitted that he had used the State funds, but that he did so in the belief that he was using his own money. He declared that in 1911 he paid over to Theo Lacy, former chief clerk of the State Convict Department, $27,500 and that he thought that he was using this money when he converted State checks. Oakley was president of the State Convict Department at the time that Lacy left Montgomery carrying with him about $90,000 of State funds.

Lacy Silent Before Grand Jury.

Theo Lacy, convicted Chief Clerk of the State Convict Department, refused to say a word when called before the Grand Jury to testify about his charge that he gave Governor O'Neal $27,000 in May or June, 1911, and that it had not been returned, according to reports in Montgomery lately.

Lacy was before the Grand Jury about twenty minutes, and afterwards the inquisitorial body recessed. Lacy would not talk.

It is understood that Lacy refused to testify on the ground that he did not care to say anything that might incriminate himself.

W. T. Seibels, County Solicitor, refused to discuss anything that transpired in the Grand Jury room. He told newspaper representatives they would have to use their own discretion about sending the report, and that he had not one word to say.

In his charge to the Grand Jury Judge Brown warned the members that he would punish any person guilty of giving away secrets of the investigation.

Lacy refused to comment on the reports in circulation.

Negro Sentenced.

Jimmie Fields, a negro bar porter, was sentenced to two and one-half years in the penitentiary in the city court. He was convicted of stealing $40

Wealthy Peons Join Hands in Extending Greeting to Carranza—Rebel Head Has Not Heard From Gneral Villa.

Juarez, Mexico.—An official message from the front states that fighting is still going on for the possession of Torreon.

The telegram says the rebels now hold all positions except the main barracks and two smaller barracks. It is reported that Gen. Villa took Cerro de la Cruz and the Torreon foundry.

Another telegram admits a rebel loss in the last six days of 900 killed and wounded and places the federal loss at 2,000. As there already are at Chihuahua 500 wounded, the report of the rebel losses is thought to have been minimized. Among the rebel wounded is Gen. Tomas Urbina.

It is said that private soldiers taken prisoners are being taken into the rebel ranks, but their officers are executed, unless they take the oath of allegiance to the constitutional cause. All irregular troops in the federal garrison are executed on capture.

In Juarez it was confidently expected that news of the capture of the city would form the chief feature of the welcome to Gen. Carranza and the fact that no message of success of any kind was awaiting him was accepted as indicating that the fate of the city was still in the balance.

In the last few weeks Gen. Carranza has ridden horseback for 500 miles and in the last two months he has traveled 2,000 miles in the same way.

He looked the picture of health and vigor, a living contradiction to stories that he was feeble and that he had constant recourse to stimulants in order to bear up, and other reports of a similar nature. His appearance also branded many lithographs of him as libels for they made him appear old and rather thin.

Gen. Manuel Chao, military governor of the state of Chihuahua, who came here to formally welcome the jefe suprema, galloped with his staff to a point three miles south of the city. Here Gen. Carranza and his staff and the reception committee met and then ensued a long wait for the troop train bearing the horses and men of Carranza's own army.

FIGHT TO DEATH IN HOUSE

Tense Situation As Canal Repeal Tolls Argument Continues—President Bears No Ill Will.

Washington.—No legislative issue of recent years has excited congress as has the controversy over repeal of the tolls exemption clause of the Panama Canal act. Last week's events which put on record a breach in the solidarity of the Democratic party, have created no end of conflicting political predictions to increase the tensity of interest in the subject. The situation is one fraught with many complications.

Oratorical strife over the repeal renewed, the house resumed general debate on the Sims bill leading up to a final vote in that branch. In the senate discussion will revolve around one of the many side issues that have arisen, Senator James Hamilton Lewis proposing to discuss a resolution and bill he has introduced to follow repeal as a sort of balm to the wounds of the party members who thus far have opposed the president.

Senator Lewis' measure would give the president authority to suspend tolls whenever he should deem it in the public interest to do so. The Illinois senator will cite a long series of precedents on which he bases the right of congress to extend such authority to the chief executive.

CHARGED WITH BEING TRUST

Independent Dealers Charge They Are Obliged to Buy Tobacco at Retail Prices.

New York.—The four companies into which the tobacco trust was disintegrated by the decree of 1911 were given until next week to present a plan for abandoning monopolistic practices which the attorney-general considers are in violation of the decree. United States District Attorney Marshall told the attorneys of these companies at a conference that the government intended to put an end to present conditions by injunction or other means, but promised to postpone action until later at the request of the tobacco attorneys.

The government is acting upon the complaint of certain independent dealers who charge that a monopoly of the jobbing business in this district, which was enjoyed by the Metropolitan Tobacco company under the old trust, still exists and that independent dealers are obliged to buy their tobacco at retail rates.

The corporations represented at the conference were the American, the Liggett & Myers, the R. J. Reynolds, the P. Lorillard and the Metropolitan Tobacco company.

FIGHT AGAINST REPEAL LAW

Personal Convictions Almost Obliterate Party Lines—House Leaders Oppose Change.

Washington.—Lines were sharply drawn for the opening of the most bitterly contested legislative struggle that has confronted President Wilson's administration—the fight to repeal the law giving American coastwise ships free passage through the Panama canal. Opposing forces divided for the first skirmish in the conflict, which will open when a special rule is presented on the repeal controversy.

For the first time since the democratic administration took charge of the government administration leaders found a strong, resourceful and determined element within the party opposed to a policy which President Wilson personally had espoused. Personal convictions on the question almost have obliterated party lines.

This political situation, with the international character of the question involved and the stress the president has placed on his position as necessary to the successful conduct of the administration's foreign policy, combined to make up a situation fraught with complications.

Aligned against the president's demand for the repeal are the three leaders of the parties in the house, headed by Mr. Underwood.

FRANK BATTLE SET FOR APRIL SIXTEEN

NOTICE IS SERVED THAT AN EXTRAORDINARY PLEA WILL BE MADE.

OLD TESTIMONY REPUDIATED

Many Affidavits Given in Which Former Witnesses Say They Testified Falsely at First Trial of Atlanta Man.

Atlanta, Ga.—Notice that an extraordinary motion for a new trial for Leo M. Frank, under death sentence for the murder of Mary Phagan, will be filed April 16, the day before that set for the young factory superintendent's execution, was served on the superior court here. The notice was accompanied by a copy of the forthcoming extraordinary motion, which alleges that new evidence favorable to Frank has been discovered since his conviction seven months ago.

Many affidavits are included in the copy of the motion. Several of these, signed by witnesses at the trial of Frank, allege that the affiants testified falsely against the accused man. Others charge conspiracy of evidence against Frank, and others attempt to establish an alibi for him. An effort also is made to prove that the notes found beside the factory girl's body were written in the basement of the National Pencil factory, not in the office of Frank, as James Conley, negro factory sweeper, and chief witness against the convicted superintendent, testified.

Among the affidavits submitted is one by C. B. Dalton, declaring false testimony he gave against Frank's character. Dalton, at the trial, testified Frank had been guilty of misconduct with several women. Dr. H. F. Harris, in his affidavit, alleges a microscopic examination of strands of hair, said to have been found on the second floor of the factory, and used at the trial to prove that the murder occurred near Frank's office, showed these strands were not from the head of the murdered girl.

Three affidavits allege that the affiants saw Frank on a street here between 1 and 1:10 p.m., on April 26 last, the time at which Conley testified he was helping the factory superintendent conceal Mary Phagan's body in the factory basement.

The filing of the extraordinary motion, April 16, will automatically stay the prisoner's execution. Should it be denied, it is expected, an appeal will be taken to the Georgia supreme court, which already has confirmed Superior Court Judge Bacon in denying a new trial on previously submitted evidence.

STEAMER DAMAGED BY FIRE

Charles Merriam, Used as Wharfboat at Cairo, Sustains Heavy Loss From Flames.

Cairo, Ill.—The steamer Charles Merriam, used as a wharfboat by the Iron Mountain and Cotton Belt railroads, was gutted by fire, and the loss is estimated at about $12,000. The fire was discovered about 1:45 o'clock, but had gained such headway that the firemen were unable to do more than confine the flames to the rear end of the boat and to save the Halliday-Phillips wharfboat, lying just south of the Merriam. All the baggage and express was saved, most of this being stored in the front part of the boat, the records, etc., in the ticket offices, located in the rear of the boat, were destroyed. The origin of the fire is not known. The front end of the boat was not damaged and the stacks did not fall. The transfer steamer Henry Marquand, which was tied alongside the Merriam, was cut loose by the night watchman, and with Pilot John Crehan and Capt. Howard Frank aboard steamed away to a place of safety. The Merriam was built in 1883 at Jefferson, Ind. Her gross tonnage is 515, length 206 feet, gross tonnage is 515, length 206 feet, is valued at $45,000.

The VALIANTS of VIRGINIA

By HALLIE ERMINIE RIVES

SYNOPSIS.

ohn Valiant, a rich society favorite, suddenly discovers that the Valiant corporation, which his father founded and which was the principal source of his wealth has failed. He voluntarily turns over his private fortune to the receiver for the corporation. His entire remaining possessions consist of an old motor car, a pedigreed bull dog and Damory court, a neglected estate in Virginia. On the way to Damory court he meets Shirley Dandridge, an auburn-haired beauty, and decides that he is going to like Virginia immensely. Shirley's mother, Mrs. Dandridge, and Major Bristow exchange remarks during which it is revealed that the major, Valiant's father, and a man named Sasson were rivals for the hand of Mrs. Dandridge in her youth. A duel between Valiant and Sasson was fought in which the former was killed. Valiant finds Damory court overgrown with weeds and creepers and the buildings in a very much neglected condition. He decides to rehabilitate the place and get the land produce a living for him. Almost at once Shirley saves Shirley from the bite of a snake, which bites him. Knowing the fatal effects of the bite, Shirley sucks the poison from the wound and saves his life.

"Listen, Shirley. What's that Rickey is telling Ranston?"

"Don' yo' come heah wid yo' nonsent play-actin'. Cyan' fool Ranston wid no sich snek-story, neidah. Ain' moc'sin at Dam'ry Co'ot, en nebber was!"

"There was, too!" insisted Rickey. "One bit him and Miss Shirley found him and sent Uncle Jefferson for Doctor Southall and it saved his life! So there! Doctor Southall told Mrs. Mason. And he isn't a man who's just going to fix it up,—either; he's the really truly man that owns it!"

"Who on earth is that child talking about?"

Shirley put her arm around her mother and kissed her. Her heart was beating quickly. "The owner has come to Damory Court. He—"

The small book Mrs. Dandridge held fell to the floor. "The owner! What owner?"

"Mr. Valiant — Mr. John Valiant. The son of the man who abandoned so long ago." As she picked up the fallen volume and put it into her mother's hands, Shirley was startled by the whiteness of her face.

"Dearest!" she cried. "You are ill. You shouldn't have come down."

"No. It's nothing. I've been shut in all day. Go and open the other window."

Shirley threw it wide. "Can I get your salts?" she asked anxiously.

Her mother shook her head. "No," she said, almost sharply. "There's nothing whatever the matter with me. Only my nerves aren't what they used to be, I suppose—and snakes always do get on them. Now, give me the rest of it first. I can wait for the rest. There's a tenant at Damory Court. And his name's John—Valiant. And he was bitten by a moccasin. When?"

"This afternoon."

Mrs. Dandridge's voice shook. "Will he—will he recover?"

"Oh, yes."

"Beyond any question?"

"The doctor says so."

"And you found him, Shirley—you?"

"I was there when it happened." She had crouched down on the rug in her favorite posture, her coppery hair against her mother's knee, catching the strange reddish over-tones like molten metal, from the shaded lamp. Mrs. Dandridge fingered her cane nervously.

At More Than Once Shirley Saw Her Hands Clasp Themselves Together.

Then she dropped her hand on the girl's head.

"Now," she said, "tell me all about it."

CHAPTER XV.

The Anniversary.

The story was not a long one, though it omitted nothing: the morning fox-hunt and the identification of the new arrival at Damory Court as the owner of yesterday's stalled motor; the afternoon raid on the jessamine, the conversation with John Valiant in the woods.

Mrs. Dandridge, gazing into the fire, listened without comment, but more than once Shirley saw her hands clasp themselves together, and thought, too, that she seemed strangely pale. The quaint and tragic sequel to that meeting was the hardest to tell; and as she finished she put up her hand to her mother, holding it hard. "It was terrible!" she said. Yet now she did not shudder. Strangely enough, the sense of loathing which had been hanging over her at recurrent intervals ever since that hour in the wood, had vanished utterly!

She read the newspaper article aloud and her mother listened with an expression that puzzled her. When she finished, both were silent for a moment, then she asked, "You must have known his father, dearest; didn't you?"

"Yes," said Mrs. Dandridge after a pause. "I—knew his father."

Shirley said no more, and facing each other in the candle-glow, across the spotless damask, they talked, as with common consent, of other things. She thought she had never seen her mother more brilliant. An odd excitement was flooding her cheek with red and she chatted and laughed as she had not done for years.

But after dinner the gaiety and effervescence faded quickly and Mrs. Dandridge went early to her room. She mounted the stair with her arm thrown about Shirley's pliant waist. At her door she kissed her, looking at her with a strange smile. "How curious," she said, as if to herself, "that it should have happened today!"

The reading-lamp had been lighted on her table. She drew a slim gold chain from the bosom of her dress and held to the light a little locket-brooch it carried. It was of black enamel, with a tiny laurel-wreath of pearls on one side encircling a single diamond. The other side was of crystal and covered a baby's russet-colored curl. In her fingers it opened and disclosed a miniature at which she looked closely for a moment.

Her eyes turned restlessly about the room. It had been hers as a girl, for Rosewood had been the old Garland homestead. It seemed now all at once to be full of calling memories of her youth.

* * * * * * * *

"How strange that it should have been today!" It had been on Shirley's lips to question, but the door had closed, and she went slowly downstairs. She sat a while thinking, but at length grew restless and began to walk to and fro across the floor, her hands clasped behind her head so that the cool air filled her flowing sleeves. In the hall she could hear the leisurely kon-kon—kon-kon of the tall clock. The evening outside was exquisitely still and the metallic monotone was threaded with the airy fiddle-fiddle of crickets in the grass and punctuated with the rain-glad cloap of a frog.

Shirley stepped lightly down to the wet grass. Looking back, she could see her mother's lighted blind. All around the ground was splotched with rose-petals, looking in the squares of light like bloody rain. She skimmed the lawn and ran a little way down the lane. A shuffling sound presently fell on her ear.

"Is that you, Unc' Jefferson?" she called softly.

"Yas'm!" The footsteps came nearer. "Et's me, Miss Shirley." He tittered noiselessly, and she could see his bent form vibrating in the gloom. "Yo' reck'n Ah done fergit?"

"No, indeed. I knew you wouldn't do that. How is he?"

"He right much bettah," he replied in the same guarded tone. "Doctah he say he be all right in er few days, on'y he gotter lay up er while. Dat was er ugly nip he got f'om dat 'spisable reptyle."

"Do you think there can be any others about the grounds?"

"No'm. Dey mos'ly keeps ter de ma'sh-lan' en on'y runs whah de undah-bresh ez thick. I gwineter fix dat ter-morrow. Mars' Valiant he tell me ter grub et all out en make er bonfiah ob it."

"That's right, Unc' Jefferson. Good night, and thank you for coming."

She started back to the house, when his voice stopped her.

"Mis' Shirley, yo' don' keer ef de ole man geddahs two er three ob dem roses? Seems lak young mars' moughty fon' ob dem. He got one in er glass but et's mos' daid now."

"Wait a minute," she said, and disappeared in the darkness, returning quickly with a handful which she put in his grasp.

"There!" she whispered, and slipped back through the perfumed dark.

An hour later she stood in the cozy stillness of her bedroom. She threw off her gown, slipped into a soft loose robe of maize-colored silk and stood before the small glass. She pulled out the amber pins and drew her wonderful hair on either side of her face, looking out at her reflection like a mermaid from between the rippling waves of a moon-golden sea.

At last she turned, and seating herself at the desk, took from it a diary. She scanned the pages at random, her eyes catching lines here and there. "A good run today. Betty and Judge Chalmers and the Pendleton boys. My fourth brush this season." A frown drew itself across her brows, and she turned the page. "One of the hounds broke his leg, and I gave him to Rickey." * * * "Chilly. Luak to dinner today, after swimming the Loving Rapid."

She bit her lip, turned abruptly to the new page and took up her pen. "This morning I twelve-mile run to Damory Court." she wrote. "This afternoon went for cape jessamines." There she paused. The happenings and sensations of that day would not be smoothed. They were mountain-

She laid down her pen and put her forehead on her clasped hands. How empty and inane these entries seemed beside this rich and eventful twenty-four hours just passed! What had she been doing a year ago today? she wondered. The lower drawer of the desk held a number of slim diaries like the one before her. She pulled it out, took up the last-year's volume and opened it.

"Why," she said in surprise, "I got jessamine for mother this very same day last year!" she pondered frowning, then reached for a third and a fourth. From these she looked up, startled. That date in her mother's calendar called for cape jessamines. What was the fourteenth of May to her?

She bent a slow troubled gaze about her. The room had been hers as a child. She seemed suddenly back in that childhood, with her mother bending over her pillow and fondling her rebellious hair. When the wind cried for loneliness out in the dark she had sung old songs to her. Sad songs! Even in those pinafore years Shirley had vaguely realized that pain lay behind the brave gay mask. Was there something — some event — that had caused that dull-colored life and unfulfilment? And was today, perhaps, its anniversary?

* * * * * * * *

John Valiant sat propped up on the library couch, an open magazine unheeded on his knee. The reading-stand beside him was a litter of letters and papers. The bow-window was open and the honeysuckle breeze blew about him, lifting his hair and ruffling the leaves of the papers. In the garden three darkies were laboring, under the supervision of Uncle Jefferson. The unsightly weeds and lichen were gone from the graveled paths, and from the fountain pool, whose shaft now spouted a slender spray shivered by the breeze into a million diamonds, which fell back into the pool with a tintinabulant trickle and drip.

The master of Damory Court closed the magazine with a sigh. "If I could only do it all at once!" he muttered. "It takes such a confounded time. Four days they've been working now, and they haven't done much more than clean up." He laughed, and threw the magazine at the dog who dodged it with injured alacrity. "After all, Chum," he remarked, "it's been thirty years getting in this condition. I guess we're doing pretty well."

He stretched luxuriously. "I'll take a hand at it myself tomorrow. I'm as right as rain again now, thanks to Aunt Daph and the doctor. Something of a crusty citizen, the doctor, but he's all to the good."

A heavy step came along the porch and Uncle Jefferson appeared with a tray holding a covered dish with a plate of biscuit and a round jam-pot. "Look here," said John Valiant, "I had my luncheon three hours ago, I'm being stuffed like a milk-fed turkey."

The old man smiled widely. "Et's jes' er li'l snack er broth," he said. "Reck'n et'll kinder float eroun' de yuddah things. Dis' yeah pot's dat apple-buttah whut Miss Mattie Sue sen' yo' by Rickey Snyder."

Valiant sniffed with satisfaction. "I'm getting so confoundedly spoiled," he said, "that I'm tempted to stay sick and do nothing but eat. By the way, Uncle Jefferson, where did Rickey come from? Does she belong here?"

"No, suh. She come f'om Hell's-Half-Acre."

"What's that?"

"Dat's dat ornery passle o' folks yondah on de Dome," explained Uncle Jefferson. "Day's been dah long's Ah kin recommembah—jes' er ramshackle lot o' shiftless po'-white trash whut git eriong anyways 't all."

"That's interesting," said Valiant. "So Rickey belonged there?"

A sudden color came into John Valiant's cheeks. "Tell me about it," His voice vibrated eagerly.

She ain' afeahd o' nuffin on dis yerf, en she on'y sebenteen yeah ol' den, too. She don' tell Mis' Judith—no, suh! She run out ter de stable en saddle huh hoss, en she gallop up dat road ter Hell's-Half-Acre lak er shot outen er shovel."

Valiant brought his hands together sharply. "Yes, yes," he said. "And then?"

"When she come ter Greef King's cabin, he done foun' de laddah, en one er he foots was on de rung. He had er ax in he han'. De po' li'l gal was peepin' down thoo' de cracks o' de flo', en prayin' de bestes' she know how. "And Rickey was that little child!"

"Yas, suh, she sho' was. In de mawnin' er posse done ride up ter Hell's-Half-Acre en take Greef King in. Such was the story which Uncle Jefferson told, standing in the doorway. When his shuffling step had retreated, Valiant went to the table and picked up a slim tooled volume that lay there. It was "Lucile," which he had found in the hall the night of his arrival. He opened it to a page where, pressed and wrinkled but still retaining its bright red pigment, lay what had been a rose.

He stood looking at it abstractedly, his nostrils widening to its crushed spicy scent, then closed it and slipped it into his pocket.

CHAPTER XVI.

In Devil-John's Day.

He was still sitting motionless when there came a knock at the door and it opened to admit the gruff voice of Doctor Southall. A big form was close behind him.

"Hell. Up, I see. I took the liberty of bringing Major Bristow."

The master of Damory Court came forward—limping the least trifle—and shook hands.

"Glad to know you, sah," said the major. "Allow me to congratulate you; it's not every one who gets bitten by one of those infernal moccasins that lives to talk about it. You must be a pet of Providence, or else you have a cast-iron constitution, sah."

Valiant waved his hand toward the man of medicine, who said, "I reckon Miss Shirley was the Providence in the case. She had sense enough to send for me quick and speed did it."

"Well, sah," the major said, "I reckon under the circumstances, your first impressions of the section aren't anything for us to brag about."

"I'm delighted; it's hard for me to tell how much."

"Wait till you know the fool place," growled the doctor testily. "You'll change your tune."

The major smiled genially. "Don't be taken in by the doctor's pessimism. You'd have to get a yoke of three-year oxen to drag him out of this state."

"It would take as many for me." Valiant laughed a little. "You who have always lived here, can scarcely understand what I am feeling, I imagine. You see, I never knew till quite recently—my childhood was largely spent abroad, and I have no near relatives—that my father was a Virginian and that my ancestors always lived here. Why, there's a room upstairs with the very toys they played with when they were children! To learn that I belong to it all; that I myself am the last link in such a chain!"

"The ancestral instinct," said the doctor. "I'm glad to see that it means something still, in these rotten days."

"Of course," John Valiant continued, "every one knows that he has ancestors. But I'm beginning to see that what you call the ancestral instinct needs a locality and a place. In a way it seems to me that an old estate like this has a soul too—a sort of clan or family soul that reacts on the descendant."

"Rather a Japanesy idea, isn't it?" observed the major. "But I know what you mean. Maybe that's why old Virginian families hang on to their land in spite of hell and high-water. They count their forebears real live people, quite capable of turning over in their graves."

"Mine are beginning to seem very real to me. Though I don't even know their Christian names yet, I can judge them by their handiwork. The men who built Damory Court had a sense of beauty and of art."

"And their share of deviltry, too," put in the doctor.

"I suppose so," admitted his host. "At this distance I can bear even that. But good or bad, I'm deeply thankful that they chose Virginia. Since I've been laid up, I've been browsing in the library here—"

"A bit out of date now, I reckon," said the major, "but it used to pass muster. Your grandfather was something of a book-worm. He wrote a history of the family, didn't he?"

"Yes. I've found it. 'The Valiants of Virginia.' I'm reading the Revolutionary chapters now. It never seemed real before—it's been only a slice of impersonal and rather dull history. But the book has made it come alive. I'm having the thrill of the globe-trotter the first time he sees the Tower of London or the field of Waterloo. I see more than that stubble-field out yonder; I see a big wooden stockade with soldiers in ragged buff and blue guarding it."

NO MORE MARRIAGE RISKS

Reformers of Today Certainly Are Throwing All Kinds of Safeguards Around the Ceremony.

Under the microscope of modern criticism marriage seems to be honeycombed with false ideas and tyrannous customs. So wrong is it that we almost doubt if any of our grandparents could have been happy, and we sigh with relief when we consider that at last modern intellect is about to demolish the old-fashioned methods and build in their place a scheme of common-sense marriage in which no sorrow and regret can cloud the domestic hearth.

What a primitive, careless thing marriage has been hitherto. Just because a man and a woman have been attracted to one another they have rushed blindly into a lifelong partnership without any careful forethought or inquiry.

But we see the end of all that nonsense. Already the new marriage—the carefully, well-considered mating—has arrived. The first medically examined wedding has been celebrated in this country. Surely this will give a lead to the world.

It destroys the first illusion with which the thoughtful young man and woman that the gentleman [illegible] The man and woman [illegible] state of matrimony without the consent of learned psychologists to testify to their suitability to one another.

And then the financial certificate, the considered judgment of economic specialists as to ways and means. However physically sound and temperamentally suitable the man and woman may be, the new marriage will insist that their income be sufficient to insure a life of comfort according to their normal standards. Our marriage reformers are going to allow us to take no risks.—New York Telegram.

Doing Their Best.

Little Maggie had not been to the country before, and, getting lonesome, she was told she might go to the barn and look for eggs. Presently she returned without any.

"Couldn't you find any eggs, dear?" asked her mother.

"No. The hens were scratching all around as hard as they could, but they hadn't found a single egg," was the doleful reply.

DRINK LOTS OF WATER TO FLUSH THE KIDNEYS

Eat Less Meat and Take Salts for Backache or Bladder Trouble—Neutralize Acids.

Uric acid in meat excites the kidneys, they become overworked; get sluggish, ache, and feel like lumps of lead. The urine becomes cloudy; the bladder is irritated, and you may be obliged to seek relief two or three times during the night. When the kidneys clog you must help them flush off the body's urinous waste or you'll be a real sick person shortly. At first you feel a dull misery in the kidney region, you suffer from backache, sick headache, dizziness, stomach gets sour, tongue coated and you feel rheumatic twinges when the weather is bad.

Eat less meat, drink lots of water; also get from any pharmacist four ounces of Jad Salts; take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days and your kidneys will then act fine. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for generations to clean clogged kidneys and stimulate them to normal activity, also to neutralize the acids in urine, so it no longer is a source of irritation, thus ending bladder weakness.

Jad Salts is inexpensive, cannot injure; makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water drink which everyone should take now and then to keep the kidneys clean and active. Druggists here say they sell lots of Jad Salts to folks who believe in overcoming kidney trouble while it is only trouble.—Adv.

Was Neither, Nayther Nor Neether.

A group of Scottish lawyers were gathered round a brew of toddy one evening. The conversation turned upon a question of pronunciation.

"Now, I always say neether," one of the lawyers said in discussing the pronunciation of the word "neither."

"I say 'nayther,' remarked another lawyer.

Turning to a third, he asked: "What do you say, Sandy?" Sandy, whose head was a little muddled by too many helpings of toddy, woke up from a gentle doze.

"Me?" he said, "oh, I say, whusky."

Brushing Up.

The other day the H. Lieber company, among other pictures displayed in the show window, had one that attracted special attention. It was a large picture representing an immense lioness and four cubs. Together with the praise bestowed on this group, there was some criticism. "What fool artist got up that picture?" said an elderly observer. "Anyone ought to know that two cubs is the limit for any lioness. This word picked up by a listener was taken into the picture house. "This is rather overdoing the cub business," said the critic. "Any one ought to know that two lion whelps are enough." The people in the picture house were greatly distressed under this cirticism, until a friend hunted up a cyclopedia of natural history and read these lines: "From two to four whelps are produced at one time. They are born with eyes open, but are helpless for several weeks."—Indianapolis News.

CLEVER WIFE

Knew How to Keep Peace in Family.

It is quite significant, the number of persons who get well of alarming heart trouble when they let up on coffee and use Postum as the beverage at meals.

There is nothing surprising about it, however, because the harmful alkaloid—caffeine—in coffee is not present in Postum, which is made of clean, hard wheat.

"Two years ago I was having so much trouble with my heart," writes a lady in Washington, "that at times I felt quite alarmed. My husband took me to a specialist to have my heart examined.

"The doctor said he could find no organic trouble but said my heart was irritable from something I had been accustomed to, and asked me to try and remember what disagreed with me.

"I remembered that coffee always soured on my stomach and caused me trouble from palpitation of the heart. So I stopped coffee and began to use Postum. I have had no farther trouble since.

"A neighbor of ours, an old man, was so irritable from drinking coffee that his wife wanted him to drink Postum. This made him very angry, but his wife secured some Postum and made it carefully according to directions.

"He drank the Postum and did not know the difference, and is still using it to his lasting benefit. He tells his wife that the 'coffee' is better than it used to be, so she smiles with him and keeps peace in the family by serving Postum instead of coffee."

Name given by the Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich.

Postum now comes in two forms: Regular Postum — must be well boiled. 15c and 25c packages.

Instant Postum—is a soluble powder. A teaspoonful dissolves quickly in a cup of hot water and, with cream and sugar, makes a delicious beverage instantly. 30c and 50c tins.

THE REASON FEWER PEOPLE TAKE "SALTS"

We find the use of salts and other harsh physics is becoming less every year because more and more people are using Rexall Orderlies, which we and they firmly believe to be the best bowel remedy ever made. They taste so much like candy that even the children like them. At the same time they act so easily and naturally that there is no purging, griping or pain. They promptly remove the constipation and, by soothing and strengthening the bowels, make it less liable to occur again. We have the utmost faith in them. We know what they are made of and the pleasant, beneficial results that always follow their use.

You needn't take our word for it. If Rexall Orderlies don't help you—if they don't entirely relieve all your bowel troubles-come back and tell us and we'll give back your money. In vest pocket tin boxes; 10c, 25c, 50c.

Effect Passenger Rate Reduction on Penny Script Books.

A misapprehension apparently existing as to the effect of the adoption of a local rate of passenger fare of two and a half cents per mile on the lines of the Louisville and Nashville Railroad in the states of Alabama, Tennessee and Kentucky upon the use of penny scrip books, it should be understood that with April 1st in Alabama, and co-incident with the effective date of the new passenger rates in the other states, the penny scrip book, which contains twenty five hundred one cent coupons and is sold at $20.00, or a reduction of 20 per cent. will be accepted in payment for tickets at the new fares, thus producing a net rate to the holder of these books of two cents per mile whereever the local fare is made upon the basis of two and a half cents per mile.

In a similar manner the scrip book will secure a net rate of two cents per mile on interstate journeys when the interstate passenger fares have been adjusted to the basis of the new state fares which will be as soon as the interstate tariffs can be compiled.

These books are interchangeable between all railroads east of the Mississippi and south of the Ohio and Potomac rivers and secure the same percentage of reduction, with but few exceptions, throughout the entire territory.

CAPTAIN FRANK S. WHITE

CANDIDATE FOR THE UNITED STATES SENATE FOR THE SHORT TERM.

WHAT HE STANDS FOR.

He is against the monopolies which are crushing the poor and middle classes; he is against the stock gambling system which keeps down the farmer; he is for good roads; he is in favor of securing the very largest available appropriations from the United States Government for the purpose of deepening the Harbor at Mobile and for improving the rivers of the State; he agrees with, and proposes to use his utmost efforts to assist President Wilson in carrying out his policies; he is for good citizenship, good government, and LAST but not LEAST, for the masses who need protection, instead of for the classes, who have demonstrated too clearly already that they are able to take care of themselves.

This will probably be your last opportunity of electing a Confederate soldier to the United States Senate. Captain White served his country when a mere youth under the leadership of the undaunted General Bedford Forrest.

This race does not involve the long term contest, but is for the vacancy caused by the death of Senator Johnston.

Mt. Creek, Ala., March 23, 1914

On Saturday, the 21st inst., I was at Clanton to hear Hon. Fred L. Blackmon speak, I had a good Waltham watch that needed some adjusting or repairs. I was directed to Dr. J. V. Higgins, a jeweler there. To my surprise, I found him to be a son of my old time friend Benj. F. Higgins, who had done much work for me and my brother and friends many years ago, also his uncles Flem and Jos. Higgins and grandfather, J. V. S. Higgins, done much work for my father and myself, in fact the whole Higgins family were the best and most efficient mechanics I ever knew anywhere on any and all kinds of work in their line of business, and their charges being always reasonable. I was glad to give him my watch that had been injured by imcompetent jewelers, I must unhesitatingly recommend Dr. Higgins to those in need of such work.

Respectfully,

UNDERWOOD,, COMER DEASON AND CURRY CARRY COUNTY

The election in Chilton county Monday passed off quietly, a total vote of about eight hundred being cast. We have been unable to secure the returns from the several precincts in the county, but from the returns obtainable Underwood carried the county over Hobson by about 150 majority, and Comer led for Governor.

For Congress Judge Deason received a majority of 250 over Mr. Blackmon, but the indications are that Blackmon has won in the district by more than 1,000 majority.

Senator Curry won over Kilby in the county by a good substantial majority.

For Sheriff B. E. Jones seems to have received a majority over both his opponents.

Mr. L. R. Sawyer was unopposed for Representative, as was also Mr. Chas. B. Cox for Commissioner from the First district, and Mr. W. Y. Atchison from the Second district,

For the first time in the history of Chilton county the election returns from all over the state were received by wire in Clanton and flashed on canvas in front of the Alred Drug Co., nearly every citizen in Clanton and the surrounding section staying up till the wee sma' hours, eager to get all possible news of the election.

ALABAMA MEN WORKING FOR GREAT DRAINAGE CONGRESS

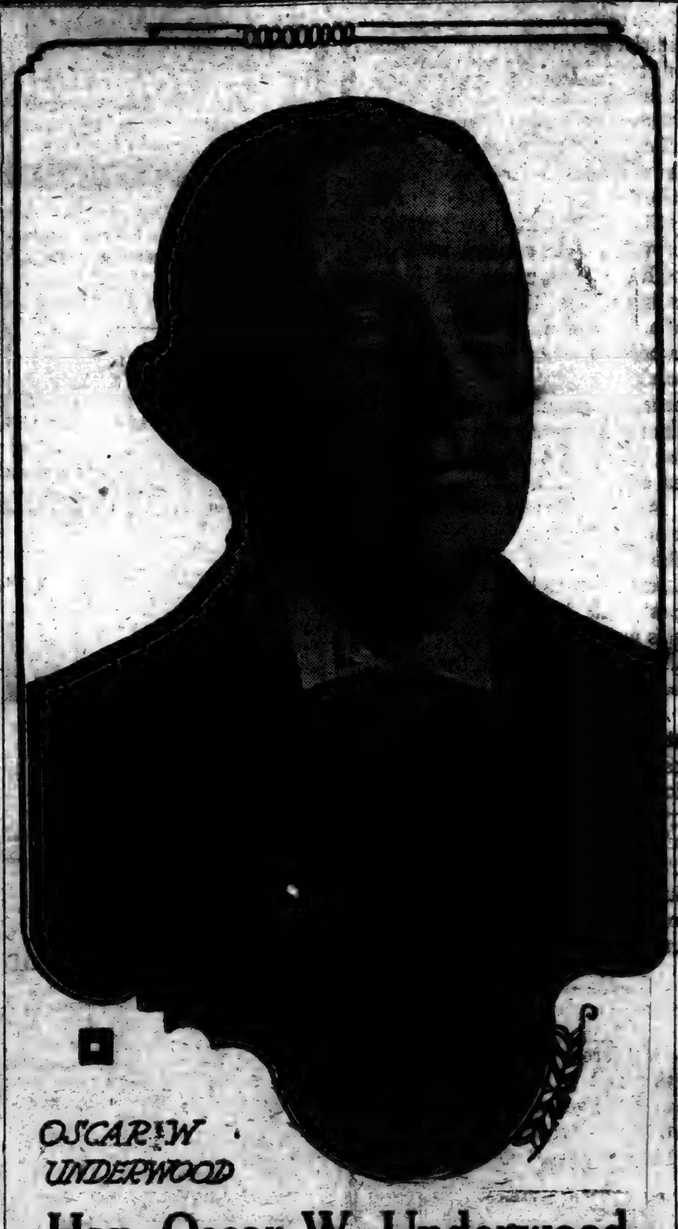
Four prominent citizens of Alabama have been appointed a special committee to secure a strong delegation from this State to the fourth annual meeting of the National Drainage Congress at Savannah, Ga., April 22 to April 25 inclusive. They are Governor Emmet O'Neal, who is honorary vice-president for this state; Reuben F. Kolb, Commissioner of Agriculture, Montgomery, who is executive committeeman for this State; and Dr. R. H. Von Ezdorf of the United States Public Health Service, and Dr. Seale Harris, both of Mobile, and each an officer of the Section on Malaria Eradication of the National Drainage Congress.

Alabama is vitally interested in the success of the National Drainage Congress. In addition to suffering from floods in the valleys of the Chattahoochie, Tombigbee, and Tennessee rivers, Alabama has 1,479,200 acres of swamp lands within her borders, which, if reclaimed, will add enormously to the agricultural wealth of the State. These acres can be converted into rich and healthful farms that will increase the annual farm crops of the state by at least $35,000,000 to $50,000,000. These rich acres, which are at present productive of nothing except ill-health, will be reclaimed and converted into farms if the efforts of the National Drainage Congress are successful.

AUTOMOBILE PARTY

Sunday morning a jolly party left Clanton in Mr. Sam Latham's car for a trip to Selma. The party comprised Messrs. O. E. and Sam Latham, E. M. Pinckard, H. T. Pipes, H. F. Chandler and John M. VanDerveer. Leaving town early in the morning, they were joined by Messrs. Thos. D. Woods and Hill Foshee of Maplesville. Everything went lovely and the crowd reached Selma in the afternoon without a mishap. On the return trip, however, they did not fare so well. The machine broke down twice and when the Lee Hayes hill was reached about 10 miles from town one of the tires came off of the machine and was left stranded by the roadside. The whole bunch not wanting to remain in the woods all night set out to "hoof" it in to Clanton, and were met about four miles from town by Mr. W. H. Goodgame, who, out of the generosity of his heart took them safely home, arriving in Clanton about two a. m. Mr. Goodgame states that when he met them it would have been difficult to have pictured a more home-sick and tired out looking bunch.

A NEW YEAR'S OUTING



New Year's morning was a beautiful sunny morning which was begun with a light crisp frost—something very unusual for Canton. I had decided to celebrate the day as usual by working. But, by nine o'clock as I was buried in my books on Chinese language I heard some one calling me in very loud and excited tones. I rushed out to see what the trouble was when Mr. Buckner, one of our missionaries, began a hearty laugh at my quick appearance and said: "Let's go to the mountain."

White Cloud Mountain is about four miles from our compound and rises in its majesty several hundred feet above the plain that separates us from it. It is a very popular place for picnic parties from the city and furnishes a fine day's outing.

My wife and I agreed. A small party was formed, lunches hastily prepared and soon we were on our way. We walked about a mile and then took rickishas to the foot of the mountain. There it was thought the ladies and children might get tired of the climb and sedan chairs were employed for some of them so they could "ride and tie." The climb began, and even though the day was cold for this climate, it soon seemed to turn warmer as we ascended the mountain.

There are several temples for heathen worship on the side of the mountain and a road has been built to these. In the steepest places are stone steps, some other parts are paved with stone while in some places it is only a common dirt road. The longest steep place has 760 steps. Because of this road the journey up does not seem like the mountain climbing one reads about in books, but, it is the real thing when the strength required is considered.

One of the temples near the top has a large spring of very fine water inside the enclosure. This is the objective point for parties for here they stop and lunch. We reached this place about [illegible] all were tired and hungry. A beautiful [illegible] and every one [illegible] to the [illegible]

OSCAR W. UNDERWOOD

Hon. Oscar W. Underwood

Alabama's Peerless Leader, Who on Monday Was Nominated for the United States Senate by a Large Majority Over Capt. R. P. Hobson.

WHAT WE SAW

Practically all the Chinese worship their ancestors. Confucius taught reference for parents and they show this in various ways. It is largely shown by elaborate graves, which range from little mounds with a stone to mark the place to the most elaborate tombs. These elaborate ones are dug out in the side of the mountain or a hill somewhat in the shape of a horseshoe. This is filled with beautiful and costly masonry in which is placed the ancestral tablet ascribing the noble qualities of the deceased and setting forth their filial loyalty. The members of the family go to the grave of their ancestor at times and burn incense, and probably paper money for him to use in the realms beyond to which he has departed.

All up the side of White Cloud there are literally thousands upon thousands of these graves. One is lost in amazement at their number. And I am told it is like this all over China. China has been called one vast grave yard, for they do not bury in cemeteries as we do, but wherever the heathen priest can find a lucky place.

THE TEMPLE.

After eating dinner, we went through to see what there was in it and found idols galore. It was a Buddahistic' temple and there were many idols for the various phases of this worship. Some of them were very gorgeous and must have cost a great deal when they were put up. The general appearance of the temple would give one the impression that the more [illegible] are not as [illegible] they once were, which is [illegible] true. While we were [illegible] worshipers, [illegible] very bad [illegible]

The man in charge appeared to be no more than an ordinary coolie, or hired man. One of our number asked if he knew about Jesus and he said: "Yes, I know him personally. He is a special friend of mine and has been here lots of times to worship this big idol." Oh, the darkness that covers the mines of these people who have been without Christian knowledge all through the ages. How the Lord of heaven must have looked down with pity on this benighted man who made such remarks about His own Son.

A few of our party were brave enough to go on the top of the mountain to get the full value of the scenery behind us and to get a peep into the valley beyond. The valley was a beautiful fertile one bedecked with many villages and contained thousands of little rice fields. But as we turned and looked back we beheld the city of Canton directly in front of us. Standing there on the crest of the mountain facing south one can see 150 villages besides the city of Canton. Between two and three million people are in Canton, and these villages range from a few hundred to over one hundred thousand. In one view without turning the head to the right or to the left one can look out on the home of more than 4,000,000 people. As I stood there admiring the beauty and grandeur of the scenery, my feeling of admiration was turned into pathos. FIRST BIG GENERATOR INSTALLED AT LOCK 12

The first of the four 17,500 horse power generating unit of the hydro-electric plant of the Alabama Power Company has been placed in operation and is working to the entire satisfaction of the company engineers. This unit, which is said to be the largest of a single runner type ever installed at a hydro-electric operation, is the first of the 70,000 horse power development of the Alabama Power Company, which is spending millions of dollars in Alabama.

It is estimated that the operation of this plant will save in fuel 500,000 tons of coal per year to the Birmingham district—the coal taken to generate the steam power equal to the electric energy which will be available from this operation. In addition to conserving this large tonnage of coal the developing, it is said, will make navigable a long stretch of the Coosa river, and will enable this district and state to procure cheaper electric power than ever before.

In a report on this development in reference to conservation of coal if has been estimated that is all the navigable streams of the state were so developed the electric energy thus created would equal the energy of 11,100,000 tons of coal per year. The maximum water power energy of Alabama, it is claimed, would develope 1,108,000 horse power and render navigable a great many miles of streams. This state produces 16,000,000 tons of coal per annum or about that tonnage, and if the electric energy was utilized the state would save, it is estimated, 80 per cent of its coal production.

IN LOVING MEMORY

OF LITTLE JAMES CARL VANCE.

On Sunday, March 22th, the death angel visited the home of Mr. and Mrs. Grover Vance and took from them their loving little boy James Carl. He had been sick for nearly two weeks when God saw fit to call him home. He leaves a father, mother and one sister and a brother and a host of relatives to mourn his loss.

He was born January 4, 1909, and died March 22d, 1914.

Weep not, dear loved ones, for our loved one that is gone, for we all know that he is at rest with the angels above.

His race is run, his days are done, his sun has now gone down. Like Carl, we all must die and may we all rise on high.

Such pangs of pain he did sustain; sueh bitter groans and sighs till God at last confined him fast and closed his dying eyes, but why should we lament, and wish him back again, since he has gone to his long home with Christ to live and reign.

His remains were brought to Mount Nebo church for interment, Rev. L. H. S. Chappelle, of Clanton, conducting the funeral services.

From his Grandma,
(MRS.) EMMA VANCE.

S. S. CONVENTION

Editor Press:

Please publish the following in the next issue of your paper in regard to the Sunday School Convention held at Oak Grove on the Fifth Sunday in March. We're glad that we can tell our people of such a Convention, as it was the best that we have ever had the pleasure of attending in the county.

The best part of it was that we had delegates from nearly all the Sunday schools in our district, including practically every superintendent. All the speakers were present and made us some as good talks as we have ever heard.

We had a large crowd and the best order and attention that we have ever had in such a large multitude of people, and everyone seemed to enjoy the convention very much. Last, but by no means least, was the dinner, prepared by the good sisters of Oak Grove, and we want to thank them for which was plentiful and delicious, and enjoyed by all present.

It is a pleasure to hold a convention when we feel that everything was as well as at that place, and we hope that at some day later we will have the pleasure of spending another day with these good people and we intend to see our people taking an interest in the Sunday school work, and we today see improvements in our district and [illegible] to see the good [illegible]

BUILDING COLLAPSED

While workmen were engaged making excavations for the new Johnson building in Clanton Friday last the foundation of the building occupied by J. M. Potts Grocery Co., was undermined, causing the roof and side wall to crack and tumble. While the building isn't a complete wreck the wall was so seriously impaired as to necessitate the clearing away of all the brick and erect a temporary frame wall.

When the crash came Mrs. Potts was in the rear of the building where most of the damage was done, and noticing that the building was giving away she immediately rushed up front just in time to escape serious injury from the falling brick and other debris. The fall of the building created quite a bit of excitement and soon a large crowd had gathered to view the wreck. The damage to the building is $1,000.00, and Mr. Potts estimates his loss at $250.00.

To the Merit of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound during Change of Life.

Westbrook, Me. — "I was passing through the Change of Life and had pains in my back and side and was so weak I could hardly do my housework. I have taken Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and it has done me a lot of good. I will recommend your medicine to my friends and give you permission to publish my testimonial." — Mrs. LAWRENCE MARTIN, 12 King St., Westbrook, Maine.

Manston, Wis. — "At the Change of Life I suffered with pains in my back and loins until I could not stand. I also had night-sweats so that the sheets would be wet. I tried other medicine but got no relief. After taking one bottle of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound I began to improve and I continued its use for six months. The pains left me, the night-sweats and hot flashes grew less, and in one year I was a different woman. I know I have to thank you for my continued good health ever since." — Mrs. M. J. BROWNELL, Manston, Wis.

The success of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, made from roots and herbs, is unparalleled in such cases.

If you want special advice write to Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co. (confidential) Lynn, Mass. Your letter will be opened, read and answered by a woman, and held in strict confidence.

PROHIBITION TO BE RULE IN U. S. NAVY

DANIELS ISSUES ORDER ON RECOMMENDATION OF SURGEON GENERAL.

TEETOTALERS WIN VICTORY

Enlisted Men Not Now Permitted to Have Intoxicants and New Order Affects Officers.

Washington. — Absolute prohibition will prevail in the United States navy after July 1, next. Secretary Daniels made public a sweeping order, which not only will abolish the traditional "wine mess" of the officers, but will bar all alcoholic liquors from every ship and shore station of the navy. This order, constituting one of the most notable victories ever won by prohibition forces, was issued on the recommendation of Surgeon General Braisted. It was a brief and to the point:

"The use or introduction for drinking purposes of alcoholic liquors on board any naval vessel or within any navy yard or station is strictly prohibited, and commanding officers will be held directly responsible for the enforcement of this order."

In a statement Secretary Daniels said:

"I am in hearty agreement with the views expressed by the surgeon general. There should not be on shipboard with reference to intoxicants, one rule for officers and another and a different rule for the enlisted personnel. The saddest hour of my official life is when an officer or enlisted man must be punished for intoxication. During the past week it has been my painful duty to approve a courtmartial for dismissal from the service of an officer for intoxication. He told me that he never had tasted intoxicants until he did so in the wine mess on the c ruise. Others who have been disciplined for drinking to excess have made similar statements to me.

"Officers now are commissioned at the early age of 22 years. Has the government a right to permit this temptation which too often destroys the highest usefulness of young officers? I think not. If there is one profession more than any other that calls for a clear head and a steady hand, it is the naval profession. Experience has shown the wisdom of having no intoxicants on our ships for the young men who enlist.

"I believe experience has demonstrat that a uniform rule should prevail in the navy for all who enlist in the service, from the highest rank to the youngest enlisted man or officer who comes into the service and that abolition of the wine mess will be justified."

The new order will replace that section of the naval instructions which permits the formation of wine messes.

This provision reads: "Ward room officers may form a wine mess, of which all commissioned and warrant officers attached to the ship may become members, on the payment of mess entrance fees, but no officer shall be required to become a member thereof. Suitable locker room for wine mess stores shall be provided when fitting a ship for sea."

BRIDGE OVER WABASH CAVES IN

Engineer, Fireman and Baggageman Killed — Eight Passengers Hurt.

Attica, Ind. — Three persons were killed and about 35 others injured, some seriously, when Wabash passenger train No. 4, known as the Continental Limited, was wrecked when the bridge over the Wabash river, just west of here, gave way. The engine, a baggage car and the day coach dropped into the water.

When the cars left the bridge the day coach, which was crowded, fell with the rear end out of the water and though most of the injured were in this car, no one was killed. The car hardly had settled in the water before the work of rescuing the passengers was commenced and in a few minutes all had been taken out. They were taken to a hospital at LaFayette.

Trade Relations Undisturbed

Washington.—Revolution in Mexico has not disturbed trade relations between the southern republic and the United States. A report of the department of commerce shows increased activity in commercial transactions between the countries the past year. Mexico's foreign trade amounted to $248,000,000. The United States received 77 per cent. of the $150,000,000 involved in exports and 50 per cent of the $98,000,000 of imports.

Murdered While Asleep in Bed.

Hawkinsville, Ga. — H. O. Bonnell, 22 years old, was killed here as he lay in bed sleeping. An axe apparently was used in the murder. Harry Lee, negro white cloth jean and winbreaker, with him in being held by the police, pending an investigation. Lee is 18 years old. The youth denies any connection with the killing and claims it was done by an unknown negro. His claims are unsupported by the spies made by the negro in time to see him escaping from the room. Bonnell is survived by a widow.

KIDNEYS CLOG UP FROM EATING TOO MUCH MEAT

Take Tablespoonful of Salts if Back Hurts or Bladder Bothers—Meat Forms Uric Acid.

We are a nation of meat eaters and our blood is filled with uric acid, says a well-known authority, who warns us to be constantly on guard against kidney trouble.

The kidneys do their utmost to free the blood of this irritating acid, but become weak from the overwork; they get sluggish; the eliminative tissues clog and thus the waste is retained in the blood to poison the entire system.

When your kidneys ache and feel like lumps of lead, and you have stinging pains in the back or the urine is cloudy, full of sediment, or the bladder is irritable, obliging you to seek relief during the night; when you have severe headaches, nervous and dizzy spells, sleeplessness, acid stomach or rheumatism in bad weather, get from your pharmacist about four ounces of Jad Salts; take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast each morning and in a few days your kidneys will act fine. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for generations to flush and stimulate clogged kidneys, to neutralize the acids in urine so it is no longer a source of irritation, thus ending urinary and bladder disorders.

Jad Salts is inexpensive and cannot injure; makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water drink, and nobody can make a mistake by taking a little occasionally to keep the kidneys clean and active.—Adv.

Ancient Stage to Be Used.

A more than usually interesting dramatic revival is announced for April 16, when the "Agamemnon" of Aeschylus will be performed in the ancient Greek theater of Syracuse.

Nearly 24 centuries have passed since Hiero I embellished his city with the theater which tradition attributes to the architect Democopor Myrilla.

Aeschylus must have taken refuge in the court of Hiero very soon after its completion, and it may be conjectured that the great trilogy, which began with the "Agamemnon," was often performed on its stage; it is known that the "Persae" was performed there and a work written for Hiero by Aeschylus, entitled the "Etneae," of which no trace remains.—New York Sun.

HAIR CAME OUT IN BUNCHES

Route No. 3, Box 20A, Broken Arrow, Okla.—"My trouble began with an itching of the scalp of my head. My scalp at first became covered with flakes of dandruff which caused me to scratch and this caused a breaking out here and there on the scalp. It became so irritated until I could not rest at night and my hair would come out in bunches and became short and rough.

"Everything I used would cause it to grow worse and it continued that way for about three or four years. While reading the paper I saw the advertisement of Cuticura Soap and Ointment and sent for a sample. It proved so good that I decided to get some more. I used them as directed and in two weeks I saw a good effect. Now my hair is longer and looks better than I have ever known it to be. I give all the credit of my cure of scalp trouble to the Cuticura Soap and Ointment." (Signed) Mrs. Ella Sheffield, Nov. 30, 1912.

Cuticura Soap and Ointment sold throughout the world. Sample of each free, with 32-p. Skin Book. Address postcard "Cuticura, Dept. L, Boston."—Adv.

One's Ancestors.

How many male and female ancestors were required to bring you into the world? First, it was necessary that you should have a father and mother. That makes two human beings. Each of them must have had a father and mother. That makes four human beings. Again, each of them must have had a father and mother, making eight more human beings. So on we go back to the time of Jesus Christ, 56 generations. The calculation thus resulting shows that 139,235,017,489,534,976 births must have taken place to bring you into this world—you who read these lines! All this since the birth of Christ—not since the beginning of time.

HUSBAND SPENT EVERYTHING

In an Effort to Bring Wife's Troubles to End, and Finally Succeeds.

Myra, Ky.—Mrs. Sarah Branham, of this town, gives out the following statement for publication: "I am 37 years of age, and suffered untold agony with womanly troubles for 11 years. For 7 years, I was all run down, and was told that I could not live. My husband spent everything he had, but I got only temporary relief.

A merchant recommended Cardui, the woman's tonic, to my husband, and he got me 5 bottles at one time. I began taking it, and before the first bottle was gone, I began to feel better.

I took all of the 5 bottles, and I am today as sound and well as any woman, and fat and hearty."

Such testimony as the above, which is given unsolicited, speaks for itself. Can't you see, lady reader, that you are doing yourself, your family, your friends, an injustice by not, at least, trying Cardui, if you suffer from any of the many ailments so common to women?

Cardui is composed of pure, harmless, vegetable ingredients, which act in a gentle, natural way on the weakened womanly organs, helping build them back to permanent strength and health.

Cardui has helped thousands of other women. Why not you?

Ask your druggist. He knows about Cardui.

Silly Question.

The bus conductors were on strike, and at the last moment their places were taken by all kinds of men anxious to make a little money.

These temporary officials did not know much about conducting a 'bus, and even less about conducting themselves with civility, in spite of the fact that a large number of them had had the advantage of a university training.

An old lady boarded a 'bus at Piccadilly Circus, and after they had gone a few yards, asked the conductor—one of the fallen stars:

"Conductor, do you stop at the Ritz hotel?"

"No, madam," came the reply, "not at present, that is to say—I can't afford it!"

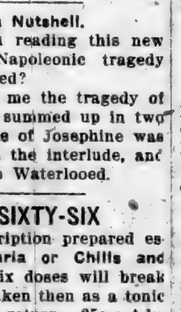
Backache Warns You



Backache is one of Nature's warnings of kidney weakness. Kidney disease kills thousands every year.

Don't neglect a bad back. If your back is lame—if it hurts to stoop or lift—if there is irregularity of the secretions—suspect your kidneys. If you suffer headaches, dizziness and are tired, nervous and worn-out, you have further proof.

Use Doan's Kidney Pills, a fine remedy for bad backs and weak kidneys.

A KENTUCKY CASE

G. W. L. Nesbitt, Marion, Ky., says: "Kidney disease had made me an invalid. I was in bed for weeks at a time and often wished that death would come and end my misery. I could hardly hold my arms above my head at times and the kidney secretions were in awful shape. Doctors held out little hope for my recovery. A relative advised me to try Doan's Kidney Pills and after I had taken one box, I felt better. Before long I was a well man and Doan's Kidney Pills alone cured me."

IRREGULARITY IN TRADE REPORTS

Withal, However, Volume of Business Is Good—Activity in South.

New York.—Bradstreet's weekly trade review says:

"There is a good deal of irregularity in trade reports. While business in many lines makes an acceptable comparison with last year, the number of complaints now heard is found in the tendency to buy in small lots for immediate uses rather to make heavy purchases for distant wants.

"Withal, there is a good volume of business, and while retail trade has been hampered by unpropitious weather, the movement in general is forward.

"In the winter wheat growing sections there is more optimism than conservatism, and, therefore, trade, in a collective sense, exhibits improvement.

"Retrenchments by railroads and unsettlement in western bituminous fields invest the labor situation with a less afvorable color.

"For the week failures, 236 against 227 last year; wheat exports, 2,653,433 against 4,081,478; bank clearings, $3,507,045,000, an increase of 3.7 per cent."

New York.—Dun's review of trade says:

"Current movement of merchandise continues somewhat below normal, particularly in the east; in the west and south there is more activity and business sentiment is quite confident because of the generally promising agricultural outlook. At a number of interior centers bank clearings exceed those of the two years immediately proceeding and at Chicago clearings for March are the largest ever reported for a single month.

"Mercantile collections are somewhat backward, which is not unusual at this season and in spite of the attractive rates for money borrowing is light and offerings of commercial paper continue restricted. Retrenchment still characterizes the iron and steel trade. Some betterment, however, is still manifest in copper. A steadier tone has developed in practically all the dry goods markets.

WILL GRANT GUNMEN REPRIEVE.

Believed Stay of Execution Until After Becker Trial Will Be Ordered.

Albany, N. Y.—Unless Governor Glynn changes his mind between now and April 7, a reprieve for the four New York gunmen, under sentence to die in Sing Sing during the week beginning April 13, will be granted that day.

If granted, the stay of execution will be until after the second trial of Charles Becker, who, with the gunmen, was found guilty of the murder of Herman Rosenthal. District Attorney Whitman ahs said he intends to try Becker a second time as soon as possible, but it generally is believed his case cannot be completed before from three to six months hence.

The governor declined to discuss the case, but the information that he now favors reprieve came from an authoritative source. Every chance should be given the prisoners, the governor believes, to produce new evidence at the Becker trial which will tend to prove their innocence. Their attorneys have said such evidence will be produced.

PARCEL POST PACKAGES STOLEN

Valued at $5,000—Three Men Are Arrested in Buffalo.

Buffalo, N. Y.—Thefts of parcel post packages valued at $5,000 were disclosed after the arrest of three men here. The proprietors of a mail order house, which was the principal loser, claim their loss during the last year will reach $15,000.

The men arrested were Paul Miller, employed at a postoffice sub-station; Bert Wilson, a street car conductor, and Edward Harrington, a carpenter. Miller, the police say, admits the theft of jewelry worth $5,000.

St. Augustine, Fla.—One person is believed to have been burned to death in the fire here which destroyed five tourist hotels, the St. Johns county court house and other property valued at approximately $750,000. UNREASONABLE THING TO ASK

Thirsty Tourists Inclined to Be Finicky Should Visit Ireland During the Winter Months.

Two New York men were touring Ireland last summer by automobile. On a hot July afternoon they came to an inn. Stopping, they went into the bar. A red-cheeked peasant girl was the barmaid. The travelers ordered Irish and soda. The girl served them and went on with her interrupted work of wiping the bar. One of the men tasted his drink and found it tepid.

"I say, my girl," he said, "won't you please put some ice in these drinks?"

Her mouth went wide open and the mopping cloth was poised in mid-air. Amaze held her silent for a moment. Then she found tongue in a hurry.

"Ice, is it? And who the — ever heard of ice in July?"

Whereupon she fell to polishing again.

Caravaggio Picture Found.

An important find has been made in the art collection of Marchese della Stufa at France. It is a painting by Caravaggio, which had been lost sight of for many years. The painting was known to connoisseurs through a print in the Galleria degli Ufizzi.

Sig di Pietro, the secretary of this gallery, was determined to find the picture. It was known that in the year 1700 it was in possession of the Cerretani family, which is now extinct.

Sig di Pietro, while examining Marchese della Stufa's collection saw the painting and immediately identified it. The Ufizzi print is an exact reproduction of the picture, which is a typical Caravaggio. It depicts six youths, one of whom is playing a violin, one a lute and one a flute, while two are singing and one is listening.—New York Sun.

GRANDMA USED SAGE TEA TO DARKEN HER GRAY HAIR

She Made Up a Mixture of Sage Tea and Sulphur to Bring Back Color, Gloss, Thickness.

Almost everyone knows that Sage Tea and Sulphur, properly compounded, brings back the natural color and lustre to the hair when faded, streaked or gray; also ends dandruff, itching scalp and stops falling hair. Years ago the only way to get this mixture was to make it at home, which is mussy and troublesome. Nowadays, by asking at any store for "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Hair Remedy," you will get a large bottle of this famous old recipe for about 50 cents.

Don't stay gray! Try it! No one can possibly tell that you darkened your hair, as it does it so naturally and evenly. You dampen a sponge or soft brush with it and draw this through your hair, taking one small strand at a time; by morning the gray hair disappears, and after another application or two, your hair becomes beautifully dark, thick and glossy. Entered at the Post Office at Clanton, Ala., as second-class mail matter under act of Congress, March 3rd, 1879.

Now that the election is over, lets all get to work and pull together and elect our ticket by a large majority.

We will now have a rest from elections till April 21st, when the Bull Moose will pull off his little "Piemary."

Senator Curry, Chilton's candidate for Lieutenant Governor, made a splendid race. He carried his home county almost solidly and received handsome majorities in a number of the larger counties.

The county ticket nominated at Monday's primary is composed of good strong men, all of whom are well known for their business ability and will make most capable officials.

Mr. W. H. Gillespie in last weeks Union-Banner wants to know why Mr. John Stanfield withdrew from the race for Representive. We suopose Mr. Stanfield retired because he wanted to. We would like however, for Mr. Gillespie to inform us why it was Mr. Lee Vickers never announced for Sheriff.

The run-off for the gubernatorial nomination on May the 11th will be between Comer and Henderson. From present indications it would seem that Comer has the edge, but it all depends on which way the Kolb and Seed strength goes.

Judge Deason, though defeated for Congress, should congratulate himself on the good race he made. Entering the field just thirty days before the primary he had little time to make a thorough canvass of the district, and then a great many voters had pledged their support to Mr. Blackmon. A number of post office appointments were hanging fire and with the odds greatly against Judge Deason, he made a splendid showing, and as one man has expressed it who went down in defeat for governor a few years ago, it took a mighty good man to defeat him.

MR. JONES THANKS FRIENDS

I wish to tender my grateful and heartfelt thanks to my friends in Chilton county who so lovally supported me in my race for Sheriff at Monday's primary. The state of my wife's health was such that I could not make a thorough canvass of the county and my nomination and the very large vote accorded me was due largely to the untiring efforts of my friends, for which I am profoundly grateful.

Respectfully,
B. E. Jones.

TEAM WORK FOR FARMERS

Thorsby, Ala.

Mr. J. Sterling Moran,
Agent of Rural Organization Service,
Dear Sir:

As I understand the situation in Chilton county, the great need of the farmer is team work. The trouble is not that they do not work. Some of them probably work too hard, at least with their muscles. I do not know of any class that works the hard with their heads.

The things which most need doing can only be done by organized team work, by all the members of the community working together for the common good. It will be your work to persuade the farmer of Chilton county to work together. Better practice on their individual part is doubtless needed, but that is well looked after by Mr. Conway and other representatives of the Department of Agriculture. As the agent of the Rural Organization Service of the Department of Agriculture, your function will be to promote organized efforts on the part of whole communities to improve all economic and social conditions.

The following are some of the hings which call for organized team work because the individual farmer, however wise, energetic and progressive, is almost helpless, at least he can accomplish very little. Whereas wonderful results can be obtained wherever the whole neighborhood, or even a large part of it, can be persuaded to work together for the common good.

1. Better business methods.
A. The marketing of farm products.
B. The purchasive of farm supplies.
C. The supply of credit faculties.
II. Better social conditions.
A. Education.
B. Communication.
1. Roads.
2. Telephones.
C. Sanitation.
D. Recreation.
E. Beautification of the Country side.

Of course you cannot cover all this field. A few things well done are better than many things half done. But if the farmer of Chilton county will work together on this whole program for a period of years, they can make one of the finest counties in the United States. They can almost create a new earth.

Very sincerely,
T. N. CARVER,
Director.

Effect Passenger Rate Reduction on Penny Script Books.

A misapprehension apparently existing as to the effect of the adoption of a local rate of passenger fare of two and a half cents per mile on the lines of the Louisville and Nashville Railroad in the states of Alabama, Tennessee and Kentucky upon the use of penny scrip books, it should be understood that with April 1st in Alabama, and co-incident with the effective date of the new passenger rates in the other states, the penny scrip book, which contains twenty five hundred one cent coupons and is sold at $20.00, or a reduction of 20 per cent. will be accepted in payment for tickets at the new fares, thus producing a net rate to the holdgr of these books of two cents per mile wherever the local faru is made upon the basis of two and a half cents per mile.

In a similar manner the scrip book will secure a net rate of two cents per mile on interstate journeys when the interstate passenger fares have been adjusted to the basis of the new state fares which will be as soon as the interstate tariffs can be compiled.

These books are interchangeable between all railroads east of the Mississippi and south of the Ohio and Potomac rivers, and secure the same percentage of reduction, with but few exceptions throughout the entire territory.

IMPROVED PARCEL POST FACILITIES

It is gratifying to note that Postmaster-General Burleson, since Congress declined to hamper and restrict his program for bettering our parcel post system, has gone steadily ahead with his plans for making the service really more efficient and effective in bringing the producer and consumer closer together.

The regulations, as amended, provide for the carrying of seeds, bulbs, cuttings, scions and plants, weighing less than four ounces, at a flat rate of one cent for each ounce or fraction thereof, regardless of the distance. On similar articles weighing over four ounces the regular parcel post rates, varying according to the different zones, are in effect.

Another noteworthy improvement is the amendment permitting the shipment of books weighing in excess of eight ounces by parcel post. All books coming under this weight are subject to the regular postage hitherto charged on books.

The provision permitting the shipment of seeds and plants comes a little late to be of much value to the farmers this season, but it goes without saying that it will be a great advantage in the future. The ouly wonder is that such an important feature of the law was omitted in the beginning.—Progressive Farmer.

Get wise, boys, and join the Navy and let's see if we can't get dear old Chilton to produce more boys for the service of our country than any other county in the State.

Hoping to see the smiling faces of some more Chilton county boys, I will remain as ever.

Look to Your Plumbing.

You know what happens in a home in which the plumbing is in poor condition—everybody in the house is liable to contract typhoid or some other fever. The digestive organs perform the same functions in the human body as the plumbing does for the house, and they should be kept in first class condition all the time. If you have any trouble with your digestion take Chamberlain's Tablets and you are certain to get quick relief. For sale by Alred Drug Co.

Johnson—How?

Jackson—He wrote an article on "The Ideal Wife" for a ladies' paper last month.

Johnson—Well, what's that to do with his present fix?

Jackson—Somebody told his wife about it, and she's been reading the thing over during the past two days, trying to discover a single trait wherein his ideal resembles her. She hasn't found it, and Bunker dines in the city now.

UNDERWOOD NOMINATED SENATOR---WHITE GETS SHORT TERM

CLAYTON REELECTED CONGRESSMAN BY GOOD MAJORITY

UNDERWOOD GETS SENATORIAL TOGA

ELECTED OVER HOBSON BY APPROXIMATELY 30,000 MAJORITY.

SHORT TERM GOES TO WHITE

Birmingham Man Outdistances His Two Opponents in the Short Term Senatorial Race

Birmingham.—Oscar W. Underwood was nominated United States Senator by the people of Alabama,

O. W. UNDERWOOD

Elected to United States Senate by Decisive Majority over his opponent, R. P. Hobson, by approximately 30,000 majorty.

As was predicted by the Underwood supporters, this county, Jefferson, gave him an approximate majority of 5,000 votes.

In Central and South Alabama and North Alabama Congressman Underwood received a sweeping majority and polled a good vote in East and West Alabama.

Mr. Underwood swept Mobile, Montgomery and Jefferson. His majority in the latter county is approximately 5,000. It may be 6,000. Hobson carried only a few minor beats—and these by small majorities.

Hobson carried his district, the Sixth. In the First Mr. Underwood swept Choctaw, thought to be certain for Hobson. In the Second, with the possible exception of Butler, Mr. Underwood made a clean sweep. Hobson led in Coffee. The struggle was close in Geneva and Henry. Lee, however, went overwhelming for Underwood. Bullock gave him a fine majority. Russell and Barbour were carried by Underwood.

In the Fourth, Mr. Underwood's victory was complete. The counties of the Fifth returned fine majorities. In three counties of the Seventh the vote was close. Hobson showed unexpected strength in rural sections of Etowah. It will take a tabulated count to determine the result. In the Eighth, Mr. Underwood made a clean sweep. Lauderdale county, always claimed by Underwood, went into the Underwood column as predicted. Blount, Perry, Bibb and Jefferson gave Mr. Underwood astounding majorities—these being the counties of the Ninth district, which district Mr. Underwood has represented in Congress for 20 years.

Hobson carried the Sixth district by a handsome majority. Walker county has always been conceded to Hobson by more than 500. Hobson's majority, however, is approximately 1,000. Hobson carried Fayette by a fine majority, and also in Marion, Pickens and Lamar the vote was close, however, Hobsen secured small majorities in both. Mr. Underwood carried Tuscaloosa, Sumter and Greene, and the vote in Hale was close. But for the large vote given Hobson by Walker county, the count in the Sixth district would have been close.

The day was ideal for its purpose. The day dawned clear. It was warm in the morning and hot at noon. Great throngs of people were on the streets in the larger centers. In smaller cities there were large numbers of people about the polls. There was voting and political dissertation everywhere. The feature, however, is that the crowd, everywhere, was good natured. No news of difficulties from any part of the state—this despite the fact that the election was hotly contested.

Everywhere the vote polled was large. It is estimated that at least 130,000 ballots were cast. The total may go as high as 135,000.

Following is the statements of the two senatorial aspirants published in the Age-Herald:

The statement of Mr. Underwood follows:

"I am thoroughly satisfied with the primary election. The splendid majority that the returns indicate will be given me in the state I attribute to the magnificent work that my friends have done for me in my absence. The result I feel is a personal vindication and a distinct approval of my remaining in Washington and attending to my official duties.

"But after all is said the final conclusion must be that it is more of a victory for fundamental democratic principles than for myself."

Although his manager, L. Beck Musgrove of Jasper, was reported earlier in the night as having conceded the victory for Oscar W. Underwood by 15,000 votes, Captain Hobson vigorously maintained that he was not defeated.

"Captain Hobson, have you any statement to make?" he was asked.

"No."

"Well, captain, do you concede the nomination of Mr. Underwood?"

"I most assuredly do not."

"But, captain," he was told, "the returns indicate rather accurately and fully that he is nominated."

"Have you figured on the averages that you have received?"

"Well, captain, not exactly, as you put it," he was told.

"Well, you may send out to the world what you wish but you say that I was called up at this hour and that I said most positively that I did not concede the nomination of Underwood."

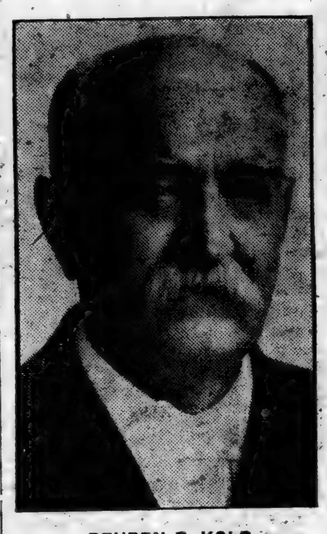
"We will, assuredly, captain."

"Good night, sir."

"Good night, captain."

WHITE NOMINATED FOR SHORT TERM

Birmingham.—Capt. Frank S. White has been nominated for the short term in the Senate. He was opposed by Ray Rushton and Watt G. Brown. In South Alabama the Birmingham man showed unexpected strength. He swept Jefferson county and carried Mobile. Rushton received an overwhelming majority in Montgomery.



KOLB AND COMER IN CLOSE RACE

SECOND PRIMARY NECESSARY TO DECIDE RACE FOR GOVERNOR

Thomas E. Kilby Winner Over His Two Opponents for Lieutenant-Governor

Birmingham.—Former Governor B. B. Comer has received a plurality in his race for governor, with Captain

REUBEN F. KOLB

In the Race for Governor He Ran Second.

Reuben F. Kolb a good second, Henderson third and Seed fourth. Second primary will be necessary to settle the gubernatorial race.

Comer led his opponents in a majority of the counties of the state.

Kolb carried Mobile and Montgomery counties.

Heavy registration in every county of the state ran the vote up approximately 15,000 above the expectations of the campaign managers of the various candidates. Heavy registration in Jefferson, Montgomery, Mobile and Dallas, especially added 10,000 votes to the usual poll of these counties.

The southern tier of counties, including Mobile, Washington, Baldwin, Monroe, Conecuh and others polled a very heavy vote.

In the wiregrass the vote was

WALTER D. SEED

heavy, especially in Houston, Barbour and Pike counties. Dothan reported the heaviest vote in her history, as did Troy and Eufaula.

Voting was heavy in Selma, Tuscaloosa and all of the western section of the state. North Alabama voted heavily, every county from the Tennessee line to middle Alabama voting more votes than were ever known before.

East Alabama followed in the footsteps of the other sections. Lanett, Opelika, Girard, Tuskegee and other places reported the vote heavy, the rural precincts in these counties polling up a large vote, larger than ever before.

Kilby, Lieutenant Governor.

For lieutenant governor, Tullmas M. Kilby of Randolph, swept the State. With the exception of Calhoun, the home county of Thomas H. Cuny, the Anniestonian carried practically every county of the State by large majorities.

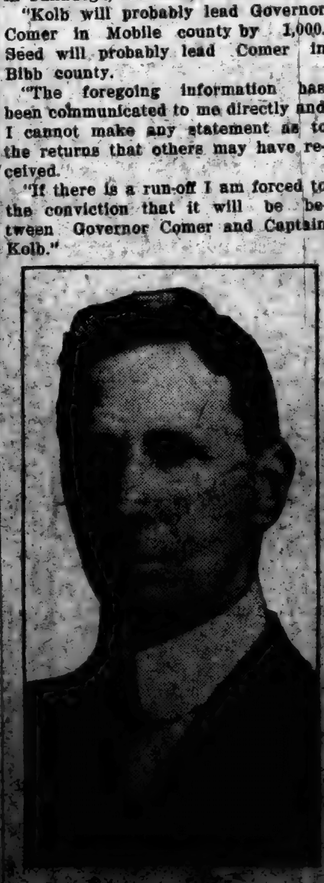
For other State offices the result is close and in many instances it will require an official count to determine the result

For attorney general, the nomination of William L. Martin is indicated. For commissioner of agriculture the race is clouded to such an extent that the leader can scarcely be predicted. For auditor, M. C. Allgood is leading. For treasurer, there is great doubt, although Brooks Smith and M. A. Graham appear to have an advantage.

B. H. Cooper and S. P. Gaillard swept the State in their efforts to secure seats on the railroad commission. Mr. Cooper, Birmingham's candidate, led the ticket. Frank N. Julian and Leon McCord, incumbents, were beaten.

Comer's Manager Makes Statement.



At Comer headquarters Col. A. M. Garber, campaign manager for Gover Comer, made the following statement as reported in the Age-Herald:

"Indications are that Governor Comer has a majority in Baldwin, Conecuh, Shelby, Etowah, Lee, Dallas and probably in Wilcox. There is a plurality indicated for Governor Comer in Talladega, Limestone and Morgan.

"Kolb will probably lead Governor Comer in Mobile county by 1,000. Seed will probably lead Comer in Bibb county.

"The foregoing information has been communicated to me directly and I cannot make any statement as to the returns that others may have received.

"If there is a run-off I am forced to the conviction that it will be between Governor Comer and Captain Kolb."

Taylor Defeated.

In the congressional districts, surprises were in order. O. L. Gray defeated G. W. Taylor, incumbent, in the First. In the Second, S. Hubert Dent, incumbent, won with comparative ease over Woodford Mabry. In the Fourth Judge Deason was overwhelmed by Fred L. Blackmon, incumbent. In the Fifth, J. Tom Heflin had no opposition. In the Sixth, William B. Bankhead of Jasper was nominated over William B. Oliver of Tuscaloosa. In the Seventh, John L. Burnett, incumbent, defeated L. B. Rainey. In the Eighth, Judge E. B. Bankhead Confident.

The VALIANTS of VIRGINIA

SYNOPSIS.

John Valiant, a rich society favorite, suddenly discovers that the Valiant corporation, which his father founded and which was the principal source of his wealth, has failed. He voluntarily turns over his private fortune to the receiver for the corporation. His entire remaining possessions consist of an old motor car, a pedigreed bull dog and Damory court, a neglected estate in Virginia. On the way to Damory court he meets Shirley Dandridge, an auburn-haired beauty, and decides that he is going to like Virginia immensely. Shirley's mother, Mrs. Dandridge, and Major Bristow exchange reminiscences during which it is revealed that the major, Valiant's father, and a man named Sasson were rivals for the hand of Mrs. Dandridge in her youth. Sasson and Valiant fought a duel on her account in which the former was killed. Valiant finds Damory court overgrown with weeds and creepers and the buildings in a very much neglected condition. He decides to rehabilitate the place and make the land produce a living for him. Valiant saves Shirley from the bite of a snake, which bites him. Knowing the deadliness of the bite, Shirley sucks the poison from the wound and saves his life. Shirley tells her mother of the incident and the latter is strangely moved at hearing that a Valiant is again living at Damory court.

CHAPTER XVI—Continued.

The major nodded, "Ah, yes," he said. "The Continental prison-camp."

"And just over this rise there I can see an old court-house, and the Virginia Assembly boiling under the golden tongue-lashing of lean raw-boned Patrick Henry. I see a messenger gallop up and see the members scramble to their saddles—and then, Tarleton and his red-coats streaming up, too late."

"Well," commented the doctor deliberately, "all I have to say is, don't materialize too much to Mrs. Poly Gifford when you meet her. She'll have you lecturing to the Ladies' Church Guild before you know it."

"I hope you ride, Mr. Valiant?" the latter asked genially.

"I'm fond of it," said Valiant, "but I have no horse as yet."

"I was thinking," pursued the major, "of the coming tournament."

"Tournament?"

The doctor cut in. "A ridiculous cock-a-doodle-do which gives the young bucks a chance to rig out in silly toggery and prance their colts before a lot of petticoats!"

"It's an annual affair," explained the major; "a kind of spectacle. For many years, by the way, it has been held on a part of this estate—perhaps you will have no objection to its use this season?—and at night there is a dance at the Country Club. By the way, you must let me introduce you there—tomorrow. I've taken the liberty already of putting your name up."

"Good lord!" growled the doctor, aside. "He counts himself young! If I'd reached your age, Bristow—"

"You have," said the major, nettled. "Four years ago!—As I was saying, Mr. Valiant, they ride for a prize. It's a very ancient thing—I've seen references to it in a colonial manuscript in the Byrd Library at Westover. No doubt it's come down directly from the old jousts."

"You don't mean to say," cried his hearer in genuine astonishment, "that Virginia has a lineal descendant of the tourney?"

The major nodded. "Yes. Certain sections of Kentucky used to have it, too, but it has died out there. It exists now only in this state. It's a curious thing that the old knightly meetings of the middle ages should survive today only on American soil and in a corner of Virginia."

Doctor Southall, meanwhile, had set his gaze on the litter of pamphlets. He turned with an appreciative eye. "You're beginning in earnest. The Agricultural Department. And the Congressional frank."

"I'm afraid I'm a sad sketch as a scientist," laughed Valiant. "My point of view has to be a somewhat practical one. I must be self-supporting. Damory Court is a big estate. It has grain lands and forest as well. If my ancestors lived from it, I can. It's not only that," he went on more slowly, "I want to make the most of the place for its own sake, too. Not only of its possibilities for earning, but of its natural beauties. I lack the resources I once had, but I can give it thought and work, and if they can bring Damory Court back to anything even remotely resembling what it once was, I'll not spare either."

The major smote his knee and even the doctor's face showed a grim if unwilling approval. "I believe you'll do it!" exclaimed the former. "And let me say, sah, that the neighborhood is not unaware of the splendid generosity which is responsible for the present lack of which you speak."

Valiant put out his hand with a little gesture of deprecation, but the other disregarded it. "Confound it, sah, it was to be expected of a Valiant. Your ancestors wrote their names in capital letters over this country. They were an up and down lot, but good or bad (and, as Southall says, I reckon"—he nodded toward the great portrait above the couch—"they weren't all little woolly lambs) they did big things in a big way."

Valiant leaned forward eagerly, a question on his lips. But at the moment a diversion occurred in the shape of Uncle Jefferson, who re-entered, bearing a tray on which set sundry jugs and clinking glasses, glowing with white and green and gold.

"You old humbug," said the doctor, "don't you know the major's that poisoned with mint-juleps already that he can't get up before eight in the morning?"

"Well, suh," tittered Uncle Jefferson, "Ah done foun' er mint-baid down below de kitchens dis mawnin'. Yo'-all gemmun' 'bout de bigges' expuhts in dis yeah county, en Ah reck'n Mars' Valiant sho' 'sist on yo' samplin' et."

"Sah," said the major feelingly, turning to his host, "I'm proud to drink your health in the typical beverage of Virginia!" He touched glasses with Valiant and glared at the doctor, who was sipping his own thoughtfully. "Poems have been written on the julep, sah."

"They make good epitaphs, too," observed the doctor.

"I noticed your glass isn't going begging," the major retorted. "Unc' Jefferson, that's as good mint as graw in the gyarden of Eden. See that those lazy niggers of yours don't grub the patch out by mistake."

"Yas, sah," said Uncle Jefferson, as he retired with the tray. "Ah gwineter put er fence eroun' dat ar baid 'fo' sundown."

The question that had sprung to Valiant's lips now found utterance. "I saw you look at the portrait there," he said to the major. "Which of my ancestors is it?"

The other got up and stood before the mantel-piece in a Napoleonic attitude. "That," he said, fixing his eyeglasses, "is your great-grandfather, Devil-John Valiant."

"Devil-John!" echoed his host. "Yes, I've heard the name."

The doctor guffawed. "He earned it, I reckon. I never realized what a sinister expression that missing optic gives the old ruffian. There was a skirmish during the war on the hillside yonder and a bullet cut it out. When we were boys we used to call him 'Old One-Eye.'"

"It interests me enormously," John Valiant spoke explosively.

"The stories of Devil-John would fill a mighty big book," said the major. "By all accounts he ought to have lived in the middle ages." Crossing the library, he looked into the dining-room. "I thought I remembered. The portrait over the console there is his wife, your great-grandmother. They say he bet that when he brought his bride home, she should walk into Damory Court between rows of candlesticks worth twenty-thousand dollars. He made the wager good, too, for when she came up those steps out there, there was a row of ten candles burning on either side of the doorway, each held by a young slave worth a thousand dollars in the market.

"Some say he grew jealous of his wife's beauty. There were any number of stories told of his cruelties to her that aren't worth repeating. She died early—poor lady—and your grandfather was the only issue. Devil-John himself lived to be past seventy, and at that age, when most men were stacking their sins and groaning with the gout, he was dicing and fox-hunting with the youngest of them. He always swore he would die with his boots on, and they say when the doctor told him he had only a few hours leeway, he made his slaves dress him completely and prop him on his horse. They galloped out so, a negro on either side of him. It was a stormy night, black as the Earl of Hell's riding-boots, with wind and lightning, and he rode cursing at both. There's an old black-gum tree a mile from here that they still call Devil-John's tree. They were just passing under it when the lightning struck it. Lightning has no effect on the black-gum, you know. The bolt glanced from the tree and struck him between the two slaves without harming either of them. It killed his horse, too. That's the story. To be sure at this date nobody can separate fact from fiction. Possibly he wasn't so much worse than the rest of his neighbors—not excepting the parsons. Other times, other manners!"

"They weren't any worse than the present generation," said the doctor malevolently. "You fops battle men then knew only claret; now they punish whiskey-straight."

The major buried his nose in his julep for a long moment; before he looked at the doctor blandly. "I agree with you, Bristow," he said. "But my who failed in his courtesy there, sah, was called to account for it. He was mighty apt to find himself standing in the cool dawn at the butt-end of a—"

He broke off and coughed. There was an awkward pause in which he set down his glass noisily and rose and stood before the open bookcase. "I envy you this, sah," he said with somewhat of haste. "A fine old collection. Bless my soul, what a curious volume!"

As he spoke, his hand jerked out a heavy-looking leather-back. Valiant, who had risen and stood beside him, saw instantly that what he had drawn from the shelf was the morocco case that held the rusted dueling-pistol! In the major's hands the broken box opened. A sudden startled look darted across his leonine face. With smothered exclamation he thrust it back between the books and closed the glass door.

Valiant had paled. His previous finding of the weapon had escaped his mind. Now he read, as clearly as if it had been printed in black-letter across the sunny wall, the significance of the major's confusion. That weapon had been in his father's hand when he faced his opponent in that fatal duel! It flashed across his mind as the doctor lunged for his hat and stick and got to his feet.

"Come, Bristow," said the latter irritably. "Your feet will grow fast to the floor presently. We mustn't talk a new neighbor to death. I've got to see a patient at six."

CHAPTER XVII.

John Valiant Asks a Question.

Valiant went with them to the outer door. A painful thought was flooding his mind. It hampered his speech and it was only by a violent effort that he found voice:

"One moment! There is a question I would like to ask."

Both gentlemen had turned upon the steps and as they faced him, he thought a swift glance passed between them. They waited courteously, the doctor with his habitual frown, the major's hand fumbling for the black ribbon on his waistcoat.

"Since I came here, I have heard"—his tone was uneven—"of a duel in which my father was a principal. There was such a meeting?"

"There was," said the doctor after the slightest pause of surprise. "Had you known nothing of it?"

"Absolutely nothing."

The major cleared his throat. "It was something he might naturally not have made a record of," he said. "The two had been friends, and it—it was a fatal encounter for the other. The doctor and I were your father's seconds."

There was a silence, a strange silence, before Valiant could begin. When he did his voice was hoarse, though it had sprung to his lips clear. "May I then ask circumstances in that meeting that might be humiliating as reflecting on his—honor?"

"Good God, sir!" said the major impatiently.

On his hearing [illegible]

There was a [illegible]

which he could [illegible]

In that single exclamation the major seemed to have exhausted his vocabulary. He was looking at the ground. It was the doctor who spoke at last, in a silence that to the man in the doorway weighed like a hundred atmospheres.

"No!" he said bluntly, "Certainly not. What put that into your head?"

When he was alone in the library Valiant opened the glass door and took from the shelf the morocco case. The old shiver of repugnance ran over him at the very touch of the leather. In the farthest corner was a low commode. He set the case on this and moved the big tapestry screen across the angle, hiding it from view.

* * * * * * * * *

In the great hall at Damory Court the candles in their brass wall-sconces blinked back from the polished parquetry and the shining fire-dogs, filling the rather solemn gloom with an air of warmth and creature-comfort. Leaning against the newel-post, Valiant gazed about him. How different it all looked from the night of his coming!

He began to walk up and down the floor, teasing pricks of restlessness urging him. He opened the door and passed into the unlighted dining-room. On the sideboard set a silver loving-cup that had arrived the day before in a huge box with his books and knick-knacks. He had won it at polo. He lifted it, fingering its carved handles. He remembered that when that particular score had been made, Katharine Fargo had sat in one of the drags at the side-line.

But the memory evoked no thrill. Instead, the thought of her palely-cold, passionless beauty called up another mobile thoroughbred face instinct with quick flashings of mirth and hauteur. Again he felt the fierce clutch of small fingers, as they fought with his in that struggle for his life. Each line of that face stood before him—the arching brows, the cameo-delicacy of profile, the magnolia skin and hair like a brown-gold cloud across the sun.

He stepped down to the graveled drive and followed it to the gate, then, bareheaded, took the Red Road. Along this highway he had rattled in Uncle Jefferson's crazy hack—with her red rose in his hand. The musky scent of the pressed leaves in the book in his pocket seemed to be all about him.

The odor of living roses, in fact, was in the air. It came on the scarce-felt breeze, a heavy calling perfume. He walked on, keeping the road by the misty infiltrating shimmer of the stars, with a sensation rather of gliding than of walking. It occurred to him that if, as scientists say, colors emit sound-tones, scents also should possess a music of their own: the honeysuckle fragrance, maybe—soft mellow fluting as of diminutive wind-instruments; the far-faint sickly odor of lilies—the upper register of faery violins; this spicy breath of roses—blending, throbbing chords like elfin echoes of an Italian harp. The fancy pleased him; he could imagine the perfume no in the air carried with it an under-music, like a ghostly harping.

It came to him at the same instant that this was no mere fancy. Somewhere in the languorous night a harp was being played. He paused and listened intently, then went on toward the sound. The rose scent had grown stronger; it was almost in that heavy air, as if he were breasting an etherial sea of attar. He felt as if he were treading on a path of rose-leaves, down which the increasing melody flowed crimsonly to him, calling, calling.

He stopped stock-still. He had been skirting a close-cropped hedge of box. This had ended abruptly, and he was looking straight up a bar of green-yellow radiance from a double doorway. The latter opened on a porch and the light, flung across this, drenched an arbor of climbing roses, making it stand out a mass of woven rubies set in emerald.

He drew a long sigh of more than delight, for framed in the doorway he saw a figure in misty white, leaning to the gilded upright of a harp. He knew at once that it was Shirley. Holding his breath, he came closer, his feet muffled in the thick grass. He stood in the dense obscurity, one hand gripping the gnarled limb of a catalpa, his eyes following the shapely arms from wrist to shoulder, the fingers straying across the strings, the bending cheek caressing the carved wood. She was playing the melody of Shelley's "Indian Serenade"—touching the chords softly and tenderly—and his lips moved, molding themselves soundlessly to the words.

The serenade died in a single long note. As if in answer to it there rose a flood of bird-music from beyond the arbor—jets of song that swelled and rippled to a soaring melody. She heard it, too, for the gracile fingers fell from the strings. She listened a moment, with head held to one side, then sprang up and came through the door and down the steps.

He hesitated a moment, then a single stride took him from the shadow

CHAPTER XVIII.

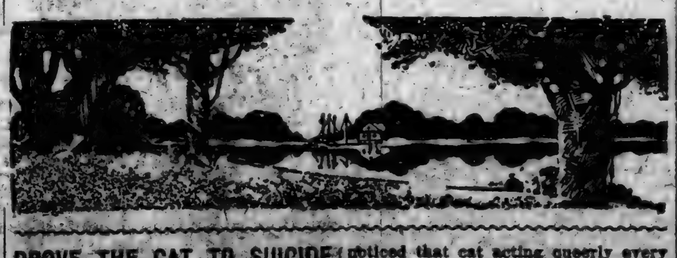
Beyond the Box-Hedge.

As he greeted her, his gaze plunged deep into hers. She had recoiled a step, startled, to recognize him almost instantly. He noted the shrinking and thought it due to a stabbing memory of that forest-horror. His first words were prosaic enough:

"I'm an unconscionable trespasser," he said. "It must seem awfully prowly, but I didn't realize I was on private property till I passed the hedge there."

As her hand lay in his, a strange fancy stirred in him: in that wood-meeting she had seemed something witch-like, the wilful spirit of the passionate spring herself, mixed of her aerial essences and jungle wildernesses; in this scented dim-lit close she was grave-eyed, subdued, a paler pensive woman of under-half-guessed sadnesses and haunting moods. With her answer, however, this gravity seemed to slip from her like a garment. She laughed lightly.

"I love to prowl myself. I think sometimes I like the night better than the day. I believe in one of my incarnations I must have been a panther."



They both laughed. "I'm growing superstitious about flowers," he said. "You know a rose figured in our first meeting. And in our last—"

She shrank momentarily. "The cape jessamines! I shall always think of that when I see them!"

"Ah, forgive me!" he begged. "But when I remember what you did—for me! Oh, I know! But for you, I must have died."

"But for me you wouldn't have been bitten. But don't let's talk of it." She shivered suddenly.

DROVE THE CAT TO SUICIDE

Representative Probably Did a Little Thinking After He Had Heard Policeman's Story.

"Alfalfa Bill" Murray, representative from Oklahoma, made a tour of Washington a short time ago with a party of friends. In due time they reached the Washington monument, and the Oklahoma statesman told at length of the beauties of the shaft.

At the close of his peroration, Alfalfa Bill thopped his brow and turned genially to a minion of the law nearby.

"How about it," asked he, "isn't that some little talk on this ancient pile of masonry?"

"You forgot about the cat," replied that official, imperturbably.

"What cat?"

"The brindled cat of 1885."

"Well, what about him?" queried Representative Murray.

"Oh, nothing," replied the guard, evasively.

"Come, come," said Mr. Murray, drawing himself up to his full height, "I demand to know about this cat."

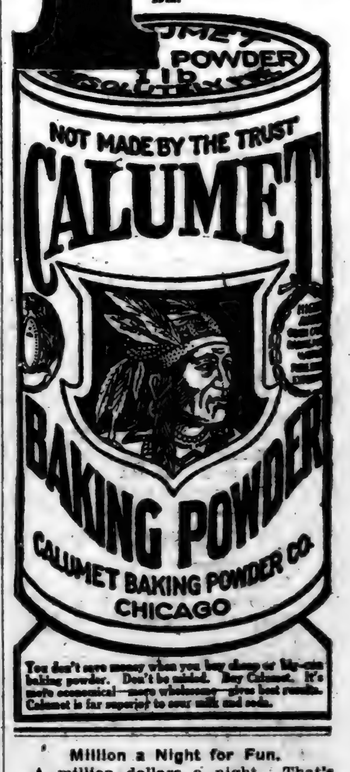
Some Mushroom.



Epicures in the United States, who love mushrooms will long for a time in the Austrian Tyrol, where real mushrooms grow. A traveler writing of the region says: Bordering the road that led up the mountain were Italian chestnut trees, so large that it took from three to five of us to span the trunks of most of them. Under one of these one evening I saw crunching what I took to be a small, dark-gray kitten. Stopping, I found that it was not a kitten, but a mushroom. Million a Night for Fun.

A million dollars a night. That's what a proprietor of a Broadway hotel in New York figures that the natives and visitors spend for revel and pleasure. It sounds fanciful, true. But here's how he spends the million: Dinners, $125,000; suppers and wine, $125,000; theaters, $175,000; taxicabs, $100,000; hotels, $175,000; cafes, flowers and other incidentals, $300,000. "If there isn't a million spent in the Broadway district in a night," he adds, "what is left wouldn't enable a man to have a steam yacht and a country home."

Canal Comment.

"Charley, dear," said young Mrs. Torkins, "they are having a great deal of agitation about the big canal, aren't they?"

"Yes."

"Don't you know, I sometimes think it might have been better if we had been content with the old-fashioned canals where all the talking was done by the man who was driving the mule!"

ENERGY FRO[illegible] SUGAR DIET

Experiments Have Shown That It Has a Wo[illegible]fect Upon the [illegible]n Body.

The [illegible]ologist who discovered that your liver and your muscles manufacture sugar while you sleep has been surpassed by the German physician who uses sugar dissolved in water as an excellent surgical dressing for all sorts of wounds.

Drs. Jacques Passet and Piere Mathieu have declared that when animals eat sugar exclusively for long periods their weight at first decreases, soon begins to mend and then fall away again as the diet continues.

Dr. H. Heald of Tacoma Park, D. C., disagrees with the laboratory findings. He says sugar is comparable to gasoline. As the latter is the fuel of the internal combustion engine, so sugar is the fuel of the human machine. Sugar, he says, is the staff of life, and man can produce more energy from sugar than from any other food.

A distinguished British heart specialist has lately proved the efficacy of lump sugar in the treatment of a man nearly eighty years old who was dying with a vicious disease of the heart. After all the usual remedial measures had failed one of the maids asked if there was any objection to feeding the sufferer lump sugar. The physician gave his consent and four lumps were given in a little water. These were repeated every four hours, and in a week he was a well man.

Dr. Berseller recommends to one of the German medical societies the use of powdered sugar in the treatment of old, ill treated and neglected cancers. He says the application of sugar to the fetid parts lessens the disagreeable odor and discharges. Furthermore, the general condition of the patient improves and all hemorrhages cease. Indeed, unless you have had a long experience with cancer patients, you are liable to be deluded into the belief that the cancer has healed.

BRIGHTEN THAT NORTH ROOM

Skillful Touches in Arrangement of Furniture and Draperies Will Accomplish Wonders.

I would advise papering the room with a self-toned paper, light tan in color as near to the tint of sunshine as you can get. Your shades should, of course, match those in use all over the house. Then make your drapery curtains of tan art scrim, just a deep hemstitched hem at the bottom, and allow them to hang straight.

Stain the woodwork white and give it several coats, finishing off with an enamel or egg-shell finish. For the center of the room have an "art "square" made. This may be woven as the rag rugs are or crocheted or knitted. I prefer the woven rugs and beautiful solid effects with handsome borders now possible.

Try to have the rose color predominate in rug and articles of furnishing for the bureau and chiffonier pillows and couch cover. With white enamel furniture, the north room will be far from a cold, repellant room and will be a transplanted sunshiny corner.—Exchange.

To Break Up a Cold.

The hydropathic treatment of a cold in the head is more reliable than any other one which scarcely requires the aid of a physician. It is as follows: In the morning after rising and at night before retiring wash the feet and legs as high up as the knees in cold water, then rub them with a rough towel and massage them till the skin is red and glowing. In addition to this, snuff tepid water up the nose frequently during the day and sip with a teaspoon a glassful as hot as can be borne an hour before each meal and at bedtime. A few days is often quite sufficient for simple cases and obstinate ones yield if the treatment is prolonged. No medicines are required. If taken in the first stages of the disease a cold is broken up which might otherwise become a severe case of bronchitis lasting many days or weeks.

SENATOR CURRY EXPRESSES THANKS

Editor Clanton Press:

Please allow me to express my sincere thanks, through the columns of your splendid paper, to those democrats of Chilton who so loyally supported me in my candidacy for Lieutenant Governor of Alabama, and to assure them that in all the coming years, I shall remember them in deepest gratitude. I attribute my defeat to two causes: Late entry into the race, and the desire of a majority of the people of Alabama to return to State-wide prohibition. While I accept defeat most cheerfully, I do not surrender one iota of my conviction that the good old democratic doctrine of local self-government is the only safe and satisfactory system. This has been proven by the wisdom and experience of man in all the ages, has always been and is now the keystone in the structure of democratic government in state and nation.

To me, the most gratifying facts connected with my candidacy are: that I carried, among other counties, that of Monroe, the county of my early childhood; Wilcox, the county in which I was reared; Perry, the former seat of Howard College, at which institution I was educated; Montgomery, the county in which I studied law and was admitted to the bar and last but best of all the good old county of Chilton, where I have lived and practiced my profession for the past twenty years. It was my pleasure to go into many of the older and richer counties, meeting with their splendid citizens and observing their magnificent resources, but, after all, the skies are bluer in Chilton, the birds sing sweeter songs, the women fairer, the men braver, the flowers have brighter hues, peace and prosperity most abounding.

The mayor and entire city council of this place resigned their offices in a body Friday, owing it is said, to some dissatisfaction expressed by a number of citizens as to city affairs. The municipal officers referred to are: E. V. Speer mayor, and councilmen B. G. Baxley Rev. R. H. Long, W. W. Cobern, T. L. Kicker and W. B. Corley.

The action on the part of the gentlemen named is regretted by many, owing to the fact that Mayor Speer and his aldermen have caused some much-needed improvements made, and they were contemplating more good work for the town.

Emmet L. Thornton and family, who have been absent from here during the past winter, have returned home.

Mr. Coolley has opened up the property opposite George W. Cobern's home as a hotel.

Dr. J. W. Maddox says that the several recent cases of smallpox in this vicinity are now under control, that the patients are now all convalescent, and that there is no danger of the disease spreading, as all necessary precaution is being taken.

Cap. J. M. Simpson has on exhibition a handsome gold-lined cup that he intends to present to the old veteran having the prettiest flower plot at his cottage this year.

Dr. Ellsberry, home physician, states the men are getting along well.

E. Scott has purchased the entire stock and fixtures belonging to Mr. Wright, and will continue the business in the building adjoining the postoffice.

EASTER SERVICES

FITTINGLY OBSERVED IN CLANTON

Easter Sunday, the day on which we commemmorate the resurrection of Christ from the tomb, was appropriately observed by the Baptist and Methodist churches in Clanton with appropriate sermons and special musical programs.

This is a day in which everybody all over this Christian land of ours appear in all the glory of their gladsome raiment. Although the day dawned threatening, this did not deter those who had been looking forward to celebrate this glorious occasion in a fitting manner, and "Solomon in all his glory was not arrayed like one of these."

The pastors at both morning and evening services were greeted with large and appreciative congregations.

Following is the order of exercises rendered at the Methodist church:

Volentary—Easter Chimes.

Hymn—Holy, Holy, Lord Almighty.

Prayer.

Anthem—Exalt the Lord of Glory.

Scripture Reading.

Solo—Glory to God.

Anthem—Christ Arose.

Sermon.

Hymn—Jesus, Lover of My Soul.

Benediction.

Postlude.

Choir—Organist, Mrs. James H. Middleton. Soloist, Miss Marguerite Chappelle. Soprano, Mesdames W. M. Adams, J. W. Stanfield, Misses Marguerite Chappelle, Ola Johnson, Dovie Roper and Glennie Evans. Alto, Mrs. J. O. Middleton and Miss Willey Reynolds. Tenor, Messrs. T. A. Curry and B. M. Roberts. Bass, Messrs. John Armstrong and J. O Johnson. Violinists, Misses Emmette Matthews and Mary Curry. Bass violinist, Mr. Newton Aldridge.

At the Baptist church a delightful musical program was rendered under the able direction of Miss Margaret Watson, and at both services the Pastor, Rev. Henry W Fancher, preached two excellent sermons to large congregations.

MRS. IRONA FOSHEE

The receding tide of life hath kissed the day's last beam and borne from earth's shores to the Great Beyond, another immortal being. Once again we have passed by the open grave and poured from our hearts torrents of tears; once again we have stood in the presence of the dead and, looking into the great eye and soul of God committed to his loving care another human soul.

Mrs. Foshee was born in Chilton county, Ala., December 22, 1872. She was the daughter of Mr. Madison and Mrs. Jane Popwell. After merging from childhood to young womanhood she was united in happy wedlock to Mr. Charles D. Foshee. This union in holy rite of matrimony was blessed by five children, all of whom are living, J. Clinton, Clyde Hopson, Mitchel, Hugh Madison, and the little infant Charles Cecil, just eight weeks old.

Mrs. Foshee was sick about 3 weeks. She was carried to the infirmary for treatment. An operation was [illegible] necessary, but, having been sick for some time, it was impossible for her to recover from the necessary operation. Her condition gradually grew weaker until Sunday, April 5, when the final struggle between life and death began. Just as the sun began to sink in the eventide of the day, her life began to sink, finally setting in the darkness of death. But, as the sun on the morrow has a rising, in all the splendor and glory of that great orb, so will the life that was so beautiful, useful and good have a rising from the shadows of death to the brightness and glory of God.

She was pure, refined, unassuming, gentle and patient. She was all that a woman could be. One of the most noble women I ever knew—words are inadequate to paint the picture of her noble life. "She hath done what she could." "But yesterday she lived and moved and loved; today she slumbers 'neath the sod, awaiting the dawning of the resurrection morn."

"The is no death, what seems so is transition.
This life of mortal breath
Is but a suburb of life elysian,
Whose portal we call death."

J. O. DICKINSON.

GOOD ROADS INCREASE ATTENDANCE AT PUBLIC SCHOOLS

There are about 24,000,000 children of school age in this country and only about 17,500,000 are enrolled in the public schools. The average attendance of those enrolled ranges anywhere from 60 to 80 per cent, which shows that only one-half of the number of school age attend.

It is pointed out that the low attendance in the rural communities is due largely to bad roads. It is shown that if there are good roads the attendance at the rural schools is much larger than where the roads are bad. This is, no doubt, a large factor, but it is equally without doubt that the small enrollment is most largely due to children being taken out of the schools during the [illegible] grade period to help [illegible]

[illegible] with the best roads have the largest average attendance as well as the largest per cent of enrollment. It is probable that the same lack of enterprise which leads a community to neglect its roads is also reflected in good schools and the necessity for regular attendance, showing that the problem is [illegible] average attendance are both much increased. Also the schools are themselves a great deal better, resembling closely the graded school of towns. Better roads is not a road problem except in part, but good roads enter as much into the general problem of rural educational, [illegible] religious and social life. [illegible] movement for better [illegible]

LOCAL OPTIONISTS LOSE CONTROL OF LEGISLATIVE BODY

PROHIBITIONS WILL HAVE GOOD MAJORITY IN BOTH SENATE AND HOUSE.

DE GRAFENREID WITHDRAWS

Graves Defeats Tyler Goodwyn for Chairman Executive Committee.

Montgomery.—Prohibitionists have captured both branches of the State legislature. Returns indicate a safe majority in the Senate and the House over the local optionists. North Alabama contributed the biggest end for the prohibitionists, while the local optionists got their best results from South Alabama.

Several counties have not reported on their nominees, while there are to be run-offs in several other counties. There is a chance for the local optionists to make a gain, but there is no chance for them to overcome the big prohibition lead. Local optionists made special efforts to get a majority in the Senate but incomplete returns show the prohibitionists to have 21 out of 35 of the members.

The appellate court race and the State treasurer race and the minor State offices attracting most attention at this time. With 52 counties making reports Perry Thomas has 50,263, while J. B. Brown has 50,081 votes out of 48 counties reporting. M. A. Graham has been eliminated in the race for State treasurer, but returns are not sufficiently full to determine which two of the other three candidates will get into the run-off.

With 50 counties having reported, W. L. Lancaster is leading with 31,727 votes. Brooks Smith is second with 30,235, while R. L. Bradley is third with 28,553. Lancaster is almost certain to be in the run-off, but it is impossible to forecast whether Smith or Bradley will be the second man.

Politicians are agreed that Bibb Graves has defeated Tyler Goodwyn for chairman of the State democratic executive committee. Returns from 45 counties show Goodwyn has 41,441 votes, with Graves having 46,488 votes out of 47 counties.

It is certain that Judge J. J. Mayfield and Judge William H. Thomas are the leaders in the race for the supreme court. DeGraffenreid will be third man, Simpson fourth and Boyd fifth. Allgood's majority over Wilkinson for State auditor is nearly double. He will total about 75,000 votes, while Wilkinson may reach to 40,000.

CONGRESSMEN WAIT ON THEIR MAJORITIES.

Barring those in the Eighth and Ninth districts, the congressional races for Alabama are settled—it is a mere question of majorities now. Judge E. B. Almon and W. W. Callahan must go into a run-off in the Eighth, while George Huddleston and Judge Nathan Miller will fight out the contest in the Ninth. Almon and Huddleston led their opponents by a good vote in the primary.

The following are the winners who are waiting for their majorities to be counted:

Oscar L. Gray, First district; Hugh Dent, Second district; Henry D. Clayton, Third district; Fred L. Blackmon, Fourth district; William B. Oliver, Sixth district; John L. Burnett, Seventh district; J. Thomas Heflin had no opposition in the Fifth district and Congressman John W. Abercrombie was unopposed as representative from the state-at-large.

The following counties have not turned in their votes on the congressional races: Clarke, First; Covington, Second; Bullock and Barbour, Third; Cleburne, Fourth; Marion and Sumter, Sixth; Cherokee, Seventh; Bibb, Ninth.

Majorities and pluralities in these counties, however, have been pretty well established.

E. DE GRAFFENREID DECLINES RUN-OFF.

Montgomery.—Edward DeGraffenreid of Greensboro, member of the Alabama supreme court since 1912, by appointment of Governor O'Neal, will not oppose James J. Mayfield, associate justice, in the democratic run-off May 11. He announced that he would allow Justice Mayfield to receive the nomination without a contest.

COMMITTEE MEETS APRIL 21.

Montgomery.—Secretary John P. Abbott of the democratic state executive committee made public the following call:

"The state executive committee of the democratic and conservative party of Alabama is hereby called to meet in the City of Montgomery on Tuesday, the 21st day of April, 1914, for the purpose of canvassing the returns of the primary election held April 6, 1914, and the transaction of such other business as may properly come before them.

URGES EDUCATIONAL BILL

Urges Action to Decrease Illiteracy in United States.

Washington — Representative Abercrombie introduced a bill to require the commissioner of education to devise methods and promote plans for the elimination of adult illiteracy in the United States. In connection with this measure, to which Representative Abercrombie has given much thought, he said: "There are in the United States more than 5,000,000 persons over 10 years of age who are unable to read or write, a little over 3,000,000 of these are white people."

"The present number of illiterates exceeds our total population in 1800 and rangers from 17,000 in Iowa to 290 per 1,000 in Louisiana. 'In the South the highest percentage is in the rural districts, while in the North it is in the cities. No section is exempted. As an example of what is possible in the elimination of illiteracy I call attention to France. At one time her illiterates numbered 45 in 100, and within a brief period it was reduced to 5 in 100. What France can do this country can do."

Mr. Abercrombie's bill carries an appropriation of $15,000 per annum, with which to inaugurate the proposed service.

May Erect Municipal Plant.

Gadsden. — The erection of a municipal electric plant to furnish light and power to the citizens is recommended to the council in a report made by the joint committee of the Chamber of Commerce, and the council, which has been conducting an investigation of light and power rates. Reports of an exhaustive nature along this line were received from 57 cities, and it was found that the cost of production was from 2 to 3 cents, while current was supplied to consumers at 8 and 10 cents per kilowatt hour.

Distiller Goes to Pen.

Huntsville. — Jack Hill entered a plea of guilty before Judge Grubb in the United States court Wednesday of the charge of illicit distilling and was sentenced to serve a term of eighteen months in the federal penitentiary in Atlanta.

HAYNES

Exposition Chief Buys Haynes Car

Chas. C. Moore, President of the Panama-Pacific International Exposition, has purchased a Haynes four-cylinder car equipped with the Vulcan Electric Gear Shift.

Worthy of note is the fact that this car is the twenty-seventh owned by Mr. Moore. It is in constant use—much more so than were any of its twenty-six predecessors, and, due largely to its simplicity of control, Mr. Moore frankly admits that only now is he deriving the real pleasures of motoring. No doubt about it—the hand shift method suffers by comparison.

Before you buy, look over other cars at the price you want to pay, compare the specifications, part for part with those of the Haynes. Here are a few facts regarding the

HAYNES

America's First Car

The Haynes motor has a bore of 4¼ in. and a stroke of 5½ in.; cylinders cast in pairs; L-head design; valves enclosed; with a dynamometer rating of 65 and 48 horse-power on the "six" and "four," respectively. Ignition is provided by the American Simms Dual High Tension Magneto; carburetion, by the Stromberg device; electric lighting and starting, by the Leece-Neville separate unit system; and cooling by centrifugal pump, pressed steel fan and cellular radiator.

Other Haynes specifications are the splash and gravity lubrication system; contracting band clutch; Timken and McCue full floating rear axles; twenty-one gallon gas tank on rear of chassis; motor-driven tire pump; extra demountable rim; and Collins curtains. Shock absorbers on the "six."

The Haynes "Four"	$1785 and $1985
The Haynes "Six" 130 inch wheelbase	2500 and 2700
The Haynes "Six" 136 inch wheelbase	2585 and 2785

PROSPECTS GOOD FOR EARLY CROP

Reports From Industrial Centers Present Very Mixed Aspects.

New York.—Bradstreet's weekly review of trade says:

Excellent early crop prospects, which buoy sentiment, sharply contrast with disappointing trade distribution, irregularity in industry and cautious buying for future account. Easter requirements have made for a turn over in wearing apparel. Hardware, implements and seed are also active.

While crop prospects, as well as indications of heavy planting, are such as to superinduce optimism, buying continues on the basis of immediate wants. At most centers mail order houses are reported doing a thriving business.

Reports from industrial centers present mixed aspects, resumptions in this or that place being offset by slower operations at other points. The steel trade takes hope from crop prospects, but the volume of business is not up to expectations.

TRADE WITH LATIN AMERICA

Southern Railway Names Expert to Aid Southern Merchants in New Fields.

Washington, D. C., April 6.—To aid Southern merchants and manufacturers to extend their trade with Central and South American countries and the West India Islands, particularly the new fields to be opened by the Panama canal, through South Atlantic and Gulf ports, President Fairfax Harrison announces that the Southern railway, the C., N. O. & T. P., the Alabama Great Southern and Mobile & Ohio have appointed as South American Agent, Mr. Charles Lyon Chandler, who has been South American commercial expert in the consular bureau of the State Department. His office will be at Chattanooga, Tenn.

Mr. Chandler has had years of experience in Latin American countries and is thoroughly acquainted with their markets and the needs of their peoples. He will advise Southern merchants and manufacturers as to where their wares can be sold, will aid them in the preparation of letters and circulars, and advise as to the methods of packing required for different markets. Mr. Chandler will keep in touch with commercial bodies in Central and South American countries and their diplomatic representatives at Washington and will be able to give Southern business men the earliest possible information in regard to government and other large contracts to be let. He will also immediately begin a campaign in Latin American markets, calling attention to goods that can be supplied from the South and the advantages of shipment through Southern ports.

Mr. Chandler is admirably equipped for this work. A Harvard graduate, he studied international law at the University of Buenos Ayres, Argentina, and was for many years in the consular and diplomatic service of the United States, the greater part of this time having been spent in Latin America. His services will be at the disposal of Southern merchants and manufacturers without any charge to them.

PLEADS GUILTY TO MURDER.

Confesses to Crime Because of Love for Stepdaughter.

Galesburg, Ill. — Robert Higgins pleaded guilty to the murder of his wife, whom it was charged he shot to death because of his love for Julia Flake, his stepdaughter. Miss Flake was not arraigned for collusion in the crime, although she had written letters to an uncle and his son requesting them to kill her mother. Owing to her youth and the influence exerted by Higgins it was decided that she was not criminally at fault.

RECORD LEMON PRODUCTION.

Chicago Botanist Cuts Crop of Two-Pound Lemons.

Chicago. — Twenty-four lemons averaging 12 inches in diameter and two pounds in weight were cut from a tree grown in a 16-inch pot in one of the green-houses of the botanical department of the University of Chicago. The fruit was raised by W. J. O'Carroll, head botanist, from a tropical hybrid imported from South America.

Appropriation Bill Signed.

Albany, N. Y. —Four hundred thousand dollars for New York State's participation in the Panama exposition became available when Governor Glynn signed a bill appropriating $200,000 and re-appropriating a like sum for the purpose.

Asphyxiated From Basket Fire.

New York. — Three small boys crawled into a deserted moving van in a vacant lot in Harlem, stopped up the big cracks to keep out the chill, and then squatted around a fire they kindled in a bucket. Patrick Kenny, father of one of the little fellows, missing him, searched for the boys. He found his son, Frank, unconscious. John Scanlon, a 15-year-old companion, was dead, and the third boy was supposedly dying. Gas from the bucket fire had asphyxiated them.

TWO WOMEN AVOID OPERATIONS

By Taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Chicago, Ill.—"I must thank you with all my heart for Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. I used to go to my doctor for pills and remedies and they did not help me. I had headaches and could not eat, and the doctor claimed I had female trouble and must have an operation. I read in the paper about Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and I have taken it and feel fine. A lady said one day, 'Oh, I feel so tired all the time and have headache.' I said, 'Take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound,' and she did and feels fine now."—Mrs. M. R. KARSCHNICK, 1438 N. Paulina Street, Chicago, Illinois.

The Other Case.

Dayton, Ohio.—"Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound relieved me of pains in my side that I had for years and which doctors' medicines failed to relieve. It has certainly saved me from an operation. I will be glad to assist you by a personal letter to any woman in the same condition."—Mrs. J. W. SHERER, 126 Cass St., Dayton, Ohio.

If you want special advice write to Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co. (confidential) Lynn, Mass. Your letter will be opened, read and answered by a woman, and held in strict confidence.

IF HAIR IS TURNING GRAY, USE SAGE TEA

Don't Look Old! Try Grandmother's Recipe to Darken and Beautify Gray, Faded, Lifeless Hair.

Grandmother kept her hair beautifully darkened, glossy and abundant with a brew of Sage Tea and Sulphur. Whenever her hair fell out or took on that dull, faded or streaked appearance, this simple mixture was applied with wonderful effect. By asking at any drug store for "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Hair Remedy," you will get a large bottle of this old-time recipe, ready to use, for about 50 cents. This simple mixture can be depended upon to restore natural color and beauty to the hair and is splendid for dandruff, dry, itchy scalp and falling hair.

A well-known druggist says everybody uses Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur, because it darkens so naturally and evenly that nobody can tell it has been applied—it's so easy to use, too. You simply dampen a comb or soft brush and draw it through your hair, taking one strand at a time. By morning the gray hair disappears; after another application or two, it is restored to its natural color and looks glossy, soft and abundant.—Adv.

FACE COVERED WITH PIMPLES

214 Brevard St., Tampa, Fla.—"Some three years ago I commenced to suffer from a rash on my face and back. Before the pimples came on my face there were a lot of blackheads. It looked as if the blackheads turned into pimples because after a little while all of them were gone and my face was covered with pimples. They were small at first but gradually grew and right at the end of each pimple it was all white. I carelessly picked them with my finger nails, which made them spread, and I soon discovered them on my back. My back was covered with pimples and my face the same way. At night I could hardly sleep on account of the burning and itching sensation they caused. I did not like to go out because the pimples caused disfigurement.

"Seeing the advertisement of Cuticura Soap and Ointment in one of the magazines I sent for a sample. I bought some Cuticura Soap and Ointment, and I am glad to be able to say that I am entirely cured of pimples." (Signed) Jno. O. Darlington, Jan. 25, 1913.

Cuticura Soap and Ointment sold throughout the world. Sample of each free, with 32-p. Skin Book. Address postcard "Cuticura, Dept. L, Boston."—Adv.

Modern Morals.

Senator Joseph E. Russell was talking in Washington about his bill for the abolition of divorce.

"The bill's object?" he said. "It's object is, of course, to reduce immorality, loose thinking, loose speaking."

Senator Randell smiled and added:

"Don't take it too seriously—but here is an episode that throws a light on modern morals.

A business man came home unexpectedly one morning and found his little son busy at his wife's dressing table.

"What on earth are you doing there, my lad?" he asked.

"I'm mixing powdered quinine with mother's face powder,' the youngster answered. 'She's going motoring with Mr. Smith. Won't she taste bitter!'"

HOW TO CLEAR AWAY THOSE UGLY PIMPLES

It is so easy to get rid of pimples and blackheads with Resinol, and it costs so little, too, that anyone whose face is disfigured by these pests is foolish to keep on with useless cosmetics, or complicated "beauty treatments." See how simply it is done:

Bathe your face for several minutes with Resinol Soap and hot water, then apply a little Resinol Ointment very gently. Let this stay on ten minutes, and wash off with Resinol Soap and more hot water, finishing with a dash of cold water to close the pores. Do this once or twice a day, and you will be astonished to find how quickly the healing, antiseptic Resinol medication soothes and cleanses the pores, leaving the complexion clear and velvety. Sold by all druggists, Resinol Ointment, 50 cents and $1, Resinol Soap, 25 cents.—Adv.

Found a Tintoretto.

A municipal councillor, Adrien Mithouard, is responsible for the discovery of a masterpiece among the piles of old canvases put aside as almost valueless in the municipal storerooms at Auteuil, Paris. His curiosity was aroused by the aspect of one of the canvases, which was so black that practically nothing was visible, and ordering the picture scrubbed, an "Adoration of the Magi" by Tintoretto was disclosed.

TAKE SALTS TO FLUSH KIDNEYS IF BACK HURTS

Says Too Much Meat Forms Uric Acid Which Clogs the Kidneys and Irritates the Bladder.

Most folks forget that the kidneys, like the bowels, get sluggish and clogged and need a flushing occasionally, else we have backache and dull misery in the kidney region, severe headaches, rheumatic twinges, torpid liver, acid stomach, sleeplessness and all sorts of bladder disorders.

You simply must keep your kidneys active and clean, and the moment you feel an ache or pain in the kidney region, get about four ounces of Jad Salts from any good drug store here, take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days and your kidneys will then act fine. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and is harmless to flush clogged kidneys and stimulate them to normal activity. It also neutralizes the acids in the urine so it no longer irritates, thus ending bladder disorders.

Jad Salts is harmless; inexpensive; makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water drink which everybody should take now and then to keep their kidneys clean, thus avoiding serious complications.

A well-known local druggist says he sells lots of Jad Salts to folks who believe in overcoming kidney trouble while it is only trouble.—Adv.

Good Cheer Aids Digestion of Food

Dyspeptics Can Make the Rest of the Family Happy by Using a Laxative-Tonic.

MAJ. S. MARTIN

The temper of the family and the good cheer around the table depend so much on the good digestion of each individual present that the experiences of some former dyspeptics who overcame their trouble should be of interest to those now suffering in this way.

The best advice one can give—but it is advice that is seldom heeded—is to eat slowly and masticate each mouthful carefully. However, if slow eating and careful mastication fail the next aid is one close to nature, Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin. This remedy is an excellent digestant, and in addition to helping in the digestion of the food, acts gently on the liver and bowels, ridding them of the accumulation of waste that should long ago have been passed off. It is safe, reliable, pleasant-tasting, and results are guaranteed.

Maj. S. Martin, of Joplin, Mo., now 77, thinks Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin has helped him to a longer and happier life. He has not felt so good in years as he has since taking this excellent medicine, and in spite of his 77 years he says he feels like a boy.

It is the ideal remedy for indigestion, no matter how severe; constipation, no matter how chronic, biliousness, headaches, gas on the stomach, drowsiness after eating and similar annoyances.

You can obtain Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin at any drug store for fifty cents or one dollar, the latter size being bought by heads of families already familiar with its merits. Results are always guaranteed or money will be refunded.

When you use Syrup Pepsin you will see the fallacy of chewing mints and tablets or of taking cathartics, salts, pills and similar drastic medicines. Unlike these, Syrup Pepsin does not lose its good effect, and by automatically training the stomach and bowel muscles to do their work, soon restores these organs to normal.

Families wishing to try a free sample bottle can obtain it postpaid by addressing Dr. W. B. Caldwell, 203 Washington St., Monticello, Ill. A postal card with your name and address on it will do.

Entered at the Post Office at Clanton, Ala., as second-class mail matter under act of Congress, March 3rd, 1879.

Now that the baseball season has opened, we can divert our minds from so much political agitation.

The fight between Comer and Henderson promises to be one of the warmest ever waged in Alabama. Both candidates are claiming victory.

957 votes was the total cast in Chilton County. This is a remarkably fine showing, and had it rained the day before the election so the farmers could have left their fields, the total vote would have reached at least 1100.

Hon. Oscar Underwood was accorded a rousing reception on his return to Washington after his triumphant victory. When the Democratic floor leader entered the House he was greeted with vociferous applause and the demonstration lasted several minutes.

The Progressive Party Indicted, Put on Trial, Found Guilty, and Severely Condemned by one of its Adherents.

We were so much amused by a letter in the Union-Banner of April 22nd over the signature of W. H. Gillespie that we cannot refrain from giving extracts from it and commenting on Mr. Gillespie's logic.

The greatest privilege of the American citizen is his inalienable right to his franchise. At the ballot box the most obscure stands on an equal footing with the most illustrious and no man dares break this equilibrium, therefore every man should encourage every other man to always cast his ballot in a conscientious way and where it will be most affective, but Mr. Gillespie admonishes the citizens of Chilton County "to be wise" and stay from the polls when all their state officers are to be elected, in other words he wonld advise that they disfranchise themselves and turn the affairs of our state over to the "Thieves and Robbers." He says "It has been Comer one time and O'Neal the next and the corrupt conditions grow worse all the time. So judging by past experience how can we expect anything from the democrats?" Of course Mr. Gillespie keeps himself well posted and we are going to open our columns to him and ask him to explain "his plans of relief," we know that it will be interesting reading.

But listen; "Now my friends, take the records of the democrats here in our county, and we all know how taxes have increased for the last three years, and we also know that the money has all gone and very little to show what it has been spent for, now, I want to say if there is any voter in the county who does not know the conditions of the county's affairs four years ago, and also see how they are at the present time, and I feel assured that you will see that it will be better to keep out of the democratic primary, and you will see that it will be better for the people when they keep the democrats out of the offices of Chilton county."

Alright, Mr. Gillespie, to the first part of the quotation—you say taxes have been raised during the last three years, who raised our taxes? You try to leave the impression that it has been the county officials of Chilton county, don't you know that all tax rates are fixed by the Constitution and the Legislatures of the state? Now, in your letter did you not ask the voters of Chilton county to stay out of these primaries where the tax-adjusting bodies are elected? No, you may say taxes are increased by the County Back Tax Commissioner. Alright, was not his authority delegated to him by a democratic legislature? You speak of the machine controlled by the whiskey trust and railroad interests—find out please how the representatives from Chilton county voted on those questions and let us know that we may give it to our readers.

"Now, my friends, take the record of the democrats here in our county, and we all know how taxes have been raised and the money spent etc." Your intended meaning is that the county officials have increased the taxes and heedlessly squandered the money. Alright, again we have eliminated the Back Tax Commissioner, you have advised all voters to disfranchise themselves so far as he is concerned, but now to the other officials. For the last three years who has had a majority of the county officials, the democrats or anti-democrats? I don't know what name to call you, you change so often; you are so unstable. The democrats have had the Judge of Probate, the Sheriff and one Commissioner; the "we don't know what's" the others. The body of Commissioners finance the county and if we mistake not Messrs. Robinson, Shaw and Herrod received the undivided vote of the "we don't know what's". Are we right, Mr. Gillespie? Speak ont in the meeting. Did you vote for them? Have they unmercifully raised our taxes here in the county and then squandered the money? We suppose that you have gone to the records and thoroughly familiarized yourself with the financial side of the county, then tell us how these Commissioners have voted on every question. Has our treasurer, Mr. Littlejohn known of this wholesale robbery here in the county and said nothing about it? Now Mr. Gillespie, we answered your question last week as to Mr. Stanfield's withdrawal from the legislative race, so we are going to close, but before so doing we want to thank you for your letter. In it you indict, put on trial, and decided in the severest terms that you and your set have failed most miserably "to give us relief." If you will only furnish us a few more articles we will overwhelmingly sweep out "these thieves," as you call them.

JUDGE DEASON GRATEFUL FOR SUPPORT

Mr. Editor:

Please allow me through the columns of your paper to express my heart-felt gratitude for the votes I received in the recent primary for Congressman from the Fourth district. My campaign was waged upon a high plane and I am glad to say that I did not utter a word that was calculated to reflect upon or embarrass my opponent or his friends. In the short time that I was in the race I met thousands of good men who were and are my warm friends I appreciate and thank them for their enthusiastic support of my candidacy. I was defeated, but I am not disgruntled. The people's verdict is my verdict. If a man is not broad enough to bear defeat, then he is too narrow to fill the position to which he aspires.

Again thanking my friends for their kindness and honor conferred, I am

Very respectfully,
E. B. Deason.

FEAR

Psychologists have demonstrated to their own satisfaction that fear is the first emotion to which human beings are subject. This discovery but confirms the deduction that "self-preservation is the first law of nature."

We are going to talk of a fear other than physical fear. We refer to that fear which retards progress and despoils business.

Money, the most necessary thing in business, is the most easily frightened. During unsettled times it has a disposition to remain securely locked in its strong box and not come forward to encourage development and supply the sinews of commercial warfare.

Men who possess money possess responsibility. Having something to lose, they early learn to move cautiously. They not only hold back when conditions are unsettled, but they frequently refrain from putting out their money through fear of what may happen.

Mutual trust and confidence are necessary to constructive development. Let competition be as keen as possible, that is no deterrent to business when co-operation for the general public good and absolute honesty prevail.

The L. & N. is always in the market for capital with which to carry on its constructive work. As long as it can show a fair return on its investment—meet fixed charges and pay a reasonable dividend—its financial agents have no great difficulty in placing its securities.

But when it is made the storm center of political acrimony, and threats against its property are made by men in high places, the L. & N. experiences difficulty in interesting capital.

The men of money become afraid, and take measures to protect their own.

We call attention to these things because we believe the people want to continue to enjoy the excellent freight and passenger service to which they have become accustomed.

We believe that when the people have a correct understanding of the work in which we are engaged and the difficulties we encounter, they will not only more readily co-operate with us, but be more tolerant of our short-comings.

In the meantime we solicit your freight and passenger business, and promise prompt service, courteous treatment and safe transportation in return.

SOCIOLOGISTS TO MEET IN MAGIC CITY

ALABAMA CONGRESS WILL MEET IN BIRMINGHAM THREE DAYS IN MAY.

FIRST SESSION ON MAY 3

Speakers of Note From All Over Country Will Be in Attendance.

Birmingham.—Programs for the Alabama Sociological Congress to meet in Birmingham May 3, 4 and 5, have been the subject of much thought by the Birmingham committee, and the complete details are expected to be announced in a short time. In the meantime, the various committees are at work on their several duties, and from preliminary arrangements, it is promised the coming convention will surpass in interest and accomplishment the convention held last year.

Sunday Night, May 3, the first meeting will be held in Temple Emanu-El, Highland avenue and Twenty-first street.

At this meeting, introductory addresses will be made by officers of the organization, and an address of welcome will be made. Some eminent speaker, to be announced later, will make an address on behalf of central sociological work.

Following this meeting, all the sessions will be held in the Chamber of Commerce auditorium. Monday morning will be devoted to business, organization and reports from workers all over the State.

Monday afternoon "Child Welfare in Alabama" will be the topic of discussion. Monday night's session will be devoted to discussion of the family and the community.

Tuesday morning "tuberculosis" will come under discussion by the congress. "Health and Housing" is the topic for the afternoon, and Tuesday night the congress will discuss a legislative and social program for Alabama.

Wednesday it is hoped some arrangement can be made to give the delegates a chance to see the plants and communities of the district. Lunches will be served Monday and Tuesday.

NEWS LETTER FROM CAPITAL

Happenings in and About Alabama's State House Interestingly Told.

—Montgomery.

Federal appointments in Alabama are expected to be made in the near future. The senatorial campaign checked the work. Inasmuch as the campaign is now history, activity on the part of applicants will be resumed.

Dr. Inzer B. Wyatt of Huntsville is an applicant for the marshalship of the Northern district and Thomas L. Long of Jasper, is one of his opponents. Both are confident, it was stated, that they will be successful in landing the berth.

The death of Captain Crook leaves a vacancy in the postoffice at Besemer. This vacancy, it is expected, will be filled in the near future. There are several postoffices to be filled in the Sixth district. In Tuscaloosa there is a vacancy. As is remembered, Sam Clabaugh was named but his nomination was held up. The struggle, it is believed, will be resumed.

Oakley Given Acquittal.

A special from Columbiana says: "Not Guilty" was the verdict of the jury in the Shelby county circuit court here after deliberating four hours on the evidence in the trial of James G. Oakley, charged with the embezzlement of state funds while president of the convict board.

Immediately following the verdict there was a demonstration outside of the court house, the great crowd evidently being pleased at the verdict.

The Columbiana trial is the second that James G. Oakley has faced on similar charges, he having already been acquitted in the criminal court of Montgomery county. There are still several indictments against him in Montgomery, but it is not known whether or not the state will press them since his acquittal in two cases.

R. R. Commission Holds Session.

At the April session of the railroad commission among the cases considered and taken under advisement were the petition of J. P. Carnes and others for an order requiring the Southern Railway company to construct a combination freight and passenger depot at Fruithurst; petition of F. J. Ingram and others for a better train service on the Pyriton branch of the Atlanta, Birmingham & Atlantic railroad; petition of S. E. Elliott and others for a passenger and freight depot at Harpersville, on the Atlanta, Birmingham & Atlantic railroad; petition of A. E. Stanton and others for an order requiring the Louisville & Nashville railroad to make Canco, Ala., a flag station, and the petition of the Hays Cooperage company for the establishment of "reasonable" rates for hauling wood on the Alabama Great Southern, Southern and Louisville & Nashville railroads.

Lawler Hearing Postponed.

Trial of Judge J. T. Lawler, probate judge of Madison county, on the charge of neglect of duty and incompetency, which was to have been heard April 10, by the supreme court, has been postponed at the request of attorneys.

Attorney General Robert C. Brickell, leading counsel for the state in the impeachment proceedings against Judge Lawler, was unable to be present at the time set for the trial, owing to his absence at Columbiana, and asked that the case be postponed. The attorney general went to Columbiana to represent the state in the prosecution of James G. Oakley, who was acquitted of the charge of embezzling more than $3500 of state funds.

White and Harris Eligible.

Chairman Tyler Goodwyn of the state democratic executive committee certified to the secretary of state the names of Capt. Frank S. White of Birmingham and C. C. Harris of Decatur as nominees to run in the special elections May 11, to fill the unexpired terms of the late Senator J. F. Johnston, and the late Congressman William Richardson. Captain White was nominated for the short senatorial term in the recent primary and Mr. Harris was nominated at Decatur by the congressional committee.

Prospers Pig Iron Rate Case.

At the request of the Louisville & Nashville and Southern railroads the Alabama railroad commission has postponed the hearing of the Mobile pig iron case until the May session. In this case the railroads are asking for a reconsideration of the commission's order fixing the adjustment of a rate of $1.75 per ton pig iron from the Jefferson county furnaces to Mobile in lieu of the rate of $2.75 charged heretofore. The railroads claim the present rate is unreasonably low and that they have been damaged by the rate.

Increase in Alabama Debt.

Preliminary figures from the forthcoming bulletin pertaining to national and state indebtedness and funds and investments have been given out by Director W. J. Harris of the bureau of the census, department of commerce at Washington. The bulletin carries information for the state of Alabama, as well as for other states and the United States. The data were compiled under the supervision of John Lee Coulter, expert special agent in charge of the inquiry on wealth, debt and taxation.

The bulletin, which will soon be issued will contain statistics for each year from 1890 to 1913, inclusive, and will also contain details for the year most nearly corresponding to 1880, thus making it possible to show the general movement during a period of over 30 years. The bulletin will show the total debt of the states as well as many details, such as the various classes of outstanding bonds, and special debt obligations to public trust funds. It will also show the floating debt and its component parts. Under "Funds and Investments" will be shown separately all the different funds, and in each case cash and securities will be shown. The population of the states for each year under consideration will be used, and the per capita debt (less sinking fund assets) will be given.

An inspection of the tables for Alabama in the bulletin soon to be issued shows that both bonds and special debt obligations to publis trust funds remained nearly constant throughout the period covered, though slight fluctuations in the floating debt are to be noted. In the case of funds and investments the securities remained nearly constant throughout the period, a slight increase being noted, however. The cash item naturally fluctuated more o rless from year to year. No sinking fund assets, as such, are found in Alabama, thus leaving the debt less sinking fund assets the same as the total debt.

In view of the fact that the debt remained almost constant during this period of more than 30 years, while the population of the state increased greatly, the per capital debt of the state gradually decreased.

In 1880 the total debt of Alabama at the close of the fiscal year, September 30, was $12,371,000; in 1909 it was $12,585,000; and in 1912 it was $13,132,000. There has been practically no change since 1909 except an increase in floating debt from $31,000 to $488,000 on September 30, 1912. The population of the state increased from 1,263,000 in 1880 to 2,145,000 in 1910, thus bringing about a very great decrease in the per capital debt. In 1880 the per capita debt amounted to $9.80; 10 years later it amounted to $8.22; in 1899 it had gone down to $7.02; and in 1909, to $5.96. Since that time it has remained nearly constant, the slight increase in floating debt being nearly equal to the increase of population, leaving the per capita debt $5.95.

Embalmers Hold Meeting.

Members of the Alabama Funeral and Embalmers' Association held their annual meeting in Montgomery. Addresses of welcome were delivered by Duncan May, president of the Business Men's league, and W. A. Gunter, Jr., president of the city commission, and talks on the work of the organization were made by several officers and members. The meeting closed with a banquet.

Selma Company Mustered Out.

At the request of officers of the organization, Company C, Second infantry, Alabama National Guards, at Selma, has been mustered out of service. Capt. Clarence L. Boggs is commander of the company. The equipment of the company will be sent to headquarters of the National Guard at Montgomery.

Physicians Convene April 21 to 24.

Between four hundred and six hundred Alabama physicians will be in Montgomery April 21 to 24 for the annual meeting of the State Medical Association. Announcement of the convention was made by the Montgomery County Medical Society.

Several physicians from other States will be present, and among those who will deliver addresses are E. Porter Webb of Laurel Hill, Fla.; D. M. Ricketts, of Cincinnati; A. L. Stavely, of Washington; Lewis Levy, of New Orleans; Frank Smithers, of Chicago; and H. A. Royster, of Raleigh, N. C.

Contract Awarded for Road.

Announcement is made that R. P. Boyd, assistant State highway engineer, has let a contract for the construction of four and one-half miles of good roads in Coosa county, between Kellyton and Rockford.

Mr. Boyd was in Coosa county in conference with the board of revenue. Construction of the road will begin immediately.

The assistant State highway engineer left for Hale county, where he let another contract for State aid work.

BRYAN REVIEWS TOLLS QUESTION

REPEAL CAN'T BE CONSTRUED TO BE CONSTRUCTION OF HAY-PAUNCEFOTE TREATY.

DISCUSSES MANY FEATURES

Declares Opposition Had Attempted to Appeal to Prejudice Rather Than Reason.

Washington.—Secretary Bryan in a statement made public lengthily reviews the Panama tolls question, and in the course of the statement declares that the repeal of the tolls exemption in the Panama canal act "cannot be construed to be a construction of the Hay-Pauncefote treaty," but is "simply a refusal on the part of the United States to raise that question in that way."

Mr. Bryan discusses various features of the subject—the limiting of debates in the House of Representatives, the Baltimore platform and the effect of repeal on the treaty.

Claiming that the opponents of the repeal had seized upon the charge that the President was "surrendering to England," Mr. Bryan declared that the opposition to the repeal had attempted to appeal "to prejudice rather than to reason."

"What has Great Britain done?" he asked, "to justify the accusation that she is trying to dictate to this country? She has simply called attention to the terms of the treaty, and asked for arbitration of the question of construction in case this government differs from the British government in the construction to be placed upon the language. The very men who are so insistent upon construing the treaty to permit free tolls, delayed for months the ratification of the treaty with Great Britain because of their opposition to any arbitration of the subject? In other words, they construed the treaty to permit discrimination, and then objected to allowing any international court to express an opinion on the subject. If as a matter of fact, the treaty grants the rights which Great Britain claims, is it a 'surrender to Great Britain' for our nation to repeal a law that raised that question? The repeal of the law cannot be construed to be a construction of the treaty. It is simply a refusal on the part of the United States to raise that question in that way. In the controversy over the Welland canal, Canada withdrew a discrimination which she had made in favor of Canadian ships in order that no cause for friction with the United States authorities in regard to the matter should exist.'

"Why cannot the United States withdraw a discrimination for the same reason? When the treaty involved was before the Senate for ratification an attempt was made to so amend it as to permit a discrimination in favor of coastwise vessels but it was voted down by a decided majority. With this record to support them, is it strange that foreign nations question our rights to make an exception in favor of American vessels?"

Discussing the President's right to expect the support of Congress when he deals with international questions, Secretary Bryan adds:

"The chief executive speaks for the nation in international affairs, and it is only fair to assume that he speaks advisedly when he declares that intercourse with other nations is seriously embarrassed by the free tolls law which he seeks to repeal.

"We occupy today a proud position among the nations; we are the foremost advocate of peace and arbitration; we are becoming more and more a moral factor throughout the world. Can we afford to surrender this position? Can we afford to belittle its consummation at the isthmus? If our nation desires to be measured by intellectual and ethical standards, how unworthy to brag of our strength. We are ready to fight does not arouse the enthusiasm now that it did a few centuries ago. Brute force is not the level upon which this nation settles its controversies today. The question is not what we can do but what we ought to do. The path of history is strewn with the wreck of nations that boasted that they were all-powerful. This question must be decided on moral principles and not by the counting of our regiments and battleships. What shall it profit a nation if it conquers the whole world and loses its faith in the doctrine that righteousness exalteth a nation?"

Ships Through Canal in July.

San Diego, Cal.—United States warships of the Atlantic fleet will steam through the Panama canal early in July, speed up the Pacific coast to San Diego and return to Hampton Roads by the same route according to Franklin D. Roosevelt assistant secretary of the navy, who made preliminary arrangements here for the reception of the fleet. The personnel of this fleet, Mr. Roosevelt said, will be drawn from the entire navy.

The VALIANTS of VIRGINIA

By HALLIE ERMINIE RIVES

ILLUSTRATIONS by LAUREN STOUT

COPYRIGHT BY BOBBS-MERRILL COMPANY

SYNOPSIS.

John Valiant, a rich society favorite, suddenly discovers that the Valiant corporation, which his father founded and which was the principal source of his wealth, has failed. He voluntarily turns over his private fortune to the receiver for the corporation. His entire remaining possessions consist of an old motor car, a white bull dog and Damory court, a neglected estate in Virginia. On the way to Damory court he meets Shirley Dandridge, an auburn-haired beauty, and decides that he is going to like Virginia immensely. Shirley's mother, Mrs. Dandridge, and Major Bristow exchange reminiscences during which it is revealed that the major, Valiant's father, and a man named Sasson were rivals for the hand of Mrs. Dandridge in her youth. Sasson and Valiant fought a duel on her account in which the former was killed. Valiant finds Damory court overgrown with weeds and creepers and the buildings in a very much neglected condition. He decides to rehabilitate the place and make the land produce a living for him. Valiant saves Shirley from the bite of a snake, which bites him. Knowing the deadliness of the bite, Shirley sucks the poison from the wound and saves his life. Shirley tells her mother of the incident and the latter is strangely moved at hearing that a Valiant is again living at Damory court. Valiant learns for the first time that his father left Virginia on account of a duel in which Doctor Southall and Major Bristow acted as his father's seconds.

CHAPTER XVIII—Continued.

"You are cold," he said. "Isn't that gown too thin for this night air?"

"No, I often walk here till quite late. Listen!"

The bird song had broken forth again, to be answered this time by a rival's in a distant thicket. "My nightingale is in good voice."

"I never heard a nightingale before I came to Virginia. I wonder why it sings only at night."

"What an odd idea! Why, it sings in the daytime, too."

"Really? But I suppose it escapes notice in the general chorus. Is it a large bird?"

"No; smaller than a thrush. Only a little bigger than a robin. Its nest is over there in that hedge—a tiny loose cup of dried oak-leaves, lined with hair, and the eggs are olive color. How pretty the hedge looks now, all tangled with firefly sparks!"

"Doesn't it! Uncle Jefferson calls them 'lightning-bugs.'"

"The name is much more picturesque. But all the darky sayings are. Do you find him and Aunt Daphne useful?"

"He has been a godsend," he said fervently; "and her cooking has taught me to treat her with passionate respect. He's teaching me now about flowers—it's surprising how many kinds he knows. He's a walking herbarium."

"Come and see mine," she said. "Roses are our specialty—we have to live up to the Rosewood name. But beyond the arbors, are beds and beds of other flowers. See—by this big tree are speed-well and delphinium. The tree is a black-walnut. It's a dreadful thing to have one as big as that. When you want something that costs a lot of money you go and look at it and wonder which you want most, that particular luxury or the tree. I know a girl who had two in her yard only a little bigger than this, and she went to Europe on them. But so far I've always voted for the tree. How does your garden come on?"

"Famously. Uncle Jefferson has shanghaied a half-dozen negro gardeners—from where I can't imagine—and he's having the time of his life hectoring over them. He refers to the upper and lower terraces as 'up-and-down-stairs.' I've got seeds, but it will be a long time before they flower."

"Oh, would you like some slips?" she cried. "Or, better still, I can give you the roses already rooted—Mad Charles and Marechal Neil and Cloth of Gold and cabbage and ramblers. We have geraniums and fuchsias, too, and the coral honeysuckle. That's different from the wild one, you know."

"You are too good! If you would only advise me where to set them! But I dare say you think me presuming."

She turned her full face to him. "Presuming!" You're punishing me now for the dreadful way I talked to you about Damory Court—before I knew who you were. Oh, it was unpardonable! And after the splendid thing you had done—I read about it that same evening—with your money, I mean!"

"No, no!" he protested. "There was nothing splendid about it. It was only pride. You see the corporation was my father's great idea—the thing he created and put his soul into—and it was foundering. I know that would have hurt him. One thing I've wanted to say to you, ever since the day we talked together—about the duel. I want to say that whatever lay behind it, my father's whole life was darkened by that event. Now that I can put two and two together, I know that it was the cause of his sadness."

"Ah, I can believe that," she replied.

"I think he had only two interests—myself and the corporation. So you see why I'd rather save that and be a beggar the rest of my natural life. But I'm not a beggar. Damory Court alone is worth—I know it now—a hundred times what I left."

"You are so utterly different from what I imagined you!"

"I could never have imagined you," he said, "never."

"I must be terribly outre."

"You are so many women in one. When I listened to your harp playing I could hardly believe it was the same you I saw galloping across the fields that morning. Now you are a different woman from both of those."

As she looked at him, her lips curled corner-wise, her foot slipped on the sheer edge of the turf. She swayed toward him and he caught her, feeling for a sharp instant the adorable nearness of her body. It ridged all his skin with a creeping delight. She recovered her footing with an exclamation, and turned back somewhat abruptly to the porch where she seated herself on the step, drawing her filmy skirt aside to make a place for him. There was a moment of silence which he broke.

"That exquisite serenade you were playing! You know the words, of course."

"They are more lovely, if possible, than the score. Do you care for poetry?"

"I've always loved it," he said. "I've been reading some lately—a little old-fashioned book I found at Damory Court. It's 'Lucile.' Do you know it?"

"Yes. It's my mother's favorite."

He drew it from his pocket. "See, I've got it here. It's marked, too."

He opened it, to close it instantly—not, however, before she had put out her hand and laid it, palm down, on the page. "That rose! Oh, let me have it!"

"Never!" he protested. "Look here. When I put it between the leaves, I did so at random. I didn't see till now that I had opened it at a marked passage."

"Let us read it," she said.

He leaned and held the leaf to the light from the doorway and the two heads bent together over the text.

A sound fell behind them and both turned. A slight figure, in a soft gray gown with old lace at the throat, stood in the doorway behind them. John Valiant sprang to his feet.

"Ah, Shirley, I thought I heard voices. Is that you, Chilly?"

"It's not Mr. Lusk, mother," said Shirley. "It's our new neighbor, Mr. Valiant."

As he bent over the frail hand, murmuring the conventional words that presentations are believed to require, Mrs. Dandridge sank into a deep cushioned chair. "Won't you sit down?" she said. He noticed that she did not look directly at him, and that her face was as pallid as her hair.

"Thank you," said John Valiant, and resumed his place on the lower step.

Shirley, who had again seated herself, suddenly laughed, and pointed to the book which lay between them. "Imagine what we are doing, dearest! We were reading 'Lucile' together."

She saw the other wince, and the deep dark eyes lifted, as if under compulsion, from the book-cover to Valiant's face. He was startled by Shirley's cry and the sudden limp unconscious settling back into the cushions of the fragile form.

CHAPTER XIX.

Night.

A quicker breeze was stirring as John Valiant went back along the Red Road. He had waited in the garden at Rosewood till Shirley, aided by Emmaline and with Ranston's anxious face hovering in the background, having performed those gentle offices which a woman's fainting spell requires, had come to reassure him and to say good night.

As he threw off his coat in the bedroom he had chosen for his own, he felt the hard corner of the "Lucile" in the pocket, and drawing it out, laid it on the table by the bedside. He seemed to feel again the tingle of his cheek where a curling strand of her coppery hair had sprung against it when her head had bent beside his own to read the marked lines.

When he had undressed he put on his dressing-gown of slinky silk with a riot of azaleas scattered in the weave, and then, dragging her chair before the open window, drew aside the light curtain and began to brush her hair. All at once her gaze fell upon the floor, and she shrank backward from a twisting thread-like thing whose bright saffron-yellow glowed sharply against the dark carpet. She saw in an instant, however, that it was nothing more dangerous than a fragment of love-vine from the garden, which had clung to her skirt. She picked up the tiny mass of tendrils and with a slow smile tossed it over her right shoulder through the window. "If it takes root," she said aloud, "my sweetheart loves me." She leaned from the sill to pear down into the misty garden, but could not follow its fall.

Long ago her visitor would have reached Damory Court. She had a vision of him wandering, candle in hand, through the empty echoing rooms, looking at the voiceless portraits on the walls, thinking perhaps of his father, of the fatal duel of which he had never known. She liked the way he had spoken of his father!

As she leaned, out of the stillness there came to her ear a mellow sound. It was the bell of the courthouse in the village. She counted the strokes falling clearly or faintly as the sluggish breeze ebbed or swelled. It was eleven.

She drew back, dropped the curtain to shut out the wan glimmer, and in the darkness crept into the soft bed as if into a hiding-place.

A warm sun and an air mildly mellow. A faint gold-shadowed mist over the valley and a soft blue haze blending the rounded outlines of the hills. Through the shrubbery at Damory Court a cardinal darted like a crimson shuttle, to and fro impatiently from a dearing limb, and there sat Bob on the kitchen-steps, meditatively at a plated swaller. Every now and then he would lift his head and look at the sun, and then he would look at the cardinal, and then he would look at the swaller, and then he would look at the ground, and then he would

MANY CANDIDATES WILL HAVE TO RUN AGAIN

The indications are there will be several run-offs on May 11. The official returns were counted on Friday, but the full totals have not yet been given to the public.

While there may be some changes it is believed there will be a run-off for the following offices:

Governor, secretary of state, treasurer, attorney general, and commissioner of agriculture. The offices filled at the first primary without the necessity of running again are:

United States senator, lieutenant governor, auditor, two associate railroad commissioners and two justices of the supreme court.

There were other offices filled, but there were only two candidates and in two or three instances there was only one candidate.

In many counties there will be two primaries for county officials.

This looks as if we are going to have some warm times between now and May 11. The candidates are hard at work trying to convince the people why they should be elected. The gubernatorial race overshadows all of the others. —Montgomery Journal.

CLANTON CONTINUES TO GROW!

SEVERAL NEW BUILDINGS IN COURSE OF CONSTRCTION—OTHERS CONTEMPLATED.

Drs. Gowan & Gowan will erect a large three-story brick hotel on their lot just south of their office building on Seventh street, and Dr. J. P. Hayes will commence the erection of two two-story business business structures, 50 x 80 feet, on his corner lot on the west side of Seventh street. This was decided upon last week by Drs. Gowan and Hayes when a forfeit bond was entered into between them, the conditions being that the buildings are to completed by January 1, 1915. This makes the project an assured fact, and will add much to the building activity of Clanton.

Five new and pretty bungalows are being erected on the Gowan Addition by Messrs. W. W. Fox, C.B. Cox, Park Mahan and M. J. Farley.

Work on the new Johnson building at the corner of Second avenue and Seventh street is progressing rapidly and with favorable weather conditions the brick work will soon be completed.

Mr. E. M. Pinckard & Co. are contemplating the extension of their mercantile building several feet in order to keep apace with their large and growing trade.

It is rumored that other buildings are being talked of, but as yet nothing definite has been given out.

Keep your eye on Clanton, the metropolis of Central Alabama!

70 YEAR OLD WOMAN MAKES OWN CROPS

Another Educated Southern Woman Has "Made Good" Running Farm and Rearing Her Family of Six.

"It takes fourteen months in the year to make a strawberry crop, they say, but I made mine by myself and I cleared $400 off of one acre this past year."

A seventy-year-old woman in Chilton county made this statement, which is not considered an extraordinary one in Chilton county, only that she has lived her three score yearsand ten.

For an old woman to stoop over the back-breaking work of weeding a strawberry bed, or picking the berries, would be impossible except for a hale, hearty, cheerful Swede woman, who has spent her days in hard work.

She said "any neighbor will give you enough plants." You have to get them between the last of October and the first of March. If you want a little Spring crop the first year you should set out your plants in October, but they never do much until the second year. She said that the land had to be plowed deep, harrowed, and then harrowed again. The plants set eighteen inches apart, with rows four feet apart. She puts bone meal in the furrow, mixes it with a little hand plow, then drops her plants.

She says the beds have to be replanted every fourth year in order to produce fine berries.

No modern person is expected to believe the following—but it is perfectly true. She did her own ploughing, with an ox. But she is sufficiently up-to-date to know the value of fertilizing much and often.

In January she breaks the ground and spreads a heavy coat of fertilizer. Another coat is applied in February. Then before else can be done—except pull the grass by hand—until after the crop is gathered in April, May and June. She says:

"If you let the grass get one Summer's growth ahead you might just as well plough up your plants for the grass will uproot them when it is pulled out."

When the people in Philadelphia Detroit, Chicago, Indianapolis and other Northern cities enjoy the big red luscious berries from this little farm, they never imagine what have cost the producer, but only worry about what they have cost the consumer.

For these berries are shipped in refrigerator cars by the Fruit Grower's Association, and bring between $3 and $6 per crate.

Last year $18,000.00 came into the little town of Thorsby from the Northern markets—the result of the staawberry sales alone.

This ramarkable young-old woman also raises corn and oats for her stock, as well as nnmerous vegetables for her own use and that of her neighbors.

With her own hands she cuts the corn, carries it in her arms to a barn where, Northern style, she lets it lie for several days, then pulls the ears, and saves the fodder for feed.

In addifion to her farming she is the Good Samaritan of the community. Wherever there is illness you will find this dear old soul. With her competence, cheerfulness and humor, she has made many patients less ill, and many anxious eyes less anxious.—Montgomery Advertiser.

FANCY PRICE FOR HOGS

What is probably the largest price ever brought for hogs in Chilton county was paid last week when Mr. O. E. Latham sold to Mr. W. W. Fox a fine Berkshire and six pigs for $60. There is a lesson our farmers might learn from this, which shows that good stock can be raised as profitably in the South as anywhere, and if they would pay more attention to stock raising there would not be so many Southern smoke houses in the West.

HOME AGAIN MUCH IMPROVED

The air of general improvement prevalent at Clanton denotes an healthy business condition locally, that is gratifying to one of its citizens who has been absent as long as I have. I am thankful to be back and to be in a much improved physical condition. I feel strong enough to return to my profession and to get down to service once again.

I desire, in this connection, to thank my friends and neighbors for their solicitude as to my condition in my absence at Hot Springs, as well as for their consideration and many kindnesses to my family in my absence. I hope that it may be my privilege to justify and merit this consideration and kindness.

Respectfully,
WM. M. ADAMS.

STANLEY WINS IN SUPREME COURT

The Supreme Court last week handed down a decision in the case of J. J. Stanley vs. Louisville and Nashville Railroad Co. It will be remembered that Mr. Stanley sued the road for damages, alleged that the defendant had caused the burning of his gin by negligently emitting sparks. The jury awarded Stanley three thousand dollars. The railroad appealed to the Supreme Court, which upheld the lower Court.

Mr. Stanley was represented by Middleton, Denson & Reynolds.

IN MEMORY

On Friday, April seventeenth, the death angel visited the home of Mr. Nelson Atchison and took his little boy, Davis. He died in the Infirmary at Boston. He was four years of age.

Weep not, dear loved ones, for we know that our loss is heavens gain. He has only gone on before and we know that he is at rest with his Saviour, and though we cannot bring him back, but we can live to meet him.

From His Cousin.

FIGHT FLIES SCREEN NOW

In the Spring a young man's fancy lightly turns to thoughts of love, but the average housekeeper's turns not so lightly to thoughts of flies. We discard our screen doors late in the Fall, so I have kept a swatter in the kitchen all winter, and there has been just one day in which I did not kill a single fly. Allowing for their natural rate of increase, I consider that I have diminished the 1914 fly crop by several millions. Now that screen time is at hand I wish to pass on to Progressive Farmer readers a new idea in window screens—new here, at least, and no doubt elsewhere. The frames are made to cover the whole window and are hinged to the facing at the top. A small hook at the lower end of the screen, and a staple in the sill hold the screen securely in place. When the sill needs cleaning the screen may be swung out of the way, making an easy job of what is usually a nuisance. (This does not apply to removable screens, but I have never found them effectiv). Half a yard of wire cloth and a few stiff switches will make a dozen swatters, and one should be kept handy in every room to kill any chance intruders and I find that a piece of fly paper, or one of the little poisoned traps on a shelf outside the doors a big help. And a trap or so at the barn pays well. To keep the manure hauled away is, of course, to attack the fly evil at its root, but most men won't do that so it is up to us to do the best we can.—Progressive Farmer.

D. C. H. S. DEFEATS "FAST" JONES

In a very interesting game at Plantersville Saturday the Dallas County High School defeated Jones to the tune of eight to six.

Features of the game were the brilliant pitching of Roper, who struck out twelve of Jones' men; the batting of Buffington, the star third of the D. C. H. S., who kissed the pill over right field fence making three bases; also the batting of Reddick, the fast catcher for the High School, who made three two-base hits. Broadhead, the "high kid" made three hits, and also slid under third safe and sound. Davis made several nice plays, as did all of the boys.

Paul Reed, Jones' "star", was knocked out in the seventh. It is not thought that the "kid" will enter the box again without more practice. T. Reed, his successor, met with the same fate, and Tissue fared little better. Tissue batting for Jones was excellent. He knocked a high ball over left field, but was "passed" out by Wright at third.

Score by innings:

ROAD MEETING TO BE CALLED AT CLANTON

Association to Map Out Plans For the Birmingham-Montgomery Highway.

W. S. Keller, state highway engineer, and President of the Birmingham Montgomery Highway association, will shortly call a meeting of the association at Clantoh, to make furthor plans for the construction of the highway between the two cities.

Mr. Keller has already mapped out the proposed road, and a portion of it is now under construction, but he hopes to made additional plans relative to the highway at the earliest possible moment. The meeting of the association will probably be held at Clanton within the next two weeks, and Mr. Keller will urge a full attendance of all persons interested in the important highway.

A GREAT DAY

The Ministers' Conference of the Unity and Chilton Associations met with Samaria church last Thursday, April 16.

Devotional exercises were conducted earnestly by Rev. F. W. C. Bice, after which Rev. R. R. Brasher gave some good ideas on the ideas on the purpose of our meetings.

Another very important question "Temperance," was well discussed by Rev. M. J. Parrish.

An excellent sermon was preached on "The Citizenship of Saints" by Rev. J. H. Wallace. A clear gospel note on prohibition was sounded, which met the hearty approval of not only the ministers present but of the entire audience.

During the noon hour Mrs. J. H. Wallace gave a short talk on Woman's Work, and afterwards organized a W. N. U. All the ladies present joined and seemed to be interested in the work.

The important question "Missions," was well handled by Rev. W. W. Carlton and W. H. Connell. Let us prav to God that he may open the eyes of the people of Chilton county so we may see our duty on this question. Bro. Brasher related the following as a few of the objects of our Conference namely:

1st. To broaden our vision and enlarge the work.

2nd. The cultivate the fraternal spirit.

3rd. To overcome strife, envy, etc.

4th. To correct our errors if any exist.

The Conference desires that all ministers be present at our meetings, for we find they are very helpful. May God help us to get interested in the Lord's business.

If any minister has any question he wishes to be discussed, please send it in to the Secretary, H. G. Williams, Thorsby, Ala. Also if he will suggest some one to speak on the subject it will be highly appreciated.

We are to have another meeting on Thursday before third Sunday. Bro. [illegible] was asked to [illegible] this good people of [illegible]

Bruce, of this town, says: "After childbirth, I suffered greatly with wasting, and various womanly troubles, and was in bed for six weeks. Half the time, I could not move, only when I was turned over by some one. Oh! how I suffered, no one knows.

I was told that I would have to go through an operation, but at the time of the operation, I was too weak to undergo it, and I decided there was no chance for me.

As a last resort, my mother advised me to try Cardui, the woman's tonic, and my husband bought me a bottle. I could tell from the first that it was doing me good, and by the time I had taken the first bottle, I could stand on my feet. I got another bottle, and before I had taken it up, I was just about well. The pains all stopped, and in a short while I was able to do my work.

I know that Cardui saved my life, and I would not be without it in the house. I almost waited too long, and I advise all suffering women not to wait, but to begin taking Cardui at once."

CONGRATULATION A LA MODE

Mollie's Comment on Friend's Engagement Probably Led to a Lessening of Intimacy.

Mollie met Muriel at the matinee one afternoon. They embraced enthusiastically.

"Oh, dearie," cried Mollie, "I'm so glad to see you! I have scarcely been able to wait until I could see you to congratulate you on your engagement to Harold! Why didn't you give me a hint as to what you expected?"

"Why," replied Muriel, "I—"

"Now, don't you dare to tell me," went on Mollie, "that you concealed it from me intentionally!"

"Why, I didn't, certainly," said Muriel. "I really didn't expect it myself quite so soon, dear."

"He is such a charming fellow," continued Mollie. "Weren't you just surprised to death when he proposed to you, dearie?"

"Why, I can't say I was," replied Muriel. "Why should I have been?"

"Well," replied the dear friend, "everybody else was."

Wasted Sweetness.

"Lady," said the Chicago heeler "here's a box of candy to take home to de kids."

"Sir," said the lady voter, "candy is deficient in proteids, contains an excess of albuminoids and its use by the adolescent is provocative of many infirmities which we, as new members of the electorate, are trying to eradicate. Furthermore, your tender of this package is in violation of section 3, 11, 44 of the criminal code, which deals with attempted bribery, and which carries a heavy penalty."

To which the heeler could only reply:

"Well, wot T'ell wot T'ell?"

Fair Words or Nothing.

"George," said the wife to her generally unappreciative husband, "how do you like my new hat?"

"Well, my dear," said George with great candor, "to tell you the truth—"

"Stop right there, George! If you're going to talk that way about it I don't want to know."

DOCTORS MEET IN MONTGOMERY

ABOUT 400 ATTEND SESSIONS OF STATE ASSOCIATION.

INTERESTING MEETING HELD

Leading Physicians of State Discuss Subjects of Interest to Public At Large.

Montgomery.—Between 350 and 400 physicians of the State attended the annual session of the State Medical Association, which met here April 21 for a four days' convention. The sessions of the association this year proved, it was stated, to be the most interesting in the history of the medical organization. The program covered a variety of subjects.

Probably the most interesting session of the convention was held at the Sidney Lanier high school on April 22, when three leading physicians of the State discussed subjects of great interest to the public at large.

Dr. W. M. Faulk of Tuscaloosa spoke on "Heridity and Its Influence on Disease." Dr. Faulk is recognized as an authority on the subject to heredity and his address was heard with great interest.

Another subject of great interest to the public was discused by Dr. J. Ross Snyder of Birmingham, who spoke on the subject of "The School Child."

The third subject to be discussed at this session was "The Relation of Stimulants and Narcotics to Nervous and Mental Diseases." This subject was the theme of Dr. H. S. Ward of Birmingham.

Following the session a reception was held for the physicians at the Beauvoir club.

OPELIKA-TO-AUBURN LINE.

Chamber of Commerce Makes Definite Announcement.

Opelika.—W. S. Lounbury, secretary of the Opelika and Lee County Chamber of Commerce, states that a movement is on foot to build and operate an electric railroad line between this city and Auburn. He stated that a survey of the line would be made in about ten days or two weeks, and that in all probability work of grading the road would begin immediately after the survey is completed.

The survey will be made on the north side of the Western of Alabama railroad tracks, and not along the old Opelika and Auburn dummy line as was at first thought. The route selected will shorten the distance between the two points one and a half or two miles.

It is understood that Chicago capitalists are interested in the project, and the road when built will be equipped in the most approved and up-to-date manner.

DISASTROUS FIRE VISITS BERRY.

Seven Buildings Destroyed by Fire, Loss Estimated at $60,000.

Berry.—The most disastrous fire in the history of the town broke out here and before being got under control seven buildings, including five stores, had been burned, among them being the postoffice, although it is reported that the mails were saved before being consumed by the flames.

The origin of the fire is unknown. It is estimated that the damage will be about $60,000, partly covered by insurance.

MOTION PICTURE MEN TO MEET.

Convention Will Be Held in Birmingham on May 23 and 24.

Birmingham.—Motion picture men from all over the Southern States will meet in Birmingham May 23 and 24 for a special meeting of the Motion Picture Exhibitors' League, according to announcement made by A. Alex Wall, National vice president. The States to be represented are Alabama, Tennessee, Georgia, Mississippi and Florida.

DEWBERRY'S LINE COMING.

Materials Have Been Assembled to Connect With Alabama Port.

Mobile.—The railroad of the Dewberry interests to be built from Alabama Port to Cedar Point will be ready and trains passing over the tracks within 60 days, according to J. M. Dewberry. All the material and the construction forces have been assembled for the building of the railroad.

Barbour Farmers Busy.

Eufaula.—Eufaula and outlying territory had the first good soaking rains in almost a month recently, and farmers have taken advantage of the excellent opportunity to get their cotton seed in the ground. Preparations for planting have practically been completed, and the ground is in fine shape now for germination. A great deal of cotton has been planted, while several 40-acre fields of corn are coming up.

DREW LOSES APPEAL.

Fort Payne Man's Sentence Is Affirmed.

New Orleans.—The cases appealed by E. C. Drew, of Fort Payne, wherein Mr. Drew was convicted and sentenced to serve a prison term for alleged fraudulent use of the mails, were affirmed by the United States Circuit Court of Appeals here. Drew was convicted in August, 1912, of fraudulent use of the mails and was given an eighteen months sentence. A month later he organized the Wills Valley Oil & Gas Co. and in December, 1912, he organized the DeKalb-Etowah Oil & Gas Co. The Federal grand jury again indicted him and he was given a five year sentence, by Judge Grubb sitting at Gadsden.

NEW HOTEL AND DEPOT.

Many Dwellings Are Being Erected at Sylacauga.

Sylacauga.—Sylacauga is to have a union passenger station, a modern hotel building and many new residences are in course of erection. The Exchange Hotel building, which was partially destroyed by fire some time ago, has been purchased by A. L. Porter, who has already begun work, preparatory to the erection of a modern hotel.

The work on the union passenger station is to begin at once, the building to cost about $40,000. There have been about 40 new residences erected here during the past 60 days and still there is not a vacant house in town.

MAY HAVE COMMISSION FORM.

Petition Being Circulated Asking Aldermanic Form Be Abolished.

Florence.—A petition is being circulated among the legal voters of Florence asking that the aldermanic form of government be changed to the commission form. It has been stated that the councilmen favor the change, and it has received the sanction of the mayor. Quite a number have signed the petition, and a number have refused their signatures. If the required number of names are secured, the probate judge cannot call the election until September, as the law states that two years must elapse, after the last city election, before any change can be made.

AUBURN RAISES ITS COURSE.

Fourteen High School Points Will Be Required for Entrance.

Auburn.—The entrance requirements to the Alabama Polytechnic will be fourteen high school units be ginning with the next session of the college. This makes a raise of two units over the last year's requirements.

Conditions to the amount of two units will be allowed. Special one-year, two-year and three-year courses, as in the past, will admit students who are mature enough to profit by them.

BILL POSTERS TO MEET.

Magic City Planning to Entertain Southeastern Association.

Birmingham.—Plans are now under discussion for the entertainment of the Southeastern Bill Posters' Association, which will hold its convention here on May 18 and 19. Members of the local association will be the hosts of the occasion and will do the honors. The Chamber of Commerce will co-operate and help in the entertainment.

RAILROAD RATE SETTLEMENT BUT A BUGABOO

Just About the Same Difference as Between Tweedle-Dum and Tweedle-Dee in the

TWO AGREEMENTS MADE

ALABAMA DEMOCRACY'S SLOGAN.

Henderson and Harmony.
Peace and Prosperity.
VS.
Comer and Chaos.
Discord and Dissention.

Here is the whole story of the railroad rate settlement in a nutshell. Read it and then make up your mind to forever put an end to agitation in Alabama by putting an end to Braxton Bragg Comer's ambitions on May 11:

The Comer Agreement.

"It is further understood and agreed that in the making of this settlement and the dismissal of the pending litigation, according to the terms of the verbal agreement between the parties hereto made contemporaneously with this instrument, there is to be no liability upon the said ——— railroad company growing or arising out of the bond or bonds which said company was required to give on securing the injunction heretofore issued in the pending litigation. . . .

The Henderson Agreement.

"It is further understood and agreed that in the making of this settlement and providing for the dismissal of the pending litigation as aforesaid, there is to be no liability upon the railroad companies, or either of them, growing or arising out of the bonds they were required to give on securing temporary restraining orders. . . ."

Henderson Coupons Redeemable.

"Mr. Comer, during his administration, settled litigation with railroads representing three-fifths of the mileage of the State. The litigation had been in effect for 14 months. Nothing was said in regard to coupon redemption. We settled with railroads representing two-fifths of the mileage of the State after litigation had been in effect for 24 months. The coupons issued on the rates made by the commission are redeemable at face value."—Chas. Henderson, President of Alabama R. R. Commission.

Mr. Comer, in His Agreements, Relieved the Railroads of Fines.

The railroads with which Mr. Comer settled, wilfully violated the law in overchargnig passengers and overcharging shippers before establishing the 2 1-2-cent passenger rate, millions of dollars, and, in addition to this, under the law, had incurred penalties in the way of fines that were due the State of Alabama, more than $20,000,000. Mr. Comer, in his agreement, relieved these roads from paying this more than $20,000,000 fine, that was due the State.

Special Rates for Mr. Comer.

Mr. Comer had one of his Special Sessions of the Legislature to pass an act authorizing the railroads to give him a special coal rate for his cotton mills at Sylacauga of 50 cents per ton, while the public pays 70 cents.

Mr. Comer now enjoys that discrimination.

Cotton mills at Selma, Enterprise, Uniontown, Montgomery, Mobile, Piedmont, Jacksonville, Huntsville, Florence and other points in the State of Alabama, which compete with Mr. Comer have no such special privilege.

Motorists Who Drove Haynes Cars in the Early Days Still Drive the Haynes

Twenty-one years ago, Elwood Haynes built the "horseless carriage"—the little machine that gave birth to the American automobile industry. Ever since then, Haynes cars have been built, year in, year out, without interruption.

And during these twenty-one years, Haynes owners have been demonstrating in "road races," "reliability runs," in "hill climbs" of every description, under all conditions, in this country and abroad with themselves the only "competitors," that the is a good car, and that given ordinary care and attention, the Haynes remains a good car, a mighty good car—indefinitely.

That's why these owners, after years of service, again purchase a Haynes. That's why such a large percentage of the Haynes annual production is sold every season to owners of old Haynes cars. That's why you should investigate the Haynes before you buy any car.

Elwood Haynes was ahead of the times when he built the first Haynes, back in '93. He is ahead of the times now in adopting the greatest automobile refinement in recent years—the Vulcan Electric Gear Shift. This device eliminates the hand-shift lever entirely, and so simplifies the control of the Haynes that anyone may readily drive it. With it, the Haynes is electrically controlled throughout, inasmuch as gear-shifting, starting, lighting and ignition are accomplished by electricity.

The Haynes "Four" 48 dynamometer horsepower, 118 inch wheelbase.....$1785 and $1965
The Haynes "Six" 65 dynamometer horsepower, 130 inch wheelbase.....$2500 and $2700

SUPPORTERS AND FRIENDS OF SEED, KOLB AND HENDERSON

Make Ringing Declaration Against the Continuation of Political Agitation in Alabama

THE ELECTION OF MR. HENDERSON MEANS PEACE

PROSPERITY AND PROGRESS

On Saturday, April 11th, in Montgomery, with less than forty-eight hours, notice, there assembled about four hundred friends and supporters, hailing from every part of Alabama, Seed, Kolb and Henderson, candidates for Governor in the April primary, and amid the greatest enthusiasm the following resolutions were unanimously adopted:

CHARLES HENDERSON
For Governor.

The verdict of the people as expressed in the primary last Monday was a clear and unmistakable repudiation of Comer and Comerism.

The campaign he conducted was pitched on a lower plane than ever before known in our political history.

He offered to the people no program of constructive or progressive legislation, but in his efforts to gain power, appealed to prejudice and passion.

Claiming to be the implacable foe of the selfish special interest, no man who ever sought the office of Governor was more completely their servile and pliant tool. His campaign was supported by favor-seeking corporations and by those who hope through his election to secure exemption from taxation and special privileges.

And, although an overwhelming majority of the Democrats of Alabama decline to support his candidacy, he still persists in his efforts to mislead the people and again seeks their support.

THEREFORE, BE IT RESOLVED, by representatives who supported Walter D. Seed, Reuben F. Kolb and Charles Henderson in the recent primary in conference assembled:

First. That we are unalterably opposed to the candidacy of B. B. Comer. His nomination and election would mean another four years of waste and extravagance, of business and political unrest. It would check investments, stop the wheels of industrial progress and put the State under the control of a political ring whom the people scourged from power four years ago.

Second. We oppose B. B. Comer because during the whole course of his former administration he never wrote a single statute progressive in its character or inspired by a desire to secure greater social justice or equality of opportunity to the toiling masses of our people. It was through the efforts of B. B. Comer that Alabama today occupies the unenviable and humiliating position of being one of the three States in this Union that permits the life, health and intelligence of little children to be coined into gold to swell the dividends of the cotton mill owners of the State.

Third. We oppose B. B. Comer because he has constantly opposed the demands for social justice for the toilers in our mines, our mills and our factories for better hygienic and sanitary protection and safeguards, and for reasonable hours of labor.

Fourth. We oppose him because he has been the unrelenting foe of labor and as Governor, without warrant of law, by an act as arbitrary and despotic as ever disgraced the annals of a free people, drove the striking miners in the Birmingham district from their homes, and denied to a large class of our people their legal and constitutional rights.

Fifth. We oppose him because he secured the passage of laws which allowed the revenues of the Convict Department to be placed in the hands of an official without bond, and to be withheld for three months at a time from the State treasury, and because by his own legislation the Lacy defalcation was made possible.

Sixth. We oppose him because this legislation was not in the interest of the people, but appears to have been for selfish personal purposes.

Seventh. We oppose him because claiming to favor the rule of the people he sought by all the means in his power to overthrow the time-honored Democratic principles of majority rule to gratify his own selfish ambitions.

Eighth. We oppose him because of the record of his administration shows that he sought to exempt from taxation certain industries for his own personal benefit and to vest in our common carriers the right to discriminate in their rates in his own favor and in favor of certain favored industries.

Ninth. We oppose him because he filled our statute books with laws instituted by a spirit of hostility and which were subsequently nullified by the decisions of the Supreme Court of the United States.

Tenth. We oppose him because if elected, he would not be the Governor of the people, but the chief of a political faction, and would use the powers of his great office, not to promote the interests of the people of Alabama, but to build up a political machine and to advance his own selfish ambition.

Eleventh. We oppose him because he is unfit by temperament to fill this great office; and because he would be willing to plunge the State into another four years of turmoil and bitter agitation and check our growing prosperity in order to punish his political enemies and advance the personal fortunes of his political adherents.

Twelfth. We oppose him because he has denounced every former friend whose aspirations crossed the pathway of his ambition, and because he has sought by abuse, slander and misrepresentation to conceal his own vulnerable record and to ride into power on a campaign of false pretense, hypocrisy and slander.

Thirteenth. We oppose him because he has unwisely dissipated the millions of dollars left in our State treasury by former Governor Jelks; because he has increased our taxes, created useless and unnecessary offices, and because his former administration was characterized by a deplorable lack of business capacity and efficiency.

Fourteenth. We oppose him because he seeks office not to promote needed reforms, to improve the efficiency of government, but to punish his political enemies, and to build up a Comer machine and to exploit the office of Governor for his own personal use and to gratify an ambition which is not justified by his record or his ability.

We therefore, present to the people of Alabama as our choice a man who is self-poised, whose business ability has been demonstrated, who fully understands the needs of our people, who is wisely progressive, who is not under the domination of special interests, whose vote in his own county attests the confidence of the people who know him best, and who would give Alabama a wise, efficient and economical administration.

The State has had enough of agitation, bitterness and strife. Our people desire to devote their attentions to building up the great resources of the State, reducing the expense of State government, reforming our judiciary, increasing the power of the Courts and preventing reversals in criminal cases on technical errors; making punishments of the guilty more swift and certain and in making human life and liberty as safe and secure in Alabama as in the most advanced State of the Union.

With the election of Charles Henderson the State will enter into a new era of progress and advancement. He has never yet sought to coin into political capital the crime of those who looted the State treasury. Nor has he ever negotiated with criminals, nor will he make the pardoning power a political asset.

The people of Alabama are fortunate in having the opportunity to vote for a man who represents so thoroughly such lofty ideals and whose election will guarantee political peace, progress and prosperity for the affairs of the State.

And we pledge him our loyal support.

TORTURING TWINGES

Much so-called rheumatism is caused by weakened kidneys. When the kidneys fail to clean the blood of uric acid, the acid forms into crystals like bits of broken glass in the muscles, joints and on the nerve casings. Torturing pains dart through the affected part whenever it is moved. By curing the kidneys, Doan's Kidney Pills have eased thousands of rheumatic cases, lumbago, sciatica, gravel, neuralgia and urinary disorders.

WHAT ANGERED MRS. WILBUR

Mabel's Comment Taken Entirely Too Seriously and Friendship Was Rudely Jarred.

"That Mrs. Wilbur is so angry she won't speak to me," confided Mabel to Ethel.

"Really!" exclaimed Ethel. "And what is she angry about?"

"I haven't the slightest idea," said Mabel. "We met a couple of days ago, and we were talking as friendly as possible, when suddenly she flared up and she hasn't noticed me since."

"What were you talking about?" inquired Ethel.

"Why, nothing in particular," explained Mabel. "Just the ordinary small talk. I remember she said, 'I always kiss my husband three or four times every day.'"

"And what did you say?" asked Ethel, in an effort to get at the root of the trouble.

"Why I said," replied the other, "I knew at least a dozen girls who do the same,' and then she nearly had a fit."

SKIN TROUBLE ITCHED BADLY

Glenns P. O., Va.—"My baby's trouble began with an itching and then a little bump would come and she could not rest day or night. The trouble affected her whole body. The bumps festered and came to a head and the corruption looked like thick matter, kind of a yellow color. The sores itched so badly until it seemed to me she would scratch herself to pieces and then a sore would form and her clothes would stick to her body and pull off the little scab. In some places she would scratch and irritate the sores until they seemed to be large. She was affected about a year.

"I wrote for a sample of Cuticura Soap and Ointment. I bathed her body in warm water and Cuticura Soap and then I applied the Cuticura Ointment, and they afforded relief after twice using. I bought some more Cuticura Soap and Ointment and inside of two weeks she was cured." (Signed) Mrs. J. R. Greggs, Nov. 21, 1912.

COULDN'T STAND FOR DEFEAT

According to London Newspaper, Colored Opponent of Irishman Had Little Chance.

A brawny son of Erin was acting as time keeper in a rough-and-ready fight between his mate and a negro in South America. In the course of the fight a well-planted blow sent the Irishman earthwards.

"One!" cried the time keeper, in a tense voice, watch in hand.

"Two!" he murmured hoarsely. "Pat, ye fool, git up! There's only eight seconds left!"

The inert mass never moved.

"Three!" shouted the time keeper desperately. "Think of yer old mother, Pat! What's it she'd be saying to ye, 'Bate the nigger!'"

Slowly he called up to eight, bucking up his mate with patriotic ejaculations between each long second. When eight had been called Pat slowly staggered to his feet, and by a mighty lunge succeeded in knocking down his black opponent.

Desperately fearing lest he should revive in time, the time keeper set off at top speed:

"One, two, three, four, five, and five's ten! Ye're out, ye black villain!"—London Tid-Bits.

Won Distinction in Three Wars.

Gen. John B. S. Todd, a soldier of three wars and governor of Dakota territory, was born 100 years ago in Lexington, Ky. In his youth he removed with his parents to Illinois. He graduated from West Point in 1837 and for five years thereafter was actively engaged in the Florida war. During the war with Mexico he distinguished himself in the siege of Vera Cruz and at the battle of Cerro Gordo. Subsequently he took part in the Sioux expedition in the Northwest. For a short period in the early part of the Civil war he commanded a division of the Army of the Tennessee. After quitting the army he served as a Dakota delegate in congress and was governor of the territory from 1869 to 1871. General Todd died at Yankton in 1872.

Representative Simeon D. Fess of Ohio believes in looking for the brightest side of life; he is "strong" for optimism. His distinction between an optimist and a pessimist is apparent in the following definition which he sometimes gives:

"A pessimist," says Representative Fess, "asks 'Is there any milk in that pitcher?' But an optimist says, 'Pass the cream.'"

Sick Women Attention

Is it possible there is a woman in this country who continues to suffer without giving Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound a trial after all the evidence that is continually being published, which proves beyond contradiction that this grand old medicine has relieved more suffering among women than any other one medicine in the world?

We have published in the newspapers of the United States more genuine testimonial letters than have ever been published in the interest of any other medicine for women—and every year we publish many new testimonials, all genuine and true. Here are three never before published:

From Mrs. S. T. Richmond, Providence, R. I.

PROVIDENCE, R. I.—"For the benefit of women who suffer as I have done I wish to state what Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has done for me. I did some heavy lifting and the doctor said it caused a displacement. I have always been weak and I overworked after my baby was born and inflammation set in, then nervous prostration, from which I did not recover until I had taken Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. The Compound is my best friend and when I hear of a woman with troubles like mine I try to induce her to take your medicine."—Mrs. S. T. RICHMOND, 199 Waldo Street, Providence, R. I.

A Minister's Wife Writes:

CLOQUET, MINN.—"I have suffered very much with irregularities, pain and inflammation, but your wonderful medicine, Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, has made me well and I can recommend the same to all that are troubled with these complaints."—Mrs. JENNIE AKERMAN, c/o Rev. K. AKERMAN, Cloquet, Minnesota.

From Mrs. J. D. Murdoch, Quincy, Mass.

SOUTH QUINCY, MASS.—"The doctor said that I had organic trouble and he doctored me for a long time and I did not get any relief. I saw Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound advertised and I tried it and found relief before I had finished the first bottle. I continued taking it all through middle life and am now a strong, healthy woman and earn my own living."—Mrs. JANE D. MURDOCH, 25 Gordon St., South Quincy, Mass.

Entered at the Post Office at Clanton, Ala., as second-class mail matter under act of Congress, March 3rd, 1879.

Mr. F. A. Gulledge of Verbena, "retired merchant and capitalist," is on Mr. Henderson's campaign committee from the Fourth Congressional District.

The primary May 11th will soon be here. In the first primary we had our selections and voted, some we lost, but not all, so let us pull together for the battle is on and the people will win.

Some people argue that Comer can't win in the run-off, for the reason that 96,000 voters said that they did not want him for Governor. What about Henderson? About 108,000 said they did not want him for Governor.

In keeping with the established policy of the Press in furnishing all the latest news, we are giving to our patrons this week all the latest developments from the seat of war in Mexico, illustrated and in regular metropolitan style, covering the situation complete. We have gone to considerable expense to supply this excellent feature, and we feel sure that our efforts will be appreciated by our host of subscribers.

The published statements of our local banks which are found on the first page of this issue, show these two growing institutions to be in a healthy and flourishing condition. The large deposits is an evidence that our people are prosperous and contented and "the goose hangs high."

A farmer who was carrying an express package from a city mail order house, was accosted by a local merchant: "Why didn't you buy that bill of goods from me? I could have saved you the express and besides you would have been patronizing a home store, which helps pay the taxes and build up this locality." With characteristic frankness the farmer asked: "Why don't you patronage your home paper and advertise? I read it and didn't know you had the goods I have here, nor do I ever see your name in the paper inviting one to come to your store."—The Pomotropic.

Mr. B. E. Collum, in a letter to he Union-Banner of last week, concludes with this paragraph:

"Trusting that every one will go out on the 21st of April and vote for the one of their choice and elect men who will manage our affairs in better shape than for the past four years."

It is indeed regrettable that Mr. Collum sees fit to thus criticise these county officials—the very men he helped put in office. So far as we have been able to learn the people of Chilton are well pleased with the manner in which the present board of Commissioners has managed the affairs of the county; and we believe that a majority of the citizens will bear us out in saying that the present Board is the strongest that Chilton county has had for many years; certain it is that Judge Denson's administration has been fraught with much good to the people—good roads have been built in all sections of the county, and improvement along all lines accomplished.

"By August 1 the Birmingham to Montgomery highway, which was mapped out by the Ledger scouts in 1912 will be practically completed," said Judge Lewis H. Reynolds, of Clanton, one of the prime movers in the highway and president of the Birmingham to Montgomery highway association.

"We little thought at the time we made the scouting trip that the road would be ready so soon

"Within a few weeks a barbecue will be held at Clanton for the purpose of celebrating the accomplishment of this great feat. People who have not been in close touch with the situation can hardly realize the great progress that the people in the counties along the proposed highway have made in road building since the Ledger's tour, which was the real beginning of the movement.

"Jefferson county has practically completed a model highway to the Shelby county line and Shelby has almost completed its link. Montgomery and Elmore have completed their share and the contract has been awarded for Chilton county's link.

"In a few months this highway between the metropolis and the capital is going to be one of the most popular in the country. It is going to bring the people of the two cities closer together and automobile parties from one city to another are going to be the rule rather than the exception. After all, however, the greatest good and the greatest development are coming to the counties through which the highway will run."

The above is clipped from the Birmingham Ledger, and we are at a loss to know where Judge Reynolds got his information that the contract for constructing Chilton's link to this highway had been let. We have made every effort to ascertain when and to whom this contract was awarded but up to this good hour our efforts have been futile. Will some one please tell us? The Commissioners' Court say they don't know.

IN MEMORIAM

On last Tuesday the death angel visited the home of Mr. and Mrs. Mr. and Mrs. M. J. Williams and bore away the spirit of their sweet little six year old daughter, Jeanette, and while she rests in the arms of Jesus, our heartfelt sympathy goes out to the bereaved parents; yet we can only guess what that sorrow is. But O, how happy she must be now that she has seen Jesus and shines in the light of God. Weep not, dear parents, the little one is at home, away from her suffering and sorrow, and is not this the very best and kindest thing that the tender Saviour could do for her? For she is with him now and forever and waiting for you to come home.

So weep not dear parents, for little Jeanette is at rest. We know we cannot comfort you, only Jesus can. And oh, how much he must be touched when such a sorrow comes to his children on earth, and He knows by actual experience what human love is. We know her suffering is over, for while the gentle zephyrs played among the leaves of the fresh budded trees, her little spirit was wafted on the pinions of angels to the realms of eternal bliss to the God who gave it.

One Who Loved Her.

MUST GROW MORE LIVESTOCK

Prosperity of South Depends Upon Diversified Farming and Stock Raising.

ERADICATE CATTLE TICK

The South, Adapted to Live Stock Growing, Should Lead the United States in Production of Cattle—Do Not Import Food Products—Keep Money at Home.

By G. H. ALFORD, Agricultural Extension Department, International Harvester Company of New Jersey.

During the last ten years our acre yield increased, but not half as much as the increase in population. We have all heard the old Dutch proverb quoted before, but we cannot quote it too often: "No grass, no stock; no stock, no manure; no manure, no crops." Holland is almost entirely a grass and stock country, and lands are worth on an average $500 per acre. These people have found that they can make more out of land from grass and live stock than they can by cultivating it.

Unnumbered acres of hill land in the cotton belt are making less than one-third bale of cotton per acre, and at the same time making poverty for those tilling them. The cost of commercial fertilizer applied annually is appalling. The razor-back terraces, covered with weeds, grass and briars, and the circles and short rows prevent the use of labor-saving implements.

We are sending millions to the northern states every year to pay for pork products, dairy products and beef. This money should be kept at home and deposited in our banks until they are full to overflowing and the rate of interest lowered to, say, six per cent., because of the abundance of money. Then we will have the necessary money to build good roads, to pay good teachers better salaries to teach longer terms, to improve our farms and to build comfortable homes and put telephones and libraries in them. Then our boys and girls will stay on the farm, and we will behold prosperity in every department of the commercial world.

The south has an overwhelming advantage over every other section in live stock raising. We have great climatic advantages that permit outdoor pasturing and feeding during the whole, or the greater part of the year. We can obtain large yields of oats, legumineus crops, Johnson and Bermuda grasses, sorghum cane hay, and an abundance of corn for the making of silage, the most economic form of carbohydrates. The keeping of good cattle and the intelligent use of thoroughly good permanent pastures and grazing crops, and the economic use of the silo and cotton seed meal will make our lands rich, keep millions of dollars at home that are now sent to the north and west, and make our people prosperous.

In the cotton belt live stock farming has been avoided mainly for two reasons: (1) Because all-cotton farming paid better until the soil became poor; (2) because of the cattle tick. Now, millions of acres are too poor to grow cotton profitably, and we can easily eradicate the cattle tick. Since the work of eradicating the tick was inaugurated, nearly 200,000 square miles have been cleaned for all time; this is an area over three times as large as Alabama. The tick injures the hide, reduces the milk flow at least ten per cent., makes it very difficult to fatten cattle, prevents the profitable production of good cattle, to breed up our native cattle, lowers the price of our cattle on the markets and destroys more than enough cattle every year to pay for its eradication.

The days of the tick are numbered. The last tick will be destroyed in a few years, and then the south will enjoy a permanent system of agriculture, increasing prosperity to [illegible]

DEATH OF MR. TIPTON MULLINS

Mr. Tipton Mullins, one of the most prominent and influential citizens of Chilton county, passed away at his home in Clanton this (Thursday) morning at nine o'clock, following an illness of several months. While his demise was not unexpected, the news is a great shock to the people of the entire community and is received with universal sorrow.

The funeral will take place Friday from the Baptist church and interment will follow in Clanton cemetery.

For lack of time and space a more extended account of the death of this distinguished gentleman will appear in our next issue.

SERIOUS AUTOMOBILE ACCIDENT

Wednesday afternoon, while going down a steep hill near Lime Springs church, the automobile of Mr. Charlie Cox, became unmanageable, the brake failed to work, and proceeding down the hill at a rapid rate the machine turned turtle, throwing the occupants violently to the ground. The occupants were Mr. Cox, owner of the car, Mr. and Mrs. M. H. Marcus, and Mrs. Mack Gilland of Macon, Ga. All the members of the party escaped with minor bruises with the exception of Mr. Marcus, who was pinioned beneath the heavy car and sustained serious injuries, five of his ribs being broken.

THE TRUTH about PAINT

The value of paint can only be measured by the length of satisfactory service it gives.

A building painted with Keg Lead and Oil Hand-mixed Paint or ordinary ready-mixed paint never looks well, and the results from this class of paint are never satisfactory.

In a short while your property will look as if it had not been painted for years.

To use cheap paint is a waste of both paint and labor.

Don't waste your money on unknown, untested brands.

Remember, painting is an investment, not an expense—therefore use the paint that stood the test of time—

HENDERSON MEETING AT SOLDIERS' HOME

Mountain Creek, Ala., April 22, 1914.—Hon. David W. W. Fuller, of Montgomery, spoke at the Soldiers' Home at 10:30 today, to an audience of about one hundred people, mostly voters. An effort had been made on the part of some parties at Montgomery to prevent this speaking taking place at the Home, but the Veterans insisted on the advertised program being carried out, and a cordial reception was given the speaker, and a very enthusiastic meeting was held. Mr. Fuller arrived at the Home a couple of hours before the time for the speaking and spent the time amongst the Veterans, who gave him a splendid reception. Comer will not get over 20 votes at this Beat. The Veterans are practically unanimous for Mr. Henderson, and the enthusiasm displayed throughout Mr. Fuller's address evidenced a determination upon their part to vote a solid Henderson ticket.

AT VERBENA.

An automobile party from Clanton met Mr. Fuller immediately after the speech at the Home, and carried him to Verbena, where a speaking was held at 3:00 p.m. in the school house. The speaker was introduced by Dr. H. W. Caffey, who in a few words pointed out some of the pointed issues of the campaign, and urged fairness of consideration upon the people. The meeting was well attended, the majority of those in attendance being of the first people of the community, including a number of ladies. The fairness and cleanness of Mr. Fuller's speech seemed to be the subject of universal comment.

The speech of Mr. Fuller is being so well received by the people on account of its fairness and clear discussion of the issues of the campaign, that arrangements have been made to have it reported at the Thorsby meeting tonight, which will be published in full in next week's issue.

WILSON ASKS AUTHORITY TO USE ARMED FORCES TO UPHOLD DIGNITY OF NATION

HOUSE PASSES RESOLUTION APPROVING PURPOSE OF PRESIDENT BY A VOTE OF 337 TO 37—FIVE DEMOCRATS VOTING AGAINST THE MEASURE

CHIEF EXECUTIVE DCLARES HE DOES NOT DESIRE WAR

Vera Cruz Blocaded—No Arms Allowed to Come In—Huerta's Refusal to Salute U. S. Flag Causes Drastic Action on the Part of the American Government

Washington. — Asking approval to use the armed forces of the United States in such ways and to such an extent that may be necessary to obtain from General Huerta and his adherents the fullest recognition of the rights and dignity of the United States President Wilson personally appealed to a joint session of Congress for permission to compel proper recognition of the supremacy of the Stars and Stripes.

"I earnestly hope that war is not in question," said the President. "We do not desire to control Mexico. Our feelings for the people of that country are deep and genuine friendship. The people of Mexico are entitled to settle their own domestic affairs in their own way. We sincerely desire to respect their right. Mexico is torn by civil strife. Only a part of the country is under General Huerta's control.

"If armed conflict should unhappily come as an attitude of his personal resentment toward this government, we should be fighting only General Huerta and those who adhere to him, and give him support, and our object would be only to restore to the people of the distracted republic the opportunity to set up their own laws."

The President said there was no thought of aggression or aggrandizement on the part of the United States. He asked merely for approval of his own prerogative as commander in chief of the army and navy to order the two branches of the military service into action for the purpose of compelling President Huerta to salute the American flag.

WILSON GIVEN POWER TO USE ARMED FORCE BY HOUSE

Washington.—After a spirited debate of more than two hours the House passed the administration resolution, approving President Wilson's purpose to use the armed forces of the nation to obtain from General Huerta the fullest recognition of the honor and dignity of the United States.

The vote was 337 to 37.

Those who voted against the resolution in the House were:

Democrats—George, Kindel, Sisson, Stephens of Mississippi and Witherspoon—5.

Republicans — Airey, Anderson, Anthony, Bartholdt, Britten, Butler, Campbell, Davis, Fordney, French, Gardner, Gillett, Good, Hayes, Howell, Johnson of Utah, Johnson of Washington, Kahn, Langham, LaFollette, Madden, Mann, Mondell, Platt, Sells, Steenerson, Stephens of Minnesota, Volstead, Woods—29.

Progressives — Bell of California, Temple—2.

Independent—Kent—1.

VERA CRUZ BLOCKADED NO ARMS TO COME IN

Vera Cruz, Mexico—A blockade of this port was established by American ships. Admiral Fletcher has been notified that cargoes of war munitions expected from Europe must not be allowed to reach the Mexican government. No official notice of the blockade has been given, but it is understood that when the ships carrying the war munitions arrive their captains will be notified that it is advisable to make no effort to land the supplies.

TROOPS ORDERED TO CONCENTRATE

Washington. — Two brigades of artillery were ordered to concentrate along the Texas border. The artillery will be the first troops ordered across the border and the concentration of two brigades form the vanguard of the first troops rushed into Mexico.

General staff officers are busy rushing messages through to Gen. Tasker H. Bliss, commanding the Department of Texas.

AEROPLANES SHIPPED FROM PENSACOLA

Mobile, Ala.—The battleship Mississippi with a fleet of government aeroplanes on board sailed from Pensacola. Seven hundred marines accompanied the battleship and aeroplanes.

FORCES DRASTIC MEASURES

Efforts of American Government To Settle Differences Amicably Fail.

Washington. — General Victoriano Huerta, provisional president of Mexico, flatly refused to accede to the unconditional demands of the United States that he salute the American flag.

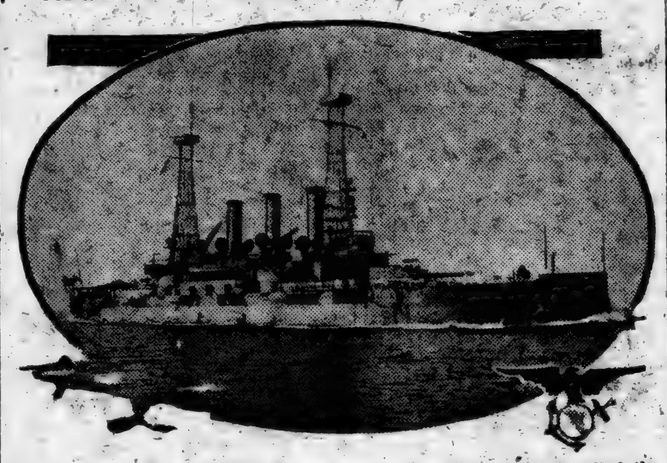
Negotiations with Huerta over the demand for a salute in reparation for the arrest of American bluejackets at Tampico on April 10, came to a close April 19 at 6 o'clock, the last hour given by President Wilson for a favorable response from the Mexican dictator. The final word of Huerta to Charge O'Shaugnessy was a refusal to comply unless the United States would guarantee in writing that his salute be returned.

Does not Necessarily Mean War.

The crisis thus reached does not mean that there will be a formal declaration of war, because the United States could not declare war against a government which it does not recognize. President Wilson will send armed forces into Mexico to seize first the ports of Tampico and Vera Cruz and the railroad trestle leading from Vera Cruz toward Mexico City.

The breach that finally has come with Mexico will make it impossible, it was declared on high authority, for the United States to further protect foreigners in that republic, and foreign governments have been notified of the situation in this regard.

Secretary Bryan issued this statement.



"A dispatch was received from Charge O'Shaughnessy saying that General Huerta was willing to accede to the demand of Admiral Mayo providing a protocol was signed and setting forth a copy of the proposed protocol. Charge O'Shaughnessy asked whether he was authorized to sign it. I communicated with President Wilson by telephone and at his direction sent a telegram to Mr. O'Shaughnessy, of which the following is a paraphrase:

"'Copy of your telegram was sent to the President with copy of my reply to the effect that a protocol would be objectionable. The President replied:

"'"Your reply to O'Shaughnessy is exactly what I should have wished it to be. In no case should any concession of any kind in detail or otherwise, be made."'

"At 10 o'clock a telegram was received from Charge O'Shaughnessy conveying General Huerta's final refusal.

ADMIRAL FLETCHER AND HIS FLAGSHIP

Rear Admiral Frank F. Fletcher, commanding the first division of the Atlantic fleet, has been stationed at Vera Cruz. The battleship Florida is his flagship.

ATLANTIC FLEET ON THE WAY TO TAMPICO

Here are some of the mighty battleships of the Atlantic fleet steaming at full speed for Tampico. Rear Admiral Badger, the commander, has orders to bombard that port, seize it or take any other measures which he may deem necessary.

IF WAR IS DECLARED SEVERAL ALABAMIANS WILL SEE SERVICE.

Should war be declared several of Alabama's native sons will see service. Alabamians who will figure in the naval demonstration against Mexico are Commander Raymond Stone, assigned to the battleship New Jersey, and appointed to Annapolis from Mobile, and Commander Richardson Harrison Jackson, a member of the general board, and appointed from Tuscumbia. On the battleship Michigan now steaming to Tampico is Lieutenant Commander Dunbar Mabon Wood, who was appointed to the academy from the Sixth district; David French Boyd was appointed from Alabama, but his residence is in Louisiana, where he was born. He is also a lieutenant commander and is connected with the bureau of steam engineers. With Commander Stone on the Michigan is Lieutenant Commander Hilary Herbert Bagwell, who received his appointment from the Sixth district; Lieutenant William B. Gaddis, appointed from Talladega, also is with the Pacific fleet and assigned to a cruiser. The navy department declares that he will probably be ordered into Mexican waters. Junior Officer Harold Jones of Alabama is connected with the Mare Island navy yard.

Lieutenant Robert Wright Cabaniss of Birmingham is at the Portsmouth navy yard. On the battleship North Dakota is Lieutenant Donald Bingham, appointed from Talladega. Forney Stokes Hare, appointed from Attalla, is a lieutenant.

WAR STRENGTH OF THE NAVY IN SOUTH

Washington.—Never before in the history of the nation has the strength of the navy been shown as it is in Mexican waters today. A greater percentage of fighting machines were assembled about Cuba in the war with Spain, but the navy of 1898 had not the fighting strength of the navy of today either in number of vessels, in tonnage or in gun caliber.

The war strength which the United States will have in Mexican waters within a few days to compel compliance with the demands of this government may thus be summarized:

On East Coast.		On West Coast.
Battleships	15	Transport	1
Cruisers	4	Mine depot ship	1

Destroyers	15	Hospital ship	1

This strength, if used for landing purposes, can be reinforced by troops, 15,000 of whom are along the border.

STATEMENT FROM PRESIDENT

Following is the official statement issued as representing the views of President Wilson and the administration on Mexico:

"In discussions in official circles in Washington of the present Mexican situation the following points have been very much dwelt upon:

"It has been pointed out that, in considering the present somewhat delicate situation in Mexico, the unpleasant incident at Tampico must not be thought of alone. For some time past the de facto government of Mexico has seemed to think mere apologies sufficient when the rights of American citizens or the dignity of the government of the United States were involved and has apparently made no attempt at either reparation or the effective correction of the serious depelictions of its civil and military officers.

Orderly Placed in Jail.

"Immediately after the incident at Tampico an orderly from one of the ships of the United States in the harbor of Vera Cruz, who had been sent ashore to the post office for the ship's mail, and who was in uniform and who had the official mail bag on his back, was arrested and put into jail by the local authorities. He was subsequently released and a nominal punishment was inflicted upon the officer who arrested him, but it was significant that an orderly from the fleet of the United States was picked out from the many persons constantly going ashore on various errands, from the various ships in the harbor, representing several nations.

Official Dispatch Withheld.

"Most serious of all, the officials in charge of the telegraph office at Mexico City presumed to withhold an official dispatch of the government of the United States to its embassy at Mexico City, until it should have been sent to the censor and his permission received to deliver it, and gave the dispatch into the hands of the charge d'affaires of the United States only upon his personal and emphatic demand, he having in the meantime learned, through other channels that a dispatch had been sent him, which he had not received.

United States Slighted Once.

"A cadet but strike anything when one watched the course of events in Mexico as significant that quickly incidents such as these have not occurred in any case where representatives of other governments were concerned, but only in dealings with representatives of the United States, and that there has been no occasion for other governments to call attention to such matters or to ask for apologies.

"These repeated offenses against the rights and dignity of the United States, offenses not duplicated with regard to the representatives of other governments, have necessarily made the impression that the government of the United States was singled out for manifestations of ill will and contempt."

Many Precedents for Action.

The president feels that he has ample authority for the preparatory measures he has adopted.

President McKinley went so far as to send an expedition to Peking during the Boxer revolt.

In 1851 the United States sloop of war Dale visited the island of Johanna and under threat of bombarding the town obtained $1,000 as a measure of redress for the unlawful imprisonment of the captain of an American whaler.

In 1863 the Pembroke, a small American steamer, was fired upon by Japanese shore batteries. The American minister demanded redress for the insult to the American flag, and the commander of the United States warship Wyoming opened fire on the responsible Japanese authorities.

Example Set by Seward.

Secretary of State Seward in an official note made the following statement, apropos of this incident:

"When the injury involves also an insult to the flag of the United States the demand for satisfaction must be imperative, and the United States naval force at Japan may not only be used to protect the legation and any of the citizens of the United States there resident but the Tycoon is to be informed that the United States will as they shall find occasion, send additional forces to maintain the foregoing demands."

What President Wilson is doing is in line with the recorded precedents. He has demonstrated and satisfaction has been refused. He is about to make a naval demonstration. As Jefferson said, speak softly and carry a big stick.

Rattled by Court Proceedings.

An elderly man of the farming type was called as a witness in the Belfast summons court, and the clerk, proceeding to administer the oath, told him to repeat "I swear by Almighty God that the evidence," etc.

The old fellow was a little excited, however, by being in court, and instead of following the words of the clerk, began amid loud laughter to repeat the words of the well-known hymn, "O God, our help in ages past."

These pills stimulate the Liver and Bowels without that weakening after effect which Calomel causes. Sold by dealers 25c. bottle. Sample mailed free on request. The G. B. Williams Co., Quitman, Ga.—Adv.

Cynicism.

Richard Croker, nearly everybody knows, has a cynical wit. Mr. Croker aired this wit in a recent letter to a member of Tammany hall apropos of a millionaire's charities.

"To be canonized in American public opinion," he wrote, "give publicly and steal privately."

The VALIANTS of VIRGINIA

By HALLIE ERMINIE RIVES

ILLUSTRATIONS by LAUREN STOUT

COPYRIGHT BY BOBBS-MERRILL COMPANY

SYNOPSIS.

John Valiant, a rich society favorite, suddenly discovers that the Valiant corporation, which his father founded and which was the principal source of his wealth, has failed. He voluntarily turns over his private fortune to the receiver for the corporation. His entire remaining possessions consist of an old motor car, a white bull dog and Damory court, a neglected estate in Virginia. On the way to Damory court he meets Shirley Dandridge, an auburn-haired beauty, and decides that he is going to like Virginia immensely. Shirley's mother, Mrs. Dandridge, and Major Bristow exchange reminiscences during which it is revealed that the major, Valiant's father, and a man named Sasson were rivals for the hand of Mrs. Dandridge in her youth. Sasson and Valiant fought a duel on her account in which the former was killed. Valiant finds Damory court overgrown with weeds and creepers and the buildings in a very much neglected condition. He decides to rehabilitate the place and make the land produce a living for him. Valiant saves Shirley from the bite of a snake, which bites him. Knowing the deadliness of the bite, Shirley sucks the poison from the wound and saves his life. Shirley tells her mother of the incident and the latter is strangely moved at hearing that a Valiant is again living at Damory court. Valiant learns for the first time that his father left Virginia on account of a duel in which Doctor Southall and Major Bristow acted as his father's seconds. Valiant and Shirley become good friends. Mrs. Dandridge faints when she first meets Valiant.

CHAPTER XIX—Continued.

He sat down on a mossed boulder, breathless, his eyes sparkling. He had thought himself almost a beggar, and here in his hand was a small fortune! "Talk about engagement rings!" he muttered. "Why, a dozen of these ought to buy a whole tiara!"

At length he rose and climbed on, presently turning at a right-angle to bisect the strip to its boundary before he paused to rest. "I'm no timber-cruiser," he said to himself as he wiped his brow, "but I calculate there are all of three hundred trees big enough to cut. Why, suppose they are worth on an average only a hundred apiece. That would make—Good lord!" he muttered, "and I've been mooning about poverty!"

The growth was smaller and sparser now and before long he came, on the hill's very crest, to the edge of a ragged clearing. It held a squalid settlement, perhaps a score of dirt-daubed cabins little better than hovels, some of them mere mud-walled lean-tos, with sod roofs and window-panes of flour-sacking. Fences and outhouses there was none. Littered paths rambled aimlessly hither and thither from chip-strewn yards to starved patches of corn, under-cultivated and blighted. Over the whole place hung an indescribable atmosphere of disconsolate filth, of unredeemed squalor and vileness.

With one hand on the dog's collar, hushing him to silence, Valiant, unseen, looked at the wretched place with a shiver. He had glimpsed many wretched purlieus in the slums of great cities, but this, in the open sunlight, with the clean woods about it and the sweet clear blue above, stood out with an unrelieved boldness and contrast that was doubly sinister and forbidding. He knew instantly that the tawdry corner was the community known as Hell's-Half-Acre, the place to which Shirley had made her night ride to rescue Rickey Snyder.

A quick glad realisation of her courage rushed through him. On its heels came a feeling of shame that a spot like this could exist, a foul blot on such a landscape. It was on his own land! Its denizens held place by squatter sovereignty, but he was, nevertheless, their landlord. The thought bred a new sense of responsibility. Something should be done for them, too.

As he gazed, an uproar in a cabin reached a climax. A red-bearded figure in nondescript garments shot from the door and collapsed in a heap in the dirt. He got up with a dreadful oath—a jug thrown at him grazing his temple as he did so—and shaking his fist behind him, staggered into a near-by lean-to.

Valiant turned away with a feeling almost of nausea, and plunged back down the forest hillside.

CHAPTER XX.

The Gardeners.

He saw them coming through the gate on the Red Road—the major and Shirley in a lilac muslin by his side—and strode to meet them. Behind them Ranston propelled a hand-cart filled with paper bundles from each of which protruded a bunch of flowering stems. There was a flush in Shirley's cheek as her hand lay in Valiant's. As for him, his eyes, like a wilful drunkards, returned again and again, between the major's compliments, to her face.

"You have accomplished wonders, sah! I had no idea so much could be done in such a limited time. You have certainly primped the old place up. I could almost think I was looking at Damory Court in the sixties, sah!"

"That's quite the nicest thing you could have said, Major," responded Valiant. "But it needs the flowers." He looked at Shirley with sparkling eyes. "How splendid of you to bring them! I feel like a robber."

"With our bushels of them? We shall never miss them at all. Have you set out the others?"

"I have, indeed. Every one that wanted, too. You shall see them." He led the way up the drive till they stood before the porch.

"Gad!" chuckled the major. "Who would think it had been unoccupied for three decades? At this rate, you'll soon be giving dances, sah."

"Ah," said Valiant. "That's the very thing I want to suggest. The tournament comes off next week, I understand, and it's been the custom to have a ball that night. The tourney ground is on this estate, and Damory Court is handier than the Country Club. Why wouldn't it be appropriate to hold the dance here? The ground-floor rooms are in order, and if the young people would put up with it, it would be a great pleasure to me, I assure you."

"Oh!" breathed Shirley. "That would be too wonderful!"

The major seized his hand and shook it heartily. "I can answer for the committee," he said. "They'll jump at it. Why, sah, the new generation has never set eyes inside the house. It's a golden legend to them."

"Then I'll go ahead with arrangements."

He led them around the house and down the terraces of the formal garden, and here the major's encomiums broke forth again. "You are going to take us old folks back, sah," he said with real feeling. "This gyarden in its original lines was unique. It had a piquancy and a picturesqueness that, thank God, are to be restored! One can understand the owner of an estate like this having no desire to spend his life philandering abroad. We all hope, sah, that you will recur to the habit of your ancestors and count Damory Court home."

Valiant smiled slowly. "I don't dream of anything else," he said. "My life, as I map it out, seems to begin here. The rest doesn't count—only the years when I was little and had my father."

The major carefully adjusted his eye-glasses. His head was turned away. "Ah, yes," he said.

"The last twenty years," continued the other, "from my present viewpoint, are valuable mainly for contrast."

"As a consistent regimen of pate de foie gras," said Shirley quizzically, "makes one value bread and butter?"

He shook his head at her. "As starvation makes one appreciate plenty. The next twenty years are to be here. But they hold side-trips, too. Now and then there's a jaunt back to the city."

"Contrast again?" she asked interestedly.

"Yes and no. Yes, because no one who has ever known that blazing clanging life can really understand the peace and blessedness of a place like this. No, because there are somethings which are to be found only there. There are the galleries and the opera. I need a breath of them both."

"And semi-occasional longer flights, too," the major reflected. "A look-see abroad once in a blue moon. Why not?"

"Yes. For mental photographs—impressions one can't get from between book-covers. There's an old cloister garden I know in Italy and a particular river-bank in Japan in the cherry-blossom season, and a tiny island with a Greek castle on it in the Aegean. Little colored memories for me to bring away to dream over. But always I come back here to Damory Court. For this is—home!"

They walked beneath the pergola to the lake, where Shirley gave a cry of delight at sight of its feathered population. "Where did you get them from?" she asked.

"Washington. In crates."

"That explains it," she exclaimed. "One day last week the little darkies in the village all insisted a circus was coming. They must have seen these being hauled here. They watched the whole afternoon for the elephants."

"Poor youngsters!" he said. "It's a shame to fool them. But I've had all the circus I want getting the live stock installed."

"They won't suffer," said the major. "Rickey Snyder'll get them up a three-ringed show on the side of a hat and drop it portsail. Reckon there's tourists around our country that they can live on that [illegible]"

"Yes. I take my dip here every morning."

"We used to have a diving-board when we were little shavers," pursued the major. "I remember once, your father—"

He cleared his throat and stopped dead.

"Please," said John Valiant, "I—I like to hear about him."

"It was only that I struck my head on a rock on the bottom and—stayed down. The others were frightened, but he—he dove down again and again till he brought me out. It was a narrow squeak, I reckon."

A silence fell. Looking at the tall muscular form beside her, Shirley had a sudden vision of a determined little body cleaving the dark water, over and over, now rising panting for breath, now plunging again, never giving up. And she told herself that the son was the same sort. That hard set of the jaw, those firm lips, would know no flinching. He might suffer, but he would be strong.

Half unconsciously she spoke her thought aloud: "You look like your father, do you not?"

"Yes," he replied, "there's a strong likeness. I have a photograph which I'll show you sometime. But how did you know?"

"Perhaps I only guessed," she said in some confusion. To cover this she stooped by the pebbly marge and held out her hand to the bronze ducks that pushed and gobbled about her fingers. "What have you named them?" she asked.

"Nothing. You christen them."

"Very well. The light one shall be Peezietree and the dark one Pilgarlic. I got the names from John Jasper—he was Virginia's famous negro preacher. I once heard him hold forth when he read from one of the Psalms—the one about the harp and the psaltery—and he called it peezietree."

Valiant's laugh rang out over the lake—to be answered by a sudden sharp screech from the terrace, where the peacock strutted, a blaze of spangled purple and gold. They turned to see Aunt Daphne issue from the kitchen, twig-broom in hand.

"Heah!" she exclaimed. "What fo' yo' kyahin' on like er wil' gyraff we'n we got comp'ny, yo' trifflin' ol' fantail, yo! Git outen heah!" She waved her weapon and the bird, with a raucous shriek of defiance, retired in ruffled disorder. The master of Damory Court looked at Shirley. "What shall we name him?"

"I'd call him Fire-Cracker if he goes off like that," she said. And Fire-Cracker the bird was christened forthwith.

"And now," said Shirley, "let's set out the ramblers."

The major had brought a rough plan, sketched from memory, of the old arrangement of the formal garden. "I'll just go over the lines of the beds with Unc' Jefferson," he proposed, "while you two potter over these roses." So Valiant and Shirley walked back up the slope beneath the pergola together.

With Ranston, puffing and blowing like a black porpoise over his creaking go-cart, they planted the ramblers—crimson and pink and white—Valiant much of the time on his knees, his hands plunging deep into the black spongy earth, and Shirley with broad hat flung on the grass, her fingers separating the clinging thread-like roots and her small arched foot tamping down the soil about them. Her hair—the color of wet raw wood in the sunlight—was very near the brown head and sometimes their fingers touched over the work. Once, as they stood up, flushed with the exercise, a great black and orange butterfly, dazed with the sun-glow, alighted on Valiant's rolled-up sleeve. He held his arm perfectly still and blew gently on the wavering pinions till it swam away. When a redbird flirted by, to his delight she whistled its call so perfectly that it wheeled in mid-flight and tilted inquiringly back toward them.

As they descended the terrace again to the pergola, he said, "There's only one thing lacking at Damory Court—a sun-dial."

"Then you haven't found it?" she cried delightedly. "Come and let me show you."

She led the way through the mass of beds at one side till they reached a hedge laced thickly with Virginia creeper. He parted this leafy screen, bending back the springing fronds that thrust against the flimsy muslin of her gown and threatened to spear the pink-rosed hat that cast an adorable warm tint over her creamy face, thinking that never had the old place seen such a picture as she made framed in the deep green.

Some such thought was in the major's mind, too, as he came slowly up the terrace below. He paused, to take off his hat and wipe his brow.

"With the place all fixed up this way," he sighed to himself, "I could believe it was only last week that Beauty Valiant and Southall and I were boys, loafing around this same dear old [illegible] Why, it seems like [illegible] they were [illegible] [illegible] [illegible]

CLANTON AND THORSBY SPLIT DOUBLE HEADER

The opening game between Clanton and Thorsby was played at Thorsby Saturday, Clanton taking the morning game by a score of five to four. Features of the first game were the pitching of Rockett and the batting of Wyatt, who got four three base hits.

The afternoon game was one of the most thrilling games Thorsby ever witnessed. Clanton held the home team down, the score being one and nothing until the ninth, when Thorsby succeeded in crossing the plate twice, making the final score two and one in Thorsby's favor.

Clanton second nine hopes to progress under the management of Mr. Courtney Harper.

Batteries: First game, Rockett and Palmer; Sims and Robinson. Second game, Marcus and Eubanks; Sims and Robinson.

IN MEMORY:

On Saturday afternoon, the fourth, the death angels visited the home of Mr. Leonard Martin and took from him his beloved wife, Hattie, whom God saw fit to remove from this world to a brighter world above. She had been sick only a short while when God sent his angels "bidding her come up higher." She was a beloved wife, a faithful mother and Christian. She leaves a husband and three little children, the youngest being only weeks of age, and a host of friends and relatives to mourn her loss.

Grieve not, Leonard, for we know she is resting with the angels. She is done with this world of sorrow and has gone to live with God, our Father, in that Beautiful Beyond.

We should not grieve after her, but strive to meet her "up yonder" where there will be "No more parting and where we shall have everlasting life. We ought not to mourn, for it was God's will to carry her home. He said "Come unto me Hattie, for I have prepared a place for you, where ye shall dwell in the house of the Lord forever."

All who knew her loved her, and that's a great consolation.

She was laid to rest in Collins Chapel cemetery on Sunday afternoon, April 5th, Rev. Monroe Honeycutt conducting the funeral.

We extend our heartfelt sympathy to the bereaved husband in this hour of grief.

PUBLISHED IN THE INTEREST OF CHILTON COUNTY AND HER PEOPLE

VOL 5. CLANTON, ALA., THURSDAY APRIL 30, 1914 NO. 4

Probate Judge

Henderson Meeting

Hon. David W. W. Fuller Addresses Voters at Thorsby.

The speaker was introduced by Lawrence H. Gerald, in a few well chosen remarks. The house was well filled with an appreciative audience and Mr. Fuller delved at once in presenting a strong argument in favor of Mr. Henderson, speaking as follows:—

Mr. Chairman, Ladies and Gentlemen:

The people of Alabama are in the midst of a heated campaign. A leader is about to be chosen, and a policy of government is about to be established. These are matters of the first concern to every loyal son of this Grand Old State. We pride ourselves on our independence, on our patriotism, our loyalty and devotion to the State and to the principles of good government; we are a people who have confidence in ourselves, and we believe in the principles of the good old Jeffersonian Democracy. And now it is of vital concern that in this heated controversy we should not be swept off our guard and blinded to the real issue, and the far-reaching consequences of a wrong selection.

Alabama is one of the richest of the States, both in her material resources, and in her citizenship. As she heads the column alphabetically, so should she head the column in many other respects. Our splendid mineral wealth has attracted the notice of the world; our marble quarries are known across the waters; her water powers are of more than national note; we have within our borders largely in undeveloped form the greatest possibilities in agriculture, horticulture, stock raising, and the kindred lines of industry; there is not a more promising field for the manufacturer in many lines. All this vast splendor of wealth and material prosperity is just in the bedding.

The conduct of the affairs of State with us for the next few years are of prime importance to every citizen, and to our children who will follow us. And so I say in this crucial hour we must be brave and strong and fearless, and patriotically choose for the permanent welfare of our people.

Alabama needs a Governor. She needs a strong, clean, progressive, constructive statesman at the head of her government, and she needs the policies of such a man and such an administration to guide and direct the ship of State into the paths of peace and progress, the portals of prosperity and of material development, and we believe we have such a man in the person of our beloved champion, the Honorable Charles Henderson, of Troy, in whose name I come to address you.

I want to tell you something about this man. I am here as his representative in a way. He did not send me. I volunteered to come, and gladly, too. It is a pleasure to speak a word at any time in the name of a good, strong, noble, manly man. And I esteem it a rare privilege to greet you in his name at this time. He is what I call a broad-guage, level-headed, patriotic, constructive statesman. He is that sort of a man whose tendency is to build up, to improve, to create the substantial and the good in life. His record at the head of the Railroad Commission has shown him to be clear in mind, forceful in expression, patriotic in spirit, and devoted to duty. He has not the same gift of speech and eloquence that some men possess, but he has what is more valuable—the ability to successfully cope with great business problems, such as abundantly confront the great State of Alabama, and will continue to confront her for all time. He is a business man of rare ability. He is a man of action, a man of deed, rather than a man of words. He is unfettered by political pledges to individuals, pledged only to serve the State in a bold, fearless, business-like manner.

At a conference of the friends of Walter D. Seed, Reuben F. Kolb and Charles Henderson, candidates for governor in the primary election, April 6th, held in Montgomery April 11th and attended by over four hundred representative democrats from all over Alabama, the following resolutions were unanimously adopted:

The verdict of the people as expressed in the primary last Monday was a clear and unmistakable repudiation of Comer and Comerism.

The campaign he conducted was pitched on a lower plane than was ever before known in our political history.

He offered to the people no program of constructive or progressive legislation, but in his efforts to gain power, appealed to prejudice and passion.

Claiming to be the implacable foe of the selfish interest, no man who ever sought the office of Governor was more consistently their servile and pliant tool. His campaign was supported by favor-seeking corporations, by those hoping through his election to secure exemption from taxation and special privileges.

And, although an overwhelming majority of the Democrats of Alabama declined to support his candidacy, he still persists in his efforts to mislead the people and again seeks their support.

Therefore be it Resolved, by representatives who supported Walter D. Seed, Reuben F. Kolb, and Charles Henderson in the recent primary in conference assembled:

1st. That we are unalterably opposed to the candidacy of B. B. Comer. His nomination and election would mean another four years of waste and extravagance, of business and political unrest. It would check investments, stop the wheels of industrial progress and put the State under the control of a political ring whom the people scourged from power four years ago.

2nd. We oppose B. B. Comer because during the whole course of his former administration he never wrote a single statute progressive in its character or inspired by a desire to secure greater social justice or equality of opportunity to the toiling masses of our people. It was through the efforts of B. B. Comer that Alabama today occupies the unenviable and humiliating position of being one of the three States in the Union that permits the life, health and intelligence of little children to be coined into gold to swell the dividends of the cotton mill owners of the State.

3rd. We oppose B. B. Comer because he has constantly opposed the demands for social justice for the toilers in our mines, our mills and our factories for better hygienic and sanitary protection and safeguards and for reasonable hours of labor.

4th. We oppose him because he has been the unrelenting foe of labor and as Governor, without warrant of law, by an act as arbitrary and despotic as ever disgraced the annals of a free people, drove the striking miners in the Birmingham district from their homes, and denied to a large class of our people their legal and constitutional rights.

5th. We oppose him because he secured the passage of laws which allowed the revenues of the Convict Department to be placed in the hands of an official without bond, and to be withheld for three months at a time from the State Treasury, and because of his own legislation, the Lacy defalcation was made possible.

6th. We oppose him because this legislation was not in the interests of the people, but appears to have been for selfish, personal purposes.

7th. We oppose him, because claiming to favor the rule of the people, he sought by all the means in his power to overthrow the time-honored Democratic principles of majority rule to gratify his own selfish ambitions.

8th. We oppose him because of the record of his administration shows that he sought to exempt from taxation certain industries for his own personal benefit and to vest in our common carriers the right to discriminate in their rates in his own favor and in favor of certain favored industries.

9th. We oppose him because he filled our statute books with laws inspired by a spirit of hostility and which were subsequently nullified by the decisions of the Supreme Court of the United States.

10th. We oppose him because, if elected, he would not be the Governor of the people, but the chief of a political faction, and would use the powers of his great office, not to promote the interests of the people of Alabama but to build up a political machine and to advance his own selfish ambitions.

11th. We oppose him because he is unfit by temperament to fill this office; and because he would be willing to plunge the State into another four years of turmoil and bitter agitation and check our growing prosperity in order to punish his political enemies and advance the personal fortunes of his political adherents.

12th. We oppose him because he has denounced every former friend whose aspirations crossed the pathway of his ambition, and because he has sought by abuse, slander and mis-representation to conceal his own vulnerable record and ride into power on a campaign of false pretense, hypocrisy and slander.

13th. We oppose him because he has unwisely dissipated the millions of dollars left in our State Treasury by former Governor Jelks; because he has increased our taxes and because his former administration was characterized by a deplorable lack of business capacity and efficiency.

14th. We oppose him because he seeks office not to promote needed reform, to improve the efficiency of government but to punish his political enemies, and to build up a Comer machine and to exploit the office of Governor for his own personal use and to gratify an ambition which is not justifyed by his record or his ability.

We therefore, present to the people of Alabama as our choice a man who is self-poised, whose business ability has been demonstrated, who fully understands the needs of our people, who is wisely progressive, who is not under the domination of the special interests whose vote in his own county attests the confidence of the people who know him best, and who would give Alabama a wise, efficient and economical administration.

The State has had enough of agitation, bitterness and strife. Our people desire to devote their attentions to building up the great resources of the State, reducing the expenses of State government, reforming our judiciary, increasing the power of the courts and preventing reversals in criminal cases on technical errors; making punishment of the guilty more swift and certain, and making human life and liberty as safe and secure in Alabama as in the most advanced State of the Union.

With the election of Chas. Henderson the State will enter into a new era of progress and advancement. He has never yet sought to coin into political capital the crime of those who looted the State Treasury, nor has he ever negotiated with criminals, nor will he make the pardoning power a political asset.

The people of Alabama are fortunate in having the opportunity to vote for a man who represents so thoroughly such lofty ideals and whose election will guarantee political progress and prosperity for the affairs of the State.

And we pledge him our loyal support.

Already the people of the State have given expression to their views in the first primary election, which was held on the 6th of this present month; we take the result of that election to mean that the majority of our people are sound Jeffersonian Democrats; that the majority of our people are against a policy of government which will plunge the State into an era of further turmoil, strife and extravagance. We believe the people are now ready to get together on the 11th of May and place in power the man of the hour; the man who stands for fairness and justice to all classes of our citizenship, the man who comes to us with a clean, pure record, and a character without spot or stain, the man who openly and clearly announces his position upon every live issue and upon all salient questions affecting our concerns. And we believe we are justified in this belief by the many reports from all over the State to this effect. Many indeed are the expressions justifying our position. The monster rally, or conference, of the supporters of the Hon. Reuben F. Kolb, the Hon. Walter D. Seed, and the Hon. Charles Henderson, held at Montgomery on the 11th inst., and the personnel of that meeting, and the resolutions which were passed with such great enthusiasm by that magnificent body of gentlemen, justify us in the belief that the great body of Alabama Democracy are opposed to turbulence and demagoguery, and will insist upon a high-toned administration of the affairs of State, and to that end, will roll up, on the 11th of May, a magnificent majority for the Hon. Charles Henderson. Let the resolutions speak for themselves. I quote in part from them. (QUOTE.) This is the same convention which has been referred to by the opposition as that bunch of "Old Soaks." Yet I beg that you note the character of men that were there. I mention a few of them, that you may determine for yourselves whether they were "soaks," as stated, or whether they are of our best citizenship. I do not attempt to name them all, just a few.

There was Gen. George P. Harrison, of Opelika, a gallant Confederate soldier, a high-toned, clean Southern gentleman, and a lawyer of fine ability. Well known as one of the substantial men of the State.

There was the Hon. F. Loyd Tate, of Elmore county, stumping the State at this time for Henderson. A man of personal purity, and a staunch Democrat.

There was Captain Reuben F. Kolb, a magnificent man, long in the political life of the State, and a man too well known to need comment, whose gallantry as a soldier is known to all men.

Major V. B. Atkins, of Selma, was one of the men.

So was also Major James B. Ellis, manager of Mallory's campaign in 1910.

Also Ross Blackmon, of Calhoun; T. S. Frazier, of Bullock; Rev. Dr. Jordan, of Clay; R. R. Poole, of Perry; Frank S. Moody, of Tuscaloosa, "The Father of Temperance;" and Hon. F. G. Salter, of Montgomery.

Judging from the general reports of the press, these are fair representatives of those participating in that monster gathering.

The general tendency of the opposition to use invective, to attempt to malign whosoever may oppose them, and to apply coarse adjectives to all who may differ with them, will not be received by thinking people, and does not commend itself nor the cause.

And while I am not inclined to unduly criticise the present or past administrations and feel that a "mud-slinging" campaign is of little service or benefit to anyone, yet we must profit by the mistakes of the past, and we must judge trees by their fruit, and it is impossible to dwell upon our past few years' history without feeling that our State affairs have not been administered to the best advantage, to put it mildly.

It is up to us now to choose between Mr. Comer and Mr. Henderson; between, rather, the policies of the two men. And now, without going into a vast amount of statistics, and quoting figures which neither you nor I could carry long enough in our mind to justify the patience necessary to hear them, I want briefly to compare the government to be expected under these respective leaders; then you this day where you will

MAPLESVILLE MAN ENDORSES COMER

Maplesville, Ala., April 27, '14

To the Voters of Chilton County:

I was, up to the time of our April primary, a supporter of Walter D. Seed for governor, but since his defeat I am for B. B. Comer. I was an admirer of Mr. Comer but owing to the fact that I have always stood for prohibition I supported Mr. Seed. I have always been opposed to B. B. Comer until he served our State as governor and did so much for our dear old State. It will be remembered that during Governor Comer's administration he went over the State from time to time and spoke in conventions and churches on religious subjects, and this was something entirely new for a governor of our State.

There is not a county in the State that has not felt the helping hand of the Comer administration; there is not a school district that has not had the help that wanted it, and those counties that have been fortunate enough to have a high school are wonderfully blessed educationally. We have been helped in the way of better railroad service and lower rates. Statistics show that we have fewer railroad accidents, and every time we ride on a train we save one-half cent per mile. While our rates are much lower than they were before Mr. Comer was in office, yet they are much higher than Georgia has had for years and there is no reason that we should pay more than others. With the boll weevil sure to come, we will have to make something besides cotton, and we will never be able to compete with our neighbor states if we have to pay about double freight.

While Mr. Comer does not stand for State-wide prohibition we have a good majority in the Legislature and they can easily take care of that.

We believe that Mr. Comer will get practically all of the Seed vote here.

We have recently incorporated the town of Maplesville. Last Monday was election day with us. Dr. W. E. Kay was elected mayor without opposition. The following names were on the ticket for aldermen: R. Calloway, J. J. Hayes, Lester Parnell, John Edd Bearden, J. W. Foshee, Dr. Nix, R. P. Richardson and J. C. Merchant. The last five mentioned received the largest number of votes and will serve the first term as aldermen for the town of Maplesvile.

Rev. J. C. Hartzog has returned from the Sunday School Convention at Mobile, reporting a good time.

Mr. Duncan and wife, accompanied by Mrs. Callen of Clanton, were touring in our town Sunday.

The writer had the pleasure of visiting the church and Sunday school at Mulberry the third Sunday and presenting the work of the secondary division department. I will be glad to visit every district in the county before our July Convention.

With best wishes to the people of Chilton, I am

Yours very truly,
J. W. Mitchell.

DECORATION DAY AT SOLDIERS' HOME

Sunday Decoration day was fittingly observed at the Alabama Veterans' Home. Preparations were made on Saturday by Mrs. Carrie McMasters, Miss Virginia Brown, Mrs. Hubbard, Mrs. Chas. White and Mrs. Addie Howe for suitably arraying wreaths for the 150 graves.

Capt. J. M. Simpson introduced Capt. Fred S. Furguson, who delivered a splendid address as to the custom observed annually of strewing flowers and suitably remembering the men, now quiet in their graves, for their valor and courageous defense of our Southland during the years 1861-5.

A large number of Chilton county girls and winsome children were present and ready to carry the silent tokens of Spring flowers to the resting places "on the hill," where those who have died here at "the Home" are waiting until the time homes for them to "fall in line" with all good Christians and march through the pearly gates to meet their Maker.

Pleasant were the thoughts that played through the brain of the few remaining Veterans who witnessed the tender and heartfelt devotion of these people of today, after fifty years have passed, paying tribute to the memory of their —in life—faithful comrades.

Large quantities of flowers were received, notably the splendid lot sent by the Clanton ladies, collected by Mrs. Belle George and delivered here Sunday morning by Mr. J. Ousley Johnson. The flowers were loosely distributed by gentle hands in a silent, but expressive manner. Their odor, like lightning flashes, sped its way through space in sweet remembrance of the heroes of 1861-65.

DEATH OF MR. J. D. SIMMONS

Veteran John D. Simmons, aged 75 years, died on Wednesday and was buried in the Soldiers' Home cemetery on Thursday.

The deceased was an old gentleman of splendid character; gentle, kind and possessed a disposition that was truly fair to all with whom he had dealings; he was a Christian man, living a Christian life.

JEMISON

Is An Applicant For County High School

On account of the position taken by practically all of our citizens in regard to the Commissioners paying $4,000.00 to the school when located, we cannot with sincerity ask for that money to be given to us, and we will build such a building, or buildings, as may be required by the State without using the County's money.

We ask the co-operation and aid of every citizen in the county in helping us to get the school located at Jemison, and promise to keep faith with you by having the school opened on such a date as may be chosen for the scholastic year of 1914-15.

We have an ideal location for the school, being about 750 feet above sea-level [highest altitude of any town in the county] and we have never had a case of typhoid fever to originate in our town.

Thanking you for any consideration which you may show us, and assuring you that it will be duly appreciated by us, we are,

Respectfully,

RAILROADS CANCEL PASSENGER RATES

INTERSTATE COMMERCE COMMISSION REFUSES TO LEGALIZE JOINT TARIFF C, NO. 2.

WILL ISSUE NEW TARIFF

Will Change Entire Situation, It Is Stated—Advances and Reductions Will Be Cut.

Birmingham.—On account of the hundreds of advances in pasenger fares from Birmingham and other southeastern points to points west of the Mississippi river and in parts of Canada, made in Joint Tariff C No. 2, which went into effect February 1, the interstate commerce commission has refused to legalize the tariff, and it has now been canceled. At the time that the tariff went into effect, the entire passenger rate situation between the southeast and the entire country west of the Mississippi river was materially changed, as more than one thousand changes, both increases and reductions, were made. With the cancellation of this tariff, and also a supplement to it, which was to have gone into effect May 1, the rate situation is again changed.

Local railroad men were advised that the interstate commerce commission had declined to legalize Joint Tariff C No. 2, and also that, as a result, a new joint tariff would be issued in a few days, in which the rates would conform to the orders of the commission.

Another supplement received cancels Joint Tariff B No. 2, which covers all rates from the southeast to all points east of the Mississippi and north of the Ohio and Potomac rivers. Just why this tariff was cancelled was not stated; but it is believed to be the result of the many changes made in both interstate and intrastate rate situations in the recent past.

With the cancellation of the tariffs and from the issuance of new tariffs rates from Birmingham and other southeastern points to nearly every point of any consequence outside of the southeastern territory will be affected.

In the tariff which has been cancelled, rates from Birmingham and other southeastern points in practically every state west of the Mississippi river and to many points in southwestern Canada were either raised or lowered. Many of the advances were heavy, but so were the reductions.

The interstate commerce commission, however, declined to allow the roads to make the advances. The railroads at first issued a supplement to the tariff in which many of the advances were cut down. However, the interstate commerce commission was not satisfied with the reductions made in the supplement to Joint Tariff No. 2 and both the tariff and supplement were turned down by the commission.

Local railroad men say that though many advances in fares were made, the reductions in fares equalized the advances, in the main. The new tariff which is to be issued in a few days is expected to change the entire situation again, cuting down both advances and reductions.

DRAGGED TO DEATH BY HORSE.

Little Daughter of Marshall Farmer Dragged Half a Mile.

Gadsden.—Dragged by a terrified horse to her death was the awful fate of the 11-year-old daughter of Nathan Riggin, a prominent farmer residing near Warrenton, seven miles from Guntersville. The girl was holding a horse, which was grasing in the front yard. The rope was wound around her arm. The horse became frightened and started to run. The child was dragged for a half mile at its heels. When the little body was recovered, bones were broken, the clothing torn to shreds and the features were almost unrecognizable.

TWO KILLED IN MINES.

One Dies at Brilliant and at Acmar Mines in County.

Birmingham.—Report of a mine fatality at the Brilliant Coal Co. was received here by wire by the Chief State Mine Inspector. The man was killed by falling rock.

Another accident, reported to the State Mine Inspector was the death of Bonnie Copeland at the Acmar mines of the Alabama Fuel & Iron Co. Death caused by electrocution.

TIED TOE TO COW'S TAIL.

As a Result a Belgreen Child Loses Toe.

Russellville.—Two little girls of Clay Hamilton of Belgreen, near here, went out to milk a cow. The older was milking, while the younger, about 13 years of age, stood by. The one milking asked the other to hold the cow's tail, as she was being slashed in the face.

The sister took hold of the cow's tail and stood on a log behind the cow. The little girl was barefooted. She took a part of the switch of the tail and tied it around her big toe. Her sister finished milking and moved away, and the cow moved forward and jerked the girl's feet from under her and she fell backward.

That frightened the cow, and she ran over the lot, dragging the girl by the toe. Her sister ran to her and held up her head so that she would not be hurt about the head. The cow continued to run until the toe was pulled off at the third joint.

GOOD ROADS DAYS.

Secretary of Association Urges Observance of August 14 and 15.

Birmingham.—The Alabama Good Roads Association two years ago successfully inaugurated the movement to observe Good Roads Day, August 14-15. In accordance with the resolution, the Secretary of the association, has commenced a campaign with the Probate Judges, Mayors, good roads officials and good roads organizations urging them to take steps at once to observe these days.

IRON AND STEEL CONTINUES DULL

Leading Industries Note Little Change From Preceding Week.

New York.—Bradstreet's weekly review of trade says:

Aside from an improvement noted in retail trade west, northwest and southwest, the result of warmer, more spring-like weather and flattering early crop prospects, trade and industry generally has not shown any particular change this week.

Indeed the quiet or irregular conditions heretofore ruling have been rather accentuated by the uncertainty even as to the outlook for war or peace and aside from a slight, apparently temporary flip given commodity prices and some bear drives against prices of securities, the situation broadly speaking, shows few new developments.

The leading industries note little change from preceding weeks. Iron and steel are dull as regards new business, as dull in fact, as for a long time past.

For the week: Failures, 319 against 273 last year; wheat exports, 2,764,910 against 3,494,924; bank clearings $3,586,195,000, an increase of 14.2 per cent.

ADVOCATE CHANGE IN CALENDAR

Commission to Recommend Invariable Calendar.

Paris. — Adoptoin of a perpetual invariable calendar and a fixed unchangeable date for Easter are to be recommended by the International Calendar Commission, which has been charged to study questions relating to the unification and simplification of the divisions of time. The commission, which was created by the International Association of Academies at St. Petersburg, will make a report on its work at a meeting to be held in Berlin.

Various reasons are given by advocates of the proposed reforms in calendars, among them the inconvenience caused by the variation of Easter, after the Julian and Gregorian calendars and other holidays.

M. Lecointe, director of the Royal Belgium observatory, one of the men interested, says the warmest partisans of the proposed reform are not Utopians, but practical men. They are, he says, financiers and business men.

M. Lecointe recalled that at a meeting of Chambers of Commerce the German delegates declared that German commerce lost millions of francs when Easter came in March. The two academic semesters, separated according to universal custom by Easter, are declared also to cause inconvenience in teaching, while spring vacations are apt to come during bad weather when Easter falls too soon.

As to the actual divisions of the year, it is true, say those interested that one is accustomed to the anomalies, but that it is nevertheless highly desirable to da away with them.

They call attention to the months having 28, 29, 30 or 31 days, trimesters with 90, 91 or 92 days, while the numbers of weeks included in the different trimesters, or in the two semesters, are unequal. Commercial complications and confusion under the present calendar are among the arguments of members of the commission. Practically all the academics voted in favor of the change, the academy of Amsterdam alone being against it.

The proposed reform in the calendar, however, depends on the decision of the religious authorities. The fixing of Easter is a question for the government of the church and it can be celebrated on a date determined by the pope.

AFFIDAVITS FAVOR LEO FRANK.

Three Affiants Seek to Fix Phagan Murder on Negro Jim Conley.

Atlanta, Ga. — Three affidavits seeking to fix guilt for the murder of Mary Phagan upon James Conley, negro factory sweeper, were submitted in Superior Court here. They were presented by attorneys for Leo M. Frank, under death sentence for the murder, in connection with a motion for a new trial on newly discovered evidence.

The hearings on the motion began yesterday and are expected to continue several days.

Two of the affidavits are signed by the Rev. C. S. Bragedale, pastor of a local church, and R. L. Barber. They allege that the affiants, while talking together on a street here several days after the murder, hear a negro confess dejectedly to another negro that he had killed Mary Phagan.

In his affidavit Barber further alleges that he recognized the negro who is said thus to have confessed as James Conley, whom he knew. The third affidavit is by Anna M. Carter, a negress, who alleges Conley confessed to her that he had committed the murder.

WOMAN COULD NOT SIT UP

Now Does Her Own Work. Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound Helped Her.

Ironton, Ohio.—"I am enjoying better health now than I have for twelve years. When I began to take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound I could not sit up. I had female troubles and was very nervous. I used the remedies a year and I can do my work and for the last eight months I have worked for other women, too. I cannot praise Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound enough for I know I never would have been as well if I had not taken it and I recommend it to suffering women."

Daughter Helped Also.

"I gave it to my daughter when she was thirteen years old. She was in school and was a nervous wreck, and could not sleep nights. Now she looks so healthy that even the doctor speaks of it. You can publish this letter if you like."—Mrs. RENA BOWMAN, 161 S. 10th Street, Ironton, Ohio.

Why will women continue to suffer day in and day out and drag out a sickly, half-hearted existence, missing three-fourths of the joy of living, when they can find health in Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound?

RAILROADS CANCEL PASSENGER RATES

INTERSTATE COMMERCE COMMISSION REFUSES TO LEGALIZE JOINT TARIFF C, NO. 2.

WILL ISSUE NEW TARIFF

Will Change Entire Situation, It Is Stated—Advances and Reductions Will Be Cut.

Birmingham.—On account of the hundreds of advances in pasenger fares from Birmingham and other southeastern points to points west of the Mississippi river and in parts of Canada, made in Joint Tariff C No. 2, which went into effect February 1, the interstate commerce commission has refused to legalize the tariff, and it has now been canceled. At the time that the tariff went into effect, the entire passenger rate situation between the southeast and the entire country west of the Mississippi river was materially changed, as more than one thousand changes, both increases and reductions, were made. With the cancellation of this tariff, and also a supplement to it, which was to have gone into effect May 1, the rate situation is again changed.

Local railroad men were advised that the interstate commerce commission had declined to legalize Joint Tariff C No. 2, and also that, as a result, a new joint tariff would be issued in a few days, in which the rates would conform to the orders of the commission.

Another supplement received cancels Joint Tariff B No. 2, which covers all rates from the southeast to all points east of the Mississippi and north of the Ohio and Potomac rivers. Just why this tariff was cancelled was not stated; but it is believed to be the result of the many changes made in both interstate and intrastate rate situations in the recent past.

With the cancellation of the tariffs and from the issuance of new tariffs rates from Birmingham and other southeastern points to nearly every point of any consequence outside of the southeastern territory will be affected.

In the tariff which has been cancelled, rates from Birmingham and other southeastern points in practically every state west of the Mississippi river and to many points in southwestern Canada were either raised or lowered. Many of the advances were heavy, but so were the reductions.

The interstate commerce commission, however, declined to allow the roads to make the advances. The railroads at first issued a supplement to the tariff in which many of the advances were cut down. However, the interstate commerce commission was not satisfied with the reductions made in the supplement to Joint Tariff No. 2 and both the tariff and supplement were turned down by the commission.

Local railroad men say that though many advances in fares were made, the reductions in fares equalized the advances, in the main. The new tariff which is to be issued in a few days is expected to change the entire situation again, cuting down both advances and reductions.

DRAGGED TO DEATH BY HORSE.

Little Daughter of Marshall Farmer Dragged Half a Mile.

Gadsden.—Dragged by a terrified horse to her death was the awful fate of the 11-year-old daughter of Nathan Riggin, a prominent farmer residing near Warrenton, seven miles from Guntersville. The girl was holding a horse, which was grazing in the front yard. The rope was wound around her arm. The horse became frightened and started to run. The child was dragged for a half mile at its heels. When the little body was recovered, bones were broken, the clothing torn to shreds and the features were almost unrecognizable.

TWO KILLED IN MINES.

One Each at Brilliant and at Acmar Mines in County.

Birmingham.—Report of a mine falling killed at the Brilliant Coal Co. was received here by wire by the Chief State Mine Inspector. The man was killed by falling rock.

Another accident reported to the State Mine Inspector was the death of Bonnie Copeland at the Acmar mines of the Alabama Fuel & Iron Co. Death caused by electrocution.

TIED TOE TO COW'S TAIL.

As a Result a Belgreen Child Loses Toe.

Russellville.—Two little girls of Clay Hamilton of Belgreen, near here, went out to milk a cow. The older was milking, while the younger, about 12 years of age, stood by. The one milking asked the other to hold the cow's tail, as she was being slashed in the face.

The sister took hold of the cow's tail and stood on a log behind the cow. The little girl was barefooted. She took a part of the switch of the tail and tied it around her big toe. Her sister finished milking and moved away, and the cow moved forward and jerked the girl's feet from under her and she fell backward.

That frightened the cow, and she ran over the lot, dragging the girl by the toe. Her sister ran to her and held up her head so that she would not be hurt about the head. The cow continued to run until the toe was pulled off at the third joint.

GOOD ROADS DAYS.

Secretary of Association Urges Observance of August 14 and 15.

Birmingham.—The Alabama Good Roads Association two years ago successfully inaugurated the movement to observe Good Roads Day, August 14-15. At the last meeting of the association resolutions were passed re-endorsing these days and urging the people to observe them this year. In accordance with the resolution, the Secretary of the association, has commenced a campaign with the Probate Judges, Mayors, good roads officials and good roads organizations urging them to take steps at once to observe these days.

IRON AND STEEL CONTINUES DULL

Leading Industries Note Little Change From Preceding Week.

New York.—Bradstreet's weekly review of trade says:

Aside from an improvement noted in retail trade west, northwest and southwest, the result of warmer, more spring-like weather and flattering early crop prospects, trade and industry generally has not shown any particular change this week.

Indeed the quiet or irregular conditions heretofore ruling have been rather accentuated by the uncertainty even as to the outlook for war or peace and aside from a slight, apparently temporary flip given commodity prices and some bear drives against prices of securities, the situation broadly speaking, shows few new developments.

The leading industries note little change from preceding weeks. Iron and steel are dull as regards new business, as dull in fact, as for a long time past.

For the week: Failures, 319 against 273 last year; wheat exports, 2,764,910 against 3,494,924; bank clearings $3,586,195,000, an increase of 14.2 per cent.

ADVOCATE CHANGE IN CALENDAR

Commission to Recommend Invariable Calendar.

Paris.—Adoption of a perpetual invariable calendar and a fixed unchangeable date for Easter are to be recommended by the International Calendar Commission, which has been charged to study questions relating to the unification and simplification of the divisions of time. The commission, which was created by the International Association of Academics at St. Petersburg, will make a report on its work at a meeting to be held in Berlin.

Various reasons are given by advocates of the proposed reforms in calendars, among them the inconvenience caused by the variation of Easter, after the Julian and Gregorian calendars and other holidays.

M. Lecointe, director of the Royal Belgium observatory, one of the men interested, says the warmest partisans of the proposed reform are not Utopians, but practical men. They are he says, financiers and business men.

M. Lecointe recalled that at a meeting of Chambers of Commerce the German delegates declared that German commerce lost millions of francs when Easter came in March. The two academic semesters, separated according to universal custom by Easter, are declared also to cause inconvenience in teaching, while spring vacations are apt to come during bad weather when Easter falls too soon.

As to the actual divisions of the year, it is true, say those interested that one is accustomed to the anomalies, but that it is nevertheless highly desirable to da away with them.

They call attention to the months having 28, 29, 30 or 31 days, trimesters with 90, 91 or 92 days, while the numbers of weeks included in the different trimesters, or in the two semesters, are unequal. Commercial complications and confusion under the present calendar are among the arguments of members of the commission. Practically all the academics voted in favor of the change, the academy of Amsterdam alone being against it.

The proposed reform in the calendar, however, depends on the decision of the religious authorities. The fixing of Easter is a question for the government of the church and it can be celebrated on a date determined by the pope.

AFFIDAVITS FAVOR LEO FRANK.

Three Atlanta Seek to Fix Phagan Murder on Negro Jim Conley.

Atlanta, Ga. — Three affidavits seeking to fix guilt for the murder of Mary Phagan upon James Conley, negro factory sweeper, were submitted in Superior Court here. They were presented by attorneys for Leo M. Frank, under death sentence for the murder, in connection with a motion for a new trial on newly discovered evidence.

The hearings on the motion began yesterday and are expected to continue several days.

Two of the affidavits are signed by the Rev. C. S. Bragsdale, pastor of a local church, and R. L. Barber. They allege that the affiants, while talking together on a street here several days after the murder, hear a negro confess dejectedly to another negro that he had killed Mary Phagan.

In his affidavit Barber further alleges that he recognized the negro who is said thus to have confessed as James Conley, whom he knew. The third affidavit is by Anna M. Carter, a negress, who alleges Conley confessed to her that he had committed the murder.

Pig Iron Industry Operated at Loss

New York. — The pig iron industry in the United States is being operated at a loss of a million dollars a month, according to the report of John Ashcroft, of Cleveland, chairman of the Southern Pig Iron Association, made at the general meeting of the organization here. The report said many furnaces have been shut down, thousands of pig iron workers are out of employment, and many companies have passed dividends. The report said the association has been unable to secure any advance in the price of pig iron.

ALABAMA'S HOPE FOR PROSPERITY
CHARLES HENDERSON FOR GOVERNOR

Reasons Given That Can But Appeal to the Patriotism and Sound Judgement of the Voters of Alabama in the Gubernatorial Contest.

TEN REASONS WHY HENDERSON SHOULD BE NOMINATED.

1st. Because he will administer the affairs of state patriotically, safely and economically.

2nd. Because he will veto any and all appropriations that tend to create a deficit or to raise the taxes of the people.

3rd. Because he is wisely progressive and will build up the state, foster her institutions and develop her material resources.

4th. Because he is self poised and in private enterprises has proven a success and has demonstrated his business ability.

5. Because he favors increased appropriations for the Confederate veteran.

6th. Because he advocates increased appropriations for the rural schools of Alabama.

7th. Because he will curtail the running expenses of the State by a retrenchment that will not lessen the efficiency of the public service.

8th. Because he will enforce ALL the laws and will bring criminals promptly to justice, thereby making life and property safe.

9th. Because he will demand that a law be passed placing ALL officials under bond and requiring daily settlements with the State Auditor.

10th. Because he will inaugurate an era of unexampled harmony, putting an end to agitation and secure for all the people that splendid progress and prosperity that all loyal Alabamians deserve.

TEN REASONS WHY COMER SHOULD NOT BE NOMINATED

1st. Because when he was inaugurated governor he found the State treasury full to overflowing and he left it bankrupt with fixed charges of $360,000 in excess of the income.

2nd. Because his election would mean four years of waste and extravagance and necessitate a further increase of the taxes of the people.

3rd. Because he is the unrelenting foe of labor.

4th. Because he offers no constructive program and appeals not to reason but to passion and prejudice.

5th. Because his candidacy is supported by favor seeking corporations of which he is the servile tool.

6th. Because he exempted from taxation certain corporate interests, thereby increasing the taxes of the less fortunate and less favored of our citizens.

7th. Because he approved a bill making it possible for the State treasury to be looted.

8th. Because for his personal benefit he sought to vest common carriers with the right to discrimnate in their rates.

9th. Because his temperament is such that he would be controlled by hatred and would not be governor of all the people, but of his own favored faction, ignoring Democrats of lifetime service and even shutting the door of courtesy in the faces of party adherents whose loyalty and zeal has made possible continuing Democratic victory.

10th. Because turmoil, agitation and strife would prevail, paralyzing development, checking investment of foreign capital in the State, stopping railroad construction and putting an end to business activity, thus causing Alabama to go backward instead of forward and business depression to supplant prosperity.

ALABAMA'S SERIOUS MENACE
BRAXTON BRAGG COMER

Mr. Comer increased expenditures in four years, compared with the four years just preceding his administration, an amount far in excess of the State's total expenditures any two years of its previous history, since the days of Houston.

In the past two years, compared with the two years just preceding, taxes have been increased 16 per cent.

In the past two years, compared with the two years just preceding, expenditures have been increased 10 per cent.

Titta Ruffo's Important Views.

A piece of baked macaroni trying to stand upright. That is the definition of the modern American woman given to a Denver newspaper reporter by Titta Ruffo of the Chicago Grand Opera company.

"It ees like a piece of cooked macaroni making effort to stand upright," he said with an air of disgust. "In Eet-aly the women are beeg. Only beeg women are beautiful.

"The American woman is very chic and it is good for her to be a suffragette. It is nice for woman to rule man in America. In Eet-aly it is not so nice."

SHE OFTEN PRAYED TO DIE

But Friend Comes to Rescue With Some Sound Advice, which was Followed with Gratifying Results.

Nettleton, Ark.—"My troubles date back five years," says Mrs. Mary Bentley, of this town. "I was first taken with awful pains in my right side, headache, and backache. The pain from my side seemed to move down my right limb, and settled in the right knee. Then it would move back, and once a month I would almost die with pain.

I was told I had tumor, and would have to undergo an operation at once. It just seemed I could not submit to it. I often prayed to die. It seemed that nothing would give me the desired relief, until finally, I was advised by a friend to try Cardui, and it is undoubtedly curing me. I have only used three and a half bottles, and it is a pleasure to tell of the beneficial results.

I shall ever spread the good tidings of what Cardui has done for me, and will do for other suffering ladies, if they will only try it."

You can depend on Cardui, because Cardui is a gentle, harmless, vegetable tonic, that can do you nothing but good.

Prepared from herbal ingredients, Cardui has a specific effect on the womanly constitution and puts strength where it is most needed.

Country Owes Much to Men Who Safeguard the Vast Commerce of the Nation.

A lightship must keep always in one particular spot. Anchored to the bottom of the sea, she has her steam always up, but she never sails unless relieved by another ship so that she may put into port for repairs. And such a boat is used because a warning must be given at a place where it is impossible to build a lighthouse, and where even the clamor of a gigantic bell buoy is not sufficient to warn the navigator. No matter how fiercely the storm beats or how desperate may be the boat's plight, she must stay at her moorings. The only movement she is allowed to make under the regulations is to sink when at last she can withstand the gale no longer. It would bring them deserved recognition if the government ever published a list of those who have lost their lives in the line of such perilous duty. For about $6,000,000 a year these men and their craft save from disaster the billions of dollars' worth of shipping and commerce that come to American shores. —The Popular Magazine.

PAINFUL ECZEMA ON HANDS

Bienville, La.—"I was troubled with eczema in my hands for several years. They would heal a little and then they would get worse than ever again. They were very painful. The eczema got to breaking out on my arms in pimples which itched and burned very badly.

Plea for the Hen.

I should like to see the hen on a plane, at least, with the turkey and the goose.

She is their superior in every way except of that size, and yet they have long held the place of honor on the Christmas and the Thanksgiving dinner table, and they have had reams and reams of poetry written about them.

But the hen, that most important of all feathered creatures, who writes poetry about her? Who even takes the trouble to know anything about her early history in America? Who owned the first hen; when and where did she land upon our shores?

Why not make amends for our long years of neglect by making her the center of the feast on the Fourth of July? Hereafter let it be our Thanksgiving turkey, our Christmas goose, and our Fourth of July hen.—Atlantic.

Nine hundred and four votes! Who said over 1200? Talk about predictions that fail, how about this for one?

Judge Thomas G. Jones, Judge of the U. S. Court for the Middle District of Alabama, died at his home in Montgomery Tuesday, after a long illness.

One thousand dollars reward for the whereabouts of three hundred Bull Moose who were slated to participate in a certain primary election held in this county on April 21. When it comes to making predictions, please commend us to our esteemed contemporary, the Union-Banner.

We had a beautiful life sketch of the late Mr. Tipton Mullins that we had hoped to publish in this issue, prepared by one of the good ladies of Clanton, but we had so much matter to crowd in a small space, that it was impossible to use it this week. However, it will appear in our next issue.

And they do say it was the beautiful weather that old Jupiter Pluv. dished out that kept 'em from turning out on the 21st. We knew they would do it, and we admit that it is most unfortunate for an election to take place on a pretty day, when all the farmers are busy. The sixth day of April was a most ideal day, the farmers were extremely busy, and at least two or three hundred remained away from the polls.

ODD FELLOWS OBSERVE ANNIVERSARY

The Ninety-fifty Anniversary of the Independent Order of Odd Fellows was fittingly observed by Cooper Lodge on Sunday.

An invitation had been extended all Odd Fellows to participate in the exercises, and a large number of visiting members were in attendance from the following Lodges: Clanton, 26 members; two from Union Grove and one each from Mayflower, Talladega, Troy and Helena. Cooper was well represented with 40 members.

On assembling at the Lodge hall soon after ten o'clock, the meeting was called to order by Noble Grand H. A. Harris, and, after stating the object of the meeting, the procession was formed with Mr. J. P. Gore acting as marshal, and the members marched in a body to the church, where a splendid sermon on the Order was delivered by Rev. J. D. Hughes.

After the services at the church, an elegant and sumptuous dinner was served by the good ladies of the community which was greatly enjoyed by the large assemblage.

In the afternoon the Cooper Singing Class entertained the visitors with several delightful selections. R. T. Grant was elected chairman and P. O. Barrett, secretary. Five twenty minutes lessons were led by the following: S. M. Yates, W. O. Rich, Osie DeVaughn, J. T. Henderson and L. T. Grant.

Altogether, the day was thoroughly enjoyed by all who were fortunate enough to be present.

An interesting feature of the occasion was the presence of Messrs. H. A. J. Harris, H. A. Harris, G. C. Harris, C. E. and Grady Harris—father and four sons—all of whom are enthusiastic Odd Fellows

SUB-SOILING WITH DYNAMITE

DEMONSTRATION AT THORSBY, MAY 2, 1914, AT 2 P. M.

Through the courtesy of the Dupont Powder Company of Wilmington, Del., Mr. J. Sterling Moran of the Rural Organization Service, Federal Department of Agriculture, was able to secure enough Red Cross extra 20 per cent dynamite to subsoil an acre of ground.

The work will be done in the village of Thorsby on the land belonging to Mr. Franklin, and is an experiment to determine the increase in crop yields per acre. An adjoining acre will be fertilized and cultivated in exactly the same manner with the exception of the subsoiling and the results noted over a period of years.

It is confidently believed by those having this experiment in charge that by subsoiling and deep plowing (10 to 14 inches) that the soil can be made to hold from three to five times as much water as it is capable of holding under present methods. Our heavy rainfall in this section soon saturates the soil which overflows and carries off the soil with it, making necessary so much terracing and damage to crops and land when they break.

We would not do away with terracing, but we do believe we can do away with a great deal of terracing by deep plowing and subsoiling for the reason that the soil will hold more water before it begins to overflow and when the overflow begins terraces are needed. Several thousand experiments in different parts of the country have shown that light subsoil-blasted when dry showed from 25 to 300 per cent increase in crop yields per acre: The average increase for all experiments was above 50 per cent.

One man near Brewton, Ala., got 3-4 bale of cotton per acre before subsoiling and 1 1-2 bales after. Another man at Talladega increased the value of his cotton crop the first year by $45.20 per acre, the land not subsoiled yielding $53.52 per acre while an adjoining subsoiled field yielded in seed cotton $98.72 per acre.

A man near Marbury got more than one hundred bushels of corn after subsoiling, while for years he had only been getting 25 bushels per acre.

Another man raised his average yield per acre from 40 to 106 bushels per acre.

We could call attention to many more experiments with like results but space does not permit.

Among the many uses of dynamite on the farm may be mentioned ditching, making post holes, clearing land of stumps and stones, preparing holes for trees in orchards, renovating old orchards, draining swamps, etc.

This experiment will be promptly at 2 p.m., Saturday, May 2, provided no heavy rains make soil too wet.

Come and bring your friends, hear talks and see the demonstration.

Mr. J. Sterling Moran of Thorsby attended a meeting of the Chilton County Civic League on Saturday, April 25th, where he spoke on "Beautification of the Villages and Country Homes."

Miss Helen G. Harlan, Chilton county's Red-Cross visiting nurse, spoke at Union Grove on Tuesday night, April 21; at Benson's Cross Roads, Thursday night, April 23, and at the Chilton County Civic League on Saturday. It is the general belief that Miss Harlan's work is of great benefit to Chilton county, in continually emphasizing the need of obeying the great fundamental laws of sanitation.

Mr. J. Sterling Moran of Thorsby will speak in Birmingham, May 4 and 5 before the Southern Sociological Congress, on the subject, "Rural Housing Problems."

ALFALFA EXPERIMENT IN CHILTON COUNTY

The farmers of Chilton couuty now need not be bound to the time honored feeling that they must raise cotton and corn in order to make a living. The Twin Tree Lumber Co. have an alfalfa field which covers about one quarter of an acre. Today the first cutting was made, resulting in about one ton of hay. To obtain this result the land was thoroughly broken three times then covered over by lime, using four barrels. This was ploughed in, then covered with fertilizer. The seed were inoculated and in the latter part of October were sown broadcast. A pine bush was then dragged over them to cover them. The alfalfa when cut averaged about eighteen inches, several stalks running as high as thirty inches, and as thick as could be wished for, and it seems to be thoroughly rooted and there to stay. A sandy loam with a tendency to gravel was the soil selected for the experiment, and from appearances, alfalfa can be grown all over the county, as there is quite a lot of this class of land in Chilton county.

The management of the Twin Tree Lumber Company will be very glad indeed to show this field to interested parties, as well as explain how it was handled. They also expect to put more of their land into cultivation for this purpose as it makes the best kind of hay, and once it is rooted, three or four crops can be cut every year.

SOME SOUND LOGIC

SAME OLD MOSES SAYS THE PEOPLE HAVE ENOUGH OF FALSE PROPHETS.

Editor Press:—I promised in my last article that if it missed the waste basket that I would give the false political prophets another barrel. so here she goes: They predicted that if Wilson was elected cotton would go to six cents per pound. And they said if the democrats were elected we would have higher taxes and bond issues put on us whether we wanted them or not. They fooled many a good honest voter who did not know that before bonds could be issued a majority of the voters would have to vote for them. They have told the people that the county was busted, trying to make the people believe the democrats did it. They have a majority of the Board of Revenue, and if the county is busted the Republicans, Progressives, Bull Moose, Bull Durham or whatever the name is, did the busting.

So my dear sirs, it is high time we ignorant voters were looking at the situation as it is. First, why not all come together in one primary and let every man in the county become a candidate that wants to, and let the longest pole knock the persimmon by so doing. Each one would have a voice in the selection of their county, State and national officers. But that doesn't suit some of them; they had rather keep up confusion among the most uneducated class in order to fool them and try to get a county office. Some think a Chilton county office is a great thing; they had rather disfranchise themselves and their children as to State and national affairs than to fail to get a little county office; and when they step over the Chilton county line they have stepped clean out of their party. Silly, isn't it?

Another prediction some of them made was that they would poll a greater vote in the county than ever before. Now, I want to make a prediction: The common people have at last learned not to follow the false political prophets any longer. That was clearly demonstrated in the two primaries held on April 6th and 21st inst. I predict further that there are a lot of people saying nothing, that in November will to walk the polls and cast their ballots to maintain white supremacy and the rule of the people. The democrats are in the lead and are gaining ground every day. The election in November will wind up the Rep., Pro., B. M., or whatever they call themselves.

For fear I will worry the readers I will wind up by asking all who want good government and who want to be on the winning side, to come out on May 11th and cast their ballots with the party that will win in Chilton county and in Alabama—the democratic party.

Respectfully,
The Same Old Moses.

BRILLIANT RECEPTION.

The largest and most elaborate social function of the past week in Clanton, was the brilliant reception given on last Wednesday evening by Dr. and Mrs. J. Earl Gowan, at their new home on Avenue A. All of the decorations hinted of the wooden wedding, and in all the rooms were seen handsome presents that attested the popularity of the couple. Misses Lena Downs, Mabel Thomas and Estella Morgan assisted in entertaining.

The guests were met at the door by Dr. and Mrs. Gowan, and after being graciously welcomed were escorted to the sun-parlor, where Misses Lucile Gross and Ruby Downs served punch in tiny gourds from a wooden punch-bowl. In the sitting-room violin, piano and vocal selections, rendered by Mrs. James H. Middleton, Misses Sara and Corita Wilson and Willie Reynolds, were enjoyed.

Later in the evening to the soft strains of Mendelsshon's wedding march, Dr. and Mrs. Gown marched into the presence of their guests and were met by Judge Deason who, in his most pleasing manner, performed a mock marriage ceremony. After this the guests were shown into the dining room, where an ice course was served.

MEXICAN SITUATION ASSUMES A MORE PEACEFUL ASPECT

U. S. AND MEXICO ACCEPT MEDIATION OF SOUTH AMERICAN REPUBLICS.

WILSON GREATLY PLEASED

Army Activities on Part o fU. S. Continues—Elimination of Huerta Demanded in Settlement.

Washington.—Formal acceptance by the Huerta government of the offer of Argentina, Brazil and Chile to use their good offices to bring about an amicable settlement of the difficulty between the United States and Mexico, was cabled to Spanish Ambassador Riano here by Portillo y Rojas, foreign minister in the Huerta cabinet.

It was said that Senator Rojas replied briefly, accepting the offer and thanking the South American plenipotentiaries and the Spanish Ambassador for their good offices, with a reference to "the real spirit of solidarity between peoples of a same race."

No conditions are imposed in an offer of good offices, consequently the reply from Mexico City was not expected to deal with conditions. That stage will be reached when the peace. makers formulate their plans and make known how they propose to use the good offices which have been accepted. It was suggested that they probably would ask the Washington and Mexico City governments for statements as to what each would demand in the event formal mediation were undertaken, and that upon the nature of the responses to this request would depend the proposals next to be submitted.

Official advices from Mexico already had made it virtually certain that General Huerta would accept the offer of the peace envoys, but the formal announcement tended to further relieve the slackening tension of the crisis. The news was given to President Wilson, who expressed himself as greatly pleased, though he would make no further comment.

TENSENESS OF SITUATION IS SOMEWHAT RELIEVED.

Washington.—The tenseness of the Mexican situation was distinctly relieved when the representatives of Argentina, Brazil and Chile, supported by pressure from all Latin-America and from the foremost powers of Europe, concentrated their efforts toward a pacific adjustment of the crisis.

The success of the first steps toward mediation—the prompt acceptance by the United States and the announcement of the Spanish Ambassador that Huerta had accepted the tender of good offices—produced a feeling of distinct hope, which was reflected not only in administration quarters, but in Congress, where "war talk" gave way to a spirit of conciliation.

NO AMERICANS HAVE BEEN KILLED SINCE CRISIS.

Secretary Bryan said he was able after receiving information through embassies and legations, to say that no American had been killed or injured since the crisis of the last two weeks began, and that, though many had been detained at Aguas Callentes, Cordoba, Orizaba, efforts were now being made to obtain their release. Order prevails in Vera Cruz, Brigadier General Funston and the army is in command of the situation.

"Things look very much better now," said Secretary Daniels. "We are getting Americans out of Mexico. That is the important thing now."

Consul Canada reported that a formal raising of the American flag occurred at Vera Cruz with impressive ceremonies.

The attitude of the administration long has been established that the elimination of Huerta was an essential to any final settlement of the Mexican problem. This view was reiterated at the White House, when senators and representatives were consulted as to the proposal of good offices. But, while maintaining this view as to what would ultimately be essential to a real settlement, there has been no formal submission of such a condition to the envoys now entrusted with the work of conciliation.

While Secretary Bryan and government officials expressed a disinclination to discuss the mediation plan during its present stage, they said it had not reached the point of actual "proposals." The American government simply has expressed its willingness to listen to any plan of intermediation which the representatives of Argentina, Brazil and Chile may formulate. Huerta has shown his readiness to lend a listening ear to the peace plans of the South American envoys.

WILSON ACCEPTS MEDIATION OFFER

THREE SOUTH AMERICAN NATIONS SEEK TO BRING ABOUT PEACE.

SETTLEMENT ALONG BROAD LINES IS CONTEMPLATED

President Makes Position Clear: Terms of Peace Must Be Compatible With Dignity of U. S.

Washington.—From out of the maelstrom of anarchy, bloodshed and rapine in Mexico these facts stood out in sharp relief:

That the United States will accept the good offices of Argentine, Chile and Brazil in an attempt at mediation, but only on positive assurances that Huerta will go and order and peace be restored in all Mexico.

That there has been no cessation in United States military and naval preparedness and this country is prepared to exact a bloody revenge for any massacre of Americans in Mexico.

That any plan which provides for adjustment of difficulties with Mexico must provide for public apology and disavowal of the assault upon the honor dignity of this country.

President Wilson, through Secretary Bryan, accepted an offer of mediation from the "A. B. C." confederation of South America—Argentine, Brazil and Chile. The offer came unsolicited. It was unqualifiedly accepted so far as the spirit went. But in his acceptance the President emphasized that if word comes that Americans have fallen victims to Mexican lust and hate those responsible must mace face the consequences. And the three ambassadors who accepted thereply of this government told Secretry Bryan they realized that conditions in Mexico were such that their effort may already have come too late.

The offer and acceptance were couched in the formal phrases known to diplomacy. The offer was appreciated by this government. President Wilson took occasion in his acceptanve of the offer again to tell the civilized world that the United States has no designs on Mexico and is willing to meet with her in the frankest and most conciliatory spirit.

However, in his conference with the diplomatic representatvies of the three Latin-American nations, Secretary Bryan very frankly told them that President Wilson stood squarely on the doctrine enunciated when he took office, that "Huerta must go." He also told them that the only basis of settlement must be one which would assure the nations of the world that the constitutional rights and guarantees of the Mexican people were to be restored to thm and provide for a stable government to take the place of the present chaotic conditions.

VERA CRUZ PLACED UNDER MARTIAL LAW

Vera Cruz.—Vera Cruz is under martial law. Rear Admiral Frank F. Fletcher, commanding the American naval forces on shore, issued a proclamation to this effect and the last opportunity Mexicans had for handling their own affairs in Vera Cruz under their own laws disappeared.

Admiral Fletcher and his staff determined there should be no more quibbling with the Mexican officials regarding forms of government, and until further notice residents of this port will live and be judged by military law. The word has gone forth that disorder and unruliness in any form shall receive swift and severe punishment.

This proclamation makes Rear Admiral Fletcher absolute ruler ashore.

It is believed the martial law proclamation will open the way for more of the city and federal employes to return and co-operate in restoring the local government functions. Mexicans point out that these men now will be in a position to expian to their friends and the existing government at the capital that under martial law they felt obliged to return to their work.

An order that all arms be turned in by residents by noon brought to the headquarters of the provost marshal bushels of small arms and stacks of rifles.

CONSUL HANNA PLACED IN PRISON.

Washington.—United States Consul General Philip C. Hanna, at Monterey, reported to Secretary Bryan that he had been humiliated and placed in Jail by Mexican federal officials on April 22, and left behind the bars until released two days later by the constitutionalists when they captured the city.

Mr. Hanna's message to Secretary Bryan was dispatched from Monterey. The Secretary took it to the White House at once and it was the subject of a long conference between him and President Wilson. Mr. Hanna reported that he had been courteously treated by the constitutionalists.

NON-COMBATANTS ARE ORDERED OUT.

Vera Cruz.—Definite instructions from Rear Admiral Badger, commander-in-chief of the Altlantic fleet, to all American non-combatants to save Vera Cruz by the steamer Mexico were posted at the consulate and other conspicuous places.

The order stated, in terms that could not be misunderstood, that all must board the ship. Many objected to the order and especially rebellious were the women, whose husbands still are in the interior.

WILSON HOPEFUL OF YET AVOIDING WAR.

President Wilson, hopeful, though not confident that war may yet be averted, conferred with Secretary Garrison, approving orders for the joint jurisdiction of the army and navy over Vera Cruz and vicinity when Brigadier General Funston, who will be in command there, arrives to reinforce Admiral Fletcher's forces.

Tension over the one phase of the situation which may at any moment upset peace plans—the safety of Americans in Mexico City and other interior points—was partially relieved by the announcement of Secretary Bryan that, through the British embassy here, the Huerta officials and Admiral Fletcher had arranged for the safe departure of Americans from the Mexican capital and the free choice of Mexicans from Vera Cruz.

APPEAL AND WARNING TO FARMERS

To the Farmers of Alabama:

The election of May 11th will be decided by the Democratic farmers of Alabama. As of old, their votes still control the destinies of this State.

I was born and raised a farmer and all of my life I have been engaged in farming, my interest and wants and feelinge identical with those of other farmers.

The farmer's prosperity and his hopes are menaced by the rapid approach of the boll weevil. This destructive pest now covers one-half of the territory of the State. In a few years cotton cannot be successfully grown in a large part of the State. The hope of the farmer and business interests depending upon him can only be found by converting the cotton farm into a grain and stock farm. To make this successful, the farmer must have low freight rates and good roads. Mr. Henderson, who is opposing me for Governor, surrendered to the railroads the cheap rates which were established by the Legislature when I was Governor, and gave back to the railroads $3,000,000 which they had unjustly exacted from the people by overcharges for carrying freight and passengers. If elected Governor, I will urge the restoration of these rates and make the rates the same in Alabama as they are in Georgia. A majority of the Legislature already nominated agree with me on this subject.

To get the full benefit of these rates the farmer must have good roads, over which to carry his produce to market, and to make country life what it should be. If elected, I will urge the Legislature to enact laws under which good roads will be established. I will urge the passage of laws to take out of the mines and lumber camps the misdemeanor-convicts and place them upon the public roads. As soon as the financial condition of the State will justify it, I will urge that all State convicts be worked upon the public roads, where the treatment of these unfortunates will be more humane, where the public will receive the benefits from their labor, and where they will be taken out of competition with free labor, as is now successfully done in Georgia and in Jefferson, Houston and other Counties of this State.

The farmers of the State lose millions of dollars annualy by the ravages of hog cholera, because they have no effective means of preventing it. If elected, I will urge the enactment of laws to prevent the existence and spread of this scourge on the prosperity of the people of the State. With cheap freight rates, good roads, and the prevention of hog cholera in the State, the farmers can well afford to withstand the ravages of the boll weevil and devote their energies to other crops and to the growth of live stock.

If elected, I will urge the appropriation of a sufficient amount to educate our farmers, and especially the boys, in the use of intensive methods in farming.

I will insist upon the largest possible appropriation for the common schools of the country, so as to give the country children a full nine months' term with comfortable houses in which to be taught.

I favor liberal appropriation for pensions to Confederate soldiers.

I will urge the abolition of the county back tax commissioner, retention of the 60 per cent. tax valuation, and will insist upon rigid economy in the administration of the affairs of the State.

I appeal to you to join with me and sustain me in the great work of removing our capitol from Louisville back to Montgomery.

B. B. COMER.

JUDGE DENSON FOR COMER

April 21st, 1914.

Hon. B. B. Comer,
Birmingham, Ala.

Dear Sir:—

I am heartily and unqualifiedly in favor of your candidacy and believing that your nomination and election to the office of Governor will better subserve the interests of the State, I hope and trust that you will be nominated by an overwhelming majority.

But for important business engagements I would join with others of your friends in the advocacy of your candidacy on the stump.

With sentiments of highest esteem, I am, Yours truly,
(Adv.) (Signed) N. D. DENSON.

LAW AND ORDER

Gov. Comer's Record As Shown in 1908 Strike

In reply to the attempt of his enemies to prejudice laboring men against him because he settled a miners' strike in Jefferson County in 1908, Gov. Comer has this ringing declaration of his position on law and order in Alabama:

"It is urged that all working men vote against me, because I interfered with and settled the miners' strike in 1908. My duty as Governor was to preserve order, to see that there was no open season for homicides in Alabama, threatening with idleness and want every man in this district who had to work for a living. Human life and property interests became the sport of rioters. Trains filled with innocent passengers were fired on and assassination was added to murder. This lawlessness I suppressed, and suppressed it without shedding one drop of blood, giving peace, order, industry and protection back to these people; our fellow citizens, and safe conditions back to business. I will do it again should the need arise. Whenever a reign of lawlessness shall show itself, whenever conditions such as confronted us here shall arise, whether in the crowded city or the remotest country district, I would see that the State stretches over peaceful and industrious men and women the strong arm of its protecting power.

"Compare the strike history in West Virginia, Michigan and Colorado, in their horrible and destructive details, with the bloodless, successful strike settlement in Alabama and the many peaceful, prosperous years to every condition of labor and business since, and then ask, what will Mr. Henderson do? He has appealed to a base method when he holds out to the laboring men the promise of non-interference in whatever they may choose to do in the name of strike. He is surely mistaking the spirit and habit of mind of our working population with this base appeal. You may well question the wisdom of putting a man who makes such an appeal for votes in your place of highest power. This is the same man who betrayed his office when he surrendered the rate compromise to the Louisville and Nashville Railroad; and betrayed his people when he struck the bargain with Charlie Lewis as the bell tolled for midnight in the Nashville Conference."

COMER ON CHILD LABOR

Gov. Comer has declared his position on child labor as follows:

"On the subject of child labor and child labor protection in the cotton mills, Alabama is in advance of all the Southern States which have cotton mills. The Comer legislature raised the age from ten to twelve years, and required that all children between twelve and sixteen years old shall attend school eight weeks in the year—the only compulsory educational law in the State—and no child under twelve years old shall be in or about a mill. The Comer administration further provided that the full execution of the law should be under the inspection and in charge of a State officer, Dr. Oates, with full authority by law to carry out its every intent of supervision and protection.

"There are in Alabama 400,000 child laborers; nearly all are on the farms; less than 2500 work in the cotton mills, and these latter, by law, are all over twelve years old, and are the only children in Alabama who have any sort of State protection and supervision, or have any sort of compulsory education. The Avondale Mills at Birmingham have less than thirty-five between twelve and sixteen years old, the average pay of whom is 75 cents a day, made in bi-weekly payments, no commissary being attached.

The Liquor Curse.

"Child labor is not created in the cotton mills, but by the 'wolf at the parents' door.' And what brings the wolf to the door today more than every other cause combined is the curse of the liquor habit. Governor O'Neal's administration, which is now backing Mr. Henderson and attempting without reference to the people to name him for Governor, has done more to bring necessity to the parents' door, to bring back the accursed wolf of drunkenness to the door of parents, done more—yes, a thousand times more, to create child labor than every mill in the State combined; and I charge Mr. Henderson, in his brutal picture showing me with the whip lash driving children into the mill, to substitute himself, with Charles Lewis by his side, with the whip lash of necessity, which is the only power that can drive the free white people of Alabama. They, and not the mills, create the problem of child labor. The State has been progressing along this line for years, and will continue to progress as the condition of the people themselves improves." (Adv.)

London Times at a Penny.

On the first day that the London Times was issued at a penny (two cents), its circulation was quadrupled. Three hundred thousand copies were sold. The London Daily Mail says: "The demand is the most amazing thing that has ever been known in the history of newspapers. Four or five hundred thousand people applied for the paper in vain. On arrival at their newsagent's or bookstalls they found that all the copies had been reserved for regular purchasers."

The VALIANTS of VIRGINIA

By HALLIE ERMINIE RIVES

ILLUSTRATIONS by LAUREN STOUT

COPYRIGHT BY BOBBS-MERRILL COMPANY

SYNOPSIS.

John Valiant, a rich society favorite, suddenly discovers that the Valiant corporation, which his father founded and which was the principal source of his wealth, has failed. He voluntarily turns over his private fortune to the receiver for the corporation. His entire remaining possessions consist of an old motor car, a white bull dog and Damory court, a neglected estate in Virginia. On the way to Damory court he meets Shirley Dandridge, an auburn-haired beauty, and decides that he is going to like Virginia immensely. Shirley's mother, Mrs. Dandridge, and Major Bristow exchange reminiscences during which it is revealed that the major, Valiant's father, and a man named Sassoon were rivals for the hand of Mrs. Dandridge in her youth. Sassoon and Valiant fought a duel on her account in which the former was killed. Valiant finds Damory court overgrown with weeds and creepers and decides to rehabilitate the place. Valiant saves Shirley from the bite of a snake, which bites him. Knowing the deadliness of the bite, Shirley sucks the poison from the wound and saves his life. Valiant learns for the first time that his father left Virginia on account of a duel in which Doctor Southall and Major Bristow acted as his father's seconds. Valiant and Shirley become good friends. Mrs. Dandridge faints when she meets Valiant for the first time. Valiant discovers that he has a fortune in old walnut trees.

CHAPTER XXI.—Continued.

"I got over it before I was old enough to make myself a butt of hilarity," the doctor retorted. "I see by the papers they've invented a new dance called the grizzly bear. I believe there's another named the yip-kyoodle. I hope you've got 'em down pat to show the young folk tonight, Bristow."

The major got up with some irritation. "Southall," he said, "sometimes I'm tempted to think your remarks verge upon the personal. You don't have to watch me dance if you don't choose to."

"No, thank God," muttered the doctor. "I prefer to remember you when you still preserved a trace of dignity—twenty odd years ago."

"If dignity—" the major's blood was rising now,—"consists in your eternal tasteless bickerings, I want none of it. What on earth do you do it for? You had some friends once."

"Friends!" snapped the other, "the fewer I have the better!"

The major clapped on his straw hat angrily, strode to the door, and opened it. But on the threshold he stopped, and presently shut it, turned back slowly and resumed his chair. The doctor was relighting his cigar, but an odd furtive look had slipped to his face, and the hand that struck the match was unsteady.

For a time both sat smoking, at first in silence, then talking in a desultory way on indifferent topics. Finally the major rose and tossed his cigar into the empty grate.

"I'll be off now," he said. "I must be on the field before the others."

As he went down the steps a carriage, drawn by a pair of dancing grays, plunged past. "Who are those people with the Chalmers, I wonder," said the doctor. "They're strangers here."

The major peered. "Oh," he said, over his shoulder, "I forgot to tell you. That's Silas Fargo, the railroad president from New York, and his daughter Katharine. His private car's down on the siding. They're at the judge's—he's chief counsel for the road in this state. They'll be at the tournament, I reckon. You'll be there, won't you?"

The doctor was putting some phials and instruments into a worn leather bag. "No," he said, shortly. "I'm going to take a ten-mile drive—to add to this county's population, I expect. But I'm coming to the dance. Promised Valiant I would, in a moment of temporary aberration."

"Friends!" Snapped the Other, "The Fewer I Have the Better!"

CHAPTER XXII.

A Virginian Runnymede.

"June in Virginia is something to remember." Today the master of Damory Court deemed this a true saying. For the air was li'se wine, and the drifting white wings of cloud, piled above the amethystine ramparts of the far Blue Ridge, looked down upon a violet world bound in green and silver.

In his bedroom Valiant stood looking into the depths of an ancient wardrobe. Presently he took from a hook a suit of white flannel in which he arrayed himself. Over his soft shirt he knotted a pale gray scarf. The modish white suit and the rolling Panama threw out in fine contrast the keen sun-tanned face and dark brown eyes.

In the hall below he looked about him with satisfaction. For the last three days he had labored tirelessly to fit the place for the evening's event. The parlor now showed walls rimmed with straight-back chairs and the grand piano—long ago put in order—had been relegated to the library. That instinct for the artistic, which had made him a last resort in the vexing problems of club entertainments, had aided him in the Court's adornment.

Out of the kitchens Cassandra's egg-beating chatted like a watchman's rattle, while Aunt Daphne put the finishing touches to an array of lighter edibles destined to grace the long table on the rear porch, now walled in with snow-white muslin and hung with candle-lusters. Under the trees Uncle Jefferson was even then experimenting with various punch compounds, and a delicious aroma of vanilla came to Valiant's nostrils.

* * * * * * * * *

The Red Road, as Valiant's car passed, was dotted with straggling pedestrians: humble country folk who trudged along the grassy foot-path with no sullen regard for the swift cars and comfortable carriage that left them behind; sturdy barefooted children who called shrilly after him, and happy-go-lucky negro youths clad in their best with Sunday shoes dangling over their shoulders, slouching regardlessly in the dust—all bound for the same Mecca, which presently rose before him, a gateway of painted canvas proclaiming the field to which it opened Runnymede.

He halted his car at the end of the field and snapped a leash in the bull-dog's collar. "I hate to do it, old man," he said apologetically to Chum's reproachful look, "but I've got to. There are to be some stunts, and in such occasions you're apt to be convinced you're the main one of the contestants, which might cause a mix-up. Never mind; I'll anchor you where you won't miss anything."

With the excited dog tugging before him, he threaded his way through the press with keen exhilaration. Now and then his gloved hand touched his cap at a salutation. He was conscious of swift bird-like glances from pretty girls. Here was none of the rigid straight-ahead gaze or vacant stare of the city boulevard; the eyes that looked at him, frankly curious and inquiring, were full of easy open comradeship. Some of the girls wore gowns and hats that might that morning have issued from the Rue de la Paix; others were habited in cheap materials. But about the latter hung no benumbing self-consciousness. All bore themselves alike. He was beginning to realize that there might really exist straitened circumstances, even actual poverty, which yet created no sort of social difference.

Opposite the canvas-covered grand stand sat twelve small mushroom tents, each with a staff and tiny flag. Midway lines of flaxen ropes stretched between rows of slender peeled saplings from whose tops floated fanged streamers of vivid bunting. A pavilion of purple cloth, open at the sides, awaited for the committee, and near the center, a negro band was disposed on camp-stools, the brass of the waiting instruments winking in the sunlight. The stand was a confused glow of color, of light gauzy dresses, of young girls in pastel muslins with flowers in their belts, picturesque hats and slender articulate hands darting in vivacious gestures like white swallows — the gentry from the "big houses."

The light athletic figure, towed by the white bull-dog, drew many glances. Valiant's eyes, however, as they swept the seats, were looking for but one, and at first vainly. He felt a quick pang of disappointment. Perhaps she would not come! Perhaps her mother was still ill. Perhaps—but then suddenly his heart beat high, for he saw her in the lower tier, with a group of young people. He could not have told what she wore, save that it was of soft Murillo blue with a hat whose down-curved brim was wound with a shaded plume of the same tint. Her mother was not with her. She was not looking his way as he passed—her arms at the moment being held out in an adorable gesture toward a little child in a smiling matron's lap—and but a single glance was vouchsafed to him before the major seized upon him and bore him to the purple pavilion, for he was one of the committee.

But for this distraction, he might have seen, entering the stand with the Chalmers just as the band struck up a delicious whirl of "Dixie," the two strangers whom the doctor had observed an hour before as they whirled by the Merryweather Mason house behind the judge's grave. Silas Fargo might have passed in any gathering for the unobtrusive city man. Katharine was noticeable anywhere, and today her tall willowy figure in its champagne-colot lingerie gown and hat garnished with bronze and gold thistles, setting in relief her ivory statuesque face, drew a wave of whispered comment which left a sibilant wake behind him. The party made a picturesque group as they now disposed themselves, Katharine's quiet loveliness contrasting with the eager sparkle of pretty Nancy Chalmers and the gipsy-like beauty of Betty Page.

"You call it a tournament, don't you?" asked Katharine of the judge.

"Yes," he replied. "It's a kind of contest in which twelve riders compete for the privilege of naming a Queen of Beauty. There's a ball tonight, at which the lucky lady is crowned. Those little tents are where the noble knights don their shining armor. See, there go their caparisoned chargers."

A file of negroes was approaching the tents, each leading a horse whose saddle and bridle were decorated with fringes of various hues. In the center of the roped lists, directly in front of the stand, others were planting upright in the ground a tall pole from whose top projected a horizontal arm like a slender gallows. From this was suspended a cord at whose end swung a tiny object that whirled and glittered in the sun.

The judge explained. "On the end of the cord is a silver ring, at which the knights tilt with lances. Twelve rings are used. The pike-points are made to fit them, and the knight who carries off the greatest number of the twelve is the victor. The whole thing is a custom as ancient as Virginia—a relic, of course, of the old jousting of the feudal ages. The ring is supposed to represent the device on the boss of the shield, at which the lance-thrust was aimed."

"Who Is That Splendid Old Man Giving Directions? The One Who Looks Like a Lion."

"How interesting!" exclaimed Katharine, and turning, swept the stand with her lorgnette. "I suppose all the county's F. F. V.'s are here," she said laughingly to Nancy Chalmers. "I've often wondered, by the way, what became of the Second Families of Virginia."

"Oh, they've mostly emigrated North," answered Nancy. "The ones that are left are all ancient. There are families here that don't admit they ever began at all."

Silas Fargo shook his stooped shoulders with laughter. "Up North," he said genially, "we've got regular factories that turn out ready-made family-trees for anybody who wants to roost in one."

* * * * * * * * *

And now over the fluttering stand and the crowd about the barriers, a stir was discernible. Katharine looked again at the field. "Who is that splendid old man giving directions? The one who looks like a lion. He's coming this way, now."

"That's Major Montague Bristow," said the judge. "He's been master of the heralds for years. The tournament could hardly happen without the major."

"I'm sure I'd like him," she answered. "What a lovely girl he is talking to!"

It was Shirley who had beckoned the major from the lists. She was leaning over the railing. "Why has Ridgeley Pendleton left?" she asked in a low voice. "Isn't he one of the twelve?"

"He was. But he's ill. He wasn't feeling up to it when he came, but he didn't give up till half an hour ago. We'll have to get along with eleven knights."

She made an exclamation of dismay. "Poor Ridge! And what a pity! There have never been less than the full number. It will spoil the royal quadrille tonight, too. Why doesn't the committee choose some one in his place? Listen. Why not ask Mr. Valiant? He is our host tonight. I'm sure he'd be glad to help out, even without the costume."

"Egad!" he said, pulling his imperial. "None of us had thought of him. He could ride Pendleton's mount, of course." He reflected a moment. "I'll do it. It's exactly the right thing. You're a clever girl, Shirley."

He hastily crossed the field, while she leaned back, her eyes on the flannel-clad figure—long since recognized—under the purple pavilion. She saw the committe put their heads together and hurriedly enter.

In the moment's wait, Shirley's gloved fingers clasped and unclasped somewhat nervously. The riders had been chosen long before John Valiant's coming. If a saddle, however, was perforce to be vacant, what more appropriate than that he should fill it? The thought had come to her instantly, bred of an underlying regret, which she had all along cherished, that he was not to take part. But beneath this was a deeper passionate wish that she did not attempt to analyze in any but assume his place with others long habituated to that closed circle—a place rightfully his by reason of birth and name—and to lighten the gloomy shadow, that must rest on his thoughts of his father, with warmer sunnier things. She heaved a secret sigh of satisfaction as the white-clad figure rose in acquiescence.

The major returned to the grand stand and held up his hand for silence.

"Our gracious Liege," he proclaimed, in his big vibrant voice, "Queen of Beauty yet unknown, Lords, Knights and Esquires, Fair Dames and gentles all! Whereas divers noble persons have enterprized and taken upon them to hold jousts royal and tourney, you are hereby acquainted that the lists of Runnymede are about to open for that achievement of arms and grand and noble tournament for which they have so long been famed. But an hour since one of our noble knights, pricking hither to tilt for his lady, was beset by a grievous malady. However, lest our jousting lack the royal number, a new champion hath at this last hour been found to fill the Table Round, who of his courtesy doth consent to ride without armor."

A buzz ran over the assemblage. "It must be Pendleton who has defaulted," said Judge Chalmers. "I heard this morning he was sick. Who's the substitute knight, I wonder?"

At the moment a single mounted herald before the tents blew a long blast on a silver horn. Their flaps parted and eleven knights issued to mount their steeds and draw into line behind him. They were brilliantly decked in fleshlings with slashed doublets and plumed chapeaus, and short jeweled cloaks drooped from their shoulders. Pages handed each a long lance which was held perpendicular, the butt resting on the right stirrup.

Under the pavilion, just for the fraction of a second, Valiant hesitated. Then he turned swiftly to the twelfth tent. Its flag-staff bore a long streamer of deep blood-red. He snatched this from its place, flung it about his waist and knotted it sash-wise. He drew the rose from his lapel and thrust it through the band of his Panama, leaped to the saddle of the horse the major had beckoned, and with a quick thrust of his heel, swung to the end of the stamping line.

The field and grand stand had seen the quick decision, with its instant action, and as the hoofs thudded over the turf, a wave of hand-clapping ran across the seats like a silver rain. "Neatly done, upon my word!" said the judge, delighted. "What a daring idea! Who is it? Is it—bless my soul, it is!"

Katharine Fargo had dropped her lorgnette with an exclamation. She stood up, her wide eyes fixed on that figure in pure white, with the blood-red cordon flaunting across his horse's flanks and the single crimson blossom glowing in his hat.

"The White Knight!" she breathed. "Who is he?"

Judge Chalmers looked round in sudden illumination. "I forgot that you would be likely to know him, he said. "That is Mr. John Valiant of Damory Court."

CHAPTER XXIII.

The Knight of the Crimson Rose.

The row of horsemen had halted in a curving line before the grand stand, and now in the silence the herald, holding a parchment scroll, spurred before each rider in turn, demanding his title. As this was given he whirled to proclaim it, accompanying each evolution with a blast on his horn. "Knight of the Golden Spur," "Knight of Castlewood," "Lord of Brandon," "Westover's Knight," "Knight of the Silver Cross": the names, fanciful, or those of family estates, fell on John Valiant's ear with a pungent flavor of medievalism. He started as he became aware that the rider next him had answered and that the herald had paused before him.

"Knight of the Crimson Rose!" It sprang to his lips without forethought, an echo, perhaps, of the improvised sash and the flower in his hat-band, but the shout of the herald and the trumpet's blare seemed to make the words fairly bulge with inevitability. And through this struck a sudden appalled feeling that he had really spoken Shirley's name, and that every one had heard. He could not see her face, and clutched his lance fiercely to overcome an insane desire to stoop hideously in his saddle and peer under the shading hat-brim. Lest he should do this, he fastened his eyes determinedly on the major, who now proceeded to deliver himself of the "Charge to the Knights."

The major made an appealing center to the charming picture as he stood on the green turf, "the glass of fashion and the mold of form," his head bare, his shock of blond-gray hair thrown back, and one hand thrust between the buttons of his snowy waistcoat. His rich bass voice rolled out to the farthest corner of the field:

"Sir Knights:

"The tournament to which we are gathered today is to us traditional; a rite of antiquity and a monument of ancient generations. This relic of the jousts of the Field of the Cloth-of-Gold points us back to an era of knightly deeds, fidelity to sacred trust, obligation to duty and loyalty to woman—the watchwords of true knighthood.

"We like to think that when our forefathers, offspring of men who established chivalry, came from overseas, they brought with them not only this ancient play, but the precepts it symbolizes. We may be proud, indeed, knowing that this is no hollow ceremonial, but an earnest that the flower of knighthood has not withered in the world, that in an age when the greed of gold was never so dazzling, the spirit of true gallantry has not faded but blooms luxuriant in the sparkling dews of the heart of this commonwealth.

"Most Noble Knights! In the name of that high tradition which this day preserves! In the memory of those other knights who practiced the tourney in its old-time glory! In the sight of your Queen of Beauty! I charge you, Southern gentlemen, to joust with that valor, fairness and truth which are the enduring glories of the knighthood of Virginia!"

Over the ringing applause, Nancy Chalmers looked at him with a little smile, quizzical yet soft. "Dear old major!" she whispered to Betty Page. "How he loves the center of the stage! And he's effective, too. Thirty years ago, father says, he might have been anything he wanted to—even United States Senator. But he would never leave the state. Not that I blame him for that," she added; "I'd rather be a church-mouse in Virginia than Crœsus' daughter anywhere else."

DANCED IN SURINAM JUNGLE

Explorer Tells Part He Took in Festivities With the Daughter of Native Chief.

In Harper's Magazine Charles W. Furlong told of attending a dance of the native tribes in Surinam, South Africa, and dancing with the daughter of a chief.

"The commandant and Mr. Smit were with me opposite the drummers, where a Djooka presented his daughter, a superb black creature, who, with two other girls, advanced into the ring, with coy step and posture, toward three men, with whom they danced in pairs; the girls, with a shy lilt of the head and constant moving of hands, passed and repassed, turning closely about their partners, but never touching. A girl would follow a man of her fancy as he walked from the ring center, then, as he turned at the edge, whisk away to a turn of laughing approval.

"Suddenly the dusky form of the girl previously presented, emerged from the throng with the same mysterious motions of the hands, almost touched me, turned like a flash and was gone. A loud murmur rose. Hands undid my coat. 'She likes you. You have got in dance.' The commandant eagerly explained himself as a gentleman as [illegible] to attempt such a ridiculous [illegible] to refuse [illegible] other girl; reassured by safety in numbers, my strong susceptibilities to the rhythm of music enabled me to adapt some slight proficiency in 'buck-and-wing' dancing and to become a moment later an integral part of that throbbing throng."

Case of Connection.

Did you ever have a forceful female presiding in your kitchen who kept you constantly in a turmoil for fear she might bring the house down about your ears?

Rose Stahl tells a story of such a treasure belonging to a family who lived in California.

One afternoon the town experienced a slight shock of earthquake.

To My Fellow Democrats and Fellow Citizens:

One of the boys who met Croxton's seasoned veterans when they came to burn our State University, was B. B. Comer, and my old Confederate heart has always warmed toward him, and grows warmer as the years grow.

I am for Comer for more reasons than one. He is my neighbor and friend. He is brave and he is honest, every inch a man, whose word is everywhere in Alabama as good as his bond, and he does his duty. He always has done his duty. He did it when he was Governor, and we know that with him at Montgomery Alabama's honor is safe and the public peace and order secure.

How about his opponent? I have no personal reason for criticizing Mr. Henderson. I would not utter a word to harm him or hurt his family or his friends. But if this were my last message to my countrymen in this world, I would warn them against electing a man Governor who surrendered a great cause, as did Mr. Henderson in the recent rate surrender, the humiliation of which Alabamians can never forget nor forgive. A man who gave up the ship with victory in sight is not the man for Chief Executive of a people who value their record for persistence in war and for steadfastness in peace.

EDW. W. RUCKER.

CAPT. FRANK S. WHITE FOR COMER

Captain Frank S. White, when asked how he stood in the race for Governor, said:

"Yes, I am for Mr. Comer, for the reason that Mr. Comer was out-spoken and earnest in his support of me in my late race for the Senate. I am for Mr. Comer because his views on political subjects, in the main, accord with mine. We possess, in common, the view that our business men and farmers will be more prosperous and that a better citizenship will be developed by the people controlling the affairs of the State themselves, rather than surrendering them to selfish interests outside of the State. He has shown his friendship for the masses by obtaining for the common schools, during his late administration, the largest amount ever appropriated for the same length of time. He also showed his friendship for Confederate veterans by securing for them during his administration, more money for pensions than had ever been obtained in any previous administration. Mr. Comer has shown his capacity for business affairs by the manner in which he has succeeded with his own."

OPEN LETTER TO CHAS. HENDERSON

You and your campaign committee are circulating the statement that I had the cotton mills exempted from taxation.

In various county papers under paid advertisement by your managers, is the statement that I had special legislation enacted to provide a rate of 50 cents a ton on coal to my mill at Sylacauga.

Both these statements are false and you know it.

B. B. COMER.

H. S. D. MALLORY FOR COMER

Selma, Ala., April 14, 1914.

Hon. B. B. Comer,
Birmingham, Ala.

Appreciate invitation to be present Wednesday night. Regret I cannot. You have my earnest support for the nomination. I have that confidence in the Democratic voters that causes me to believe you will win. I believe the people are determined to banish from Alabama politics those allied interests whose political influence is a menace to the welfare of our commonwealth.

(Adv.) H. S. D. MALLORY.

Ancient Cult of the Flycatcher.

Beelzebub was the fly god of Ekron (referred to in II Kings 1:2, 3, 4 and 16). The great god Baal was sometimes worshiped as the "lord of the fly," as he who drives off the flies. The flies were then and are now most severe enemies in Palestine and Egypt. We remember well how we had to be continually fighting them off while there we were traveling in those lands. (The flies buzzed up the eyes of the children and Ramsay noticed that they rarely—sometimes—blinked.

HENDERSON MEETING

Education.

During Mr. Comer's term of office, no appreciable increase was made in the increase of the length of term of the public schools in the rural districts. Appropriations of $400,000 to the University of Alabama (Comer Hall), $226,000 for Auburn. (He was one of the trustees, and got another Comer Hall.) The appropriation per capita for the boys and girls in the public schools is $2.85. The per capita for University students is $290. Long on Comer Halls and short on length of terms of rural schools.

Mr. Henderson declares that every white child in Alabama should be given equal opportunity with every other white child of the other States of the Nation for the attainment of its maximum of usefulness when it reaches its maturity. We favor the education of the masses, and guarantee to the people, that, in the event of our success in this contest, every white school in Alabama shall be taught at least seven months in every year. We favor increasing salaries of teachers, so that our best teachers, most of whom were educated in normal schools at State expense, will find it more advantageous to teach school in Alabama, even in the rural districts, than to go to other States where more liberal salaries are paid, or to abandon the profession altogether for more profitable lines.

Child Labor.

And just at this point, and in this connection, I want to give expression to our views on Child Labor. It is impossible to pass this subject without criticising, most forcibly, the past record of Mr. Comer in this connection. When he was Governor of this State, all efforts at Child Labor Legislation were defeated. When the good ladies who had devoted years of faithful study and arduous toil to the task of relieving the condition of child labor, not only in the South, but over our great country, women of the very first rank in our State and Nation, besought the executive for favorable consideration of their plans and purposes, they were coldly turned down. Some comment was made on this at the time, but it was never brought to the attention of the public as it should have been. Mr. Comer is the owner and operator of a number of cotton mills in Alabama. His principal source of revenue is from these mills, wherein the little children, under our exceedingly faulty laws on the subject, are made to grind out their tender lives that dollars may be the more quickly multiplied in his already plethoric coffers. Can you expect any improvement in the laws from this man? Has he promised any betterment?

Mr. Henderson stands committed, in this matter, that if he shall be chosen Governor of this State, that no white child under fourteen years of age shall be permitted to work in any cotton mill or other public utility. Note carefully this important pledge. It effects the lives and welfare of hundreds of innocent children. The children who in due time will be the mothers and fathers of other children, and the future citizens of the State. Is it worth while to reach out the helping hand to these precious little ones?

Conservation.

And then, on the question of the conservation of the natural resources of the State, one of the matters which directly and intimately effects each of our citizens, from the humblest to the greatest; a matter easily passed over, and a matter with which not all of our citizenship is so conversant as are a few of the favored ones who hope to, and who actually have, greatly profited from the peculiar manipulation with reference thereto, and which ought not to have been possible. As a matter of fact, while Mr. Comer was your Governor, and with his approval and sanction, laws were passed by and under which, without any return or reward to the State whatsoever, a great syndicate, or corporation, representing practically nothing but foreign capital and foreign directorate, was made a donation of all the water power sites in Alabama. This syndicate admitted in the public press in 1913 that they had power sites in Alabama producing 1,227,000 H. P. This syndicate has already gotten, also, the controlling interests in practically all of the street railways and electric lighting systems of the towns and cities in Northern Alabama, and I have been told that their oily tentacles have been gliding about the cities of Central and South Alabama seeking to gather more victims into the voracious arms of the giant octopus. Comer legislation gave them the most unbelievable powers and immunities. The legislation of Mr. Jelks' administration had been thought to be highly favorable to these interests, but those generous laws were paled into hazy shadows by the unheard-of gifts and grants of the syndicate-feeding Comer. They have given them the power to condemn, upstream to its source, and downstream to its mouth, everything in their way—a man's home, orchard, church, schoolhouse, grist mill, cemeteries, everything except a cotton mill, this being expressly exempted in the act. And all that is required of them is that they purchase and own two acres of land, one on either bank of the stream, whereon to erect their plants. It gives to them the right to condemn and flood public roads, public and private ferries, and gives to them the free use of every public road in the State of Alabama, without restrictions, except that the commissioners' court may direct as to just where they shall place the lines (which side, or in the middle), and, not only this; they have been given the absolute power to discriminate in the sale of their power. They have an absolute monopoly of all our water powers, given to them in perpetuity. With competition shut off, and with the power to thus discriminate, they can get their own price for the power that they furnish, or decline the power to whom they will. Furthermore, they have been exempted from taxation for a period of ten years from the time they begin the construction of their plants, with the single exception of farm rates on their two-acre sites, thus enabling them to string out these operations in such a manner as practically to operate continually tax free. This exemption from taxation means a loss to the State of Alabama in taxes of over $15,000,000 in the ten years that they are exempted, figuring on the lowest rental value of electricity in the United States. These great resources are gone! Regulation and control are all that is left us! Who do you desire to regulate and control these matters under the circumstances? The United States Government, at Mussel Shoals, on the Tennessee River, leased for 100 years at a rental of $3,000,000 for the 100 years, similar rights and properties, with reversion of the privileges and all improvements to the Government, and they also pay forty cents per horse power per annum for each horse power developed. Why should Alabama give away her choicest and best assets, and tax her people to raise the revenues which might easily come from such sources as these? Acts, 1903 (Jelks), p. 365. Gen. Acts, 1907 (Comer), p. 439. Also 1907, p. 520. Code, 1907, Sec. 3631 (Civil Code, p 467.)

I cannot go fully into this monstrous robbery of the State; but you can get pretty full information on the enormity of the powers given from any well posted lawyer in the State. Look into it, and see how that sort of thing compares with the policy of Mr. Henderson on the subject of conservation. Mr. Henderson says that the natural resources of Alabama, including the water powers with which to operate hydro-electric plants, should be wisely and prudentially conserved and held in trust for the people, and for future generations, and not be given by legislative enactment to hungry European millionaires and monopolistic corporations. Can you consistently give your approval to such a prodigality and waste of your property?

Taxation.

The mention of taxes in Alabama today is sufficient to bring to your minds all that I might quote of facts and figures, "and more, also, too." In brief, Mr. Comer increased our taxes 45 per cent., or nearly half as much again. He increased our expenditures, compared with the preceding administration, 62 per cent., an increase of nearly two-thirds. In this connection, his only promise seems to be to repeat the offense, "and more also!" Do you want any more? How much more can you stand, or will you stand? It seems he will go the limit, especially if he can keep up railroad fights and the like more or less extravagant amusements. In olden times rulers amused themselves feeding Christians to lions, compelling men to chop each other to death, and so forth; but the late Monarch of Alabama seemed to fatten mostly on his attempts to keep Milton H. Smith in the arena dancing to the music of "my legislature." And the people paid all the expense! Mr. Comer made a strong fight to have cotton mills exempted from taxation, and the bill was lost in the Senate by only one vote.

Mr. Henderson's policy, in case of his election, is clearly stated. The revenues of the State would be properly estimated for the ensuing 4 years, and under no condition would he attach his signature to a measure that would create a deficit in the State treasury or that would embarrass the credit of the State. There would be an equalization of taxes among the various counties, and only enough money in taxes should be taken from the people to administer the affairs of the State government with economy and efficiency. We believe that all property, both of individuals and corporations, should be fairly and justly taxed, and that no corporations or individual should be exempted from paying their just proportion of the public burden of taxation.

Public Officers Under Bond.

The unhappy experiences of the State in the loss of a large amount of the people's money has been a matter of widespread comment on the laxity of Alabama's affairs with reference to her officers. Prior to Mr. Comer's administration the President of the Convict Board handled no money derived from the hire of convicts. On February 28, 1907, Mr. Comer approved a bill changing Section 4447 of the Code of 1896, which made the law provide that contractors hiring convicts, should make monthly settlements with the President of the Convict Board, who, in turn, should make QUARTERLY settlements with the Auditor. The bill approved by Mr. Comer carried no bond, yet the President of the Convict Board handled a quarter of a million dollars every quarter. Mr. Comer did not return the bill to the Legislature, suggesting that a bond be fixed for the President of the Convict Board. Had this bill not been approved by Mr. Comer it would have been impossible for the Chief Clerk of the Convict Board to have absconded with over $100,000, $90,000 of which he drew from bank the day before he left the State, or left—just left.

Should we succeed, all State and County officials shall be placed under good and sufficient bonds. All checks for money due the State shall be made payable only to the State Treasurer, and every State official handling money shall be required to settle with the auditor at the close of each day's business. This will safeguard the people's interests, and will minimize the possibility of the further misuse of the people's money.

Local Option.

Mr. Comer's position upon local option has shifted about; but it is probably as well known to most of you as it is to me. He ran on a local option platform in 1906, and was elected by the people upon that platform. He slid onto a State-wide prohibition bill very shortly thereafter. He also branded as "cowardly skunks" all those who were against the ratification of the constitutional amendment on the subject. His conduct in this campaign seems to be calculated to give the glad hand to every faction, and not to assert himself with any degree of clearness on any position.

We believe in the principle of home rule and local self government, and in local option as it relates to the liquor traffic. This is Democracy. No man can gainsay it. This has been the policy of the Democratic party in Alabama, and is today. Unless the people of a county favor prohibition, the liquor laws will be nullified by the grand juries, and abrogated by the petit juries, and, therefore, become a farce. We have seen in our own State, and we have heard from other States, the evil of attempts to force upon a people legislation for which they are not prepared, or which they are unwilling to abide by and enforce. Every Democratic platform adopted since the War has contained a declaration for Local Option. Woodrow Wilson, William J. Bryan, and all party leaders, advocate the principles of Local Option. The agitation of State-wide prohibition will destroy the Democratic party if continued. In Tennessee, the bolting prohibition Democrats have twice elected Ben Hooper, a Republican, governor, defeating the first time the beloved Bob Taylor, and next Benton McMillan, a former Governor of Tennessee, recently appointed Minister to Peru by President Wilson. Prohibition by coercion has been tried in Alabama, and was abolished because it was a consummate farce.

There is a general propaganda being handed out over the State at this time, teaching, or endeavoring to teach, that Local Option means WHISKEY. Such teaching is not only wrong and erroneous, but it is being heralded for a purpose. A local optionist is not a "whiskey head," not by any manner of means. If a man is a prohibitionist, he ought to stick to his party and vote his ticket. If he is a Democrat, he ought to stick to his party and vote his ticket. There are many of the best men of our State who are Local Optionists, and who are the strongest prohibitionists, as to the liquor business. There are, also, those who favor whiskey, who are Local Optionists. We believe that the Democratic party has provided the most effectual, and in fact the only successful, method of ridding the State of the sale of liquor within its borders, and we believe that when a county votes whiskey out of its borders, a sufficiently strong sentiment against the business can then be had to uphold the law, and make its enforcement a living reality. Let the Democrats of Alabama stand together, and let them deal fairly and honestly by each county in the matter of whiskey or no whiskey, and the State will be ridded of this great evil more quickly and more certainly than by any attempted forcing on the people of unpopular legislation.

Equal Protection of the Laws.

It is quite well within our recollection that when Mr. Comer was governor he ordered the State troops to forcibly drive from their homes the humble laborers, who were guilty of no crimes, and who had committed no wrongs, but who were peacefully contending for their rights as they saw them. Under his direction, the humble shelters of these people were destroyd, and they were forcibly driven out into the woods, in the most heartless manner, to shift as best they could.

Our laws provide alike for rich and poor, for great and small, for learned and illiterate, and we believe that the humblest citizen within our borders is entitled to the equal protection of the law, and that it is treason for the governor of this great State to use troops to intimidate and oppress her people.

We believe in the rule of the people, and not in the rule of the special interests and monopolies, and we favor the control and regulation by the State as well as by the United States, of all monopolies and predatory interests. In the light of Mr. Comer's past record, would you get an administration in harmony with these views, if he were elected? Or would you logically expect such from the grave and fearless Trojan?

Railroads and Public Utilities.

We believe in the regulation and control of the railroads and all public utilities. Mr. Comer spent nearly $100,000 during campaign, and all his legislation came to naught. He is not, as is generally supposed, the "father of railroad regulation" in this State. Mr. Henderson is entitled to that honor, and Mr. Henderson's work is the only permanent and abiding improvement in this line today. A great deal is said recently about the settlement made by Mr. Henderson, or the present R. R. Commission. It is eminently better than the settlemenet made by Mr. Comer, and I assume that it was made in good faith for the interests of the people, and if there were not a political campaign on at this time, only the most favorable comment would be heard from the press on the subject. We do not believe that the railroad rate question has any place in Alabama politics. The Supreme Court of the United States has decided that the Railroad Commission has adequate power to make rates on intra-state railroads. After a fair hearing, the Railroad Commission should make rates that are fair and just, alike to the railroads and to the people. The State is to be congratulated upon the recent settlement of the rate litigation which has been recently consummated, under which the Louisville & Nashville, the Nashville & Chattanooga, and the Western of Alabama, have put into effect the two and one-half cent passenger rate. It is injurious to the State, it is demoralizing to the business interests of the State, that the railroads should be made the scape-goat of scheming and designing demagogues, who appeal to the passions and prejudices of the people and not to their reason and patriotism. The railroads are the friends and benefactors of any State, we need them, and our future development and prosperity in a large measure depends upon them. They should be regulated, and they should be controlled, and Alabama has adequate machinery to this end. Let's have an end of such humbuggery in politics.

Agriculture.

We are an agricultural people, and the State should do all in its power to build up and foster agriculture, horticulture, stock raising, etc., within the State. Not a single proposition directed to the advancement and aid of the farmer is set forth in Mr. Comer's platform. He has said nothing about the relief of the farmers from impending dangers and troubles. There is a notable silence in his utterances in this campaign on matters of agriculture.

We declare for the enactment of laws for the extension of the benefits which accrue to the people from the Agricultural Department. To this end we should encourage experiments in making the soil more productive, in the stamping out of all animal diseases which now deplete the herds and flocks of the farmers, and the eradication of the insect life which preys upon the crops. We realize that the farming class is the backbone of the State, and we pledge to them encouragement and help in every possible manner.

The Future Outlook.

We believe that Alabama today stands upon the threshhold of a great era of prosperity; and we believe that this great good can only be accomplished to the State through the administration of such a man as Mr. Henderson.

In this connection, again we must take a retrospective view of Comerism, and consider what has been the practical effect of that sort of statesmanship, if you choose to call it such, upon our commonwealth. The turbulence which has been the constant con-comitant of Comerism for the last few years in this State has cost the people of Alabama multiplied millions of dollars in progress and development. When Mr. Comer was governor, we had a panic, money could not be borrowed upon the best security, script was issued—all the result of unwise legislation and disrupting agitation brought about by Mr. Comer and his cohorts in the other States. And you know all those things better than any public speaker can tell them to you. Not a mile of new railroad was built in the State under his administration, nor is it likely that there would be should he be again returned to power. Mr. Comer's return to power would mean that the confidence of the business world would be again terribly shaken, and millions of dollars eager to come to Alabama would seek investment elsewhere. Our State needs to foster and encourage the bringing of wealth within our borders, for our development, and this capital, invited into our State for our own gain and benefit, should be given the assurance that sound business principles shall govern our affairs, and that money invested in Alabama will be as safe as in any State in the Union. Agitation, strife, turmoil, inaction and retrogression are not the things to build up a great State; those are the things that destroy and forbid prosperity.

We favor the cessation of agitation; we seek the paths of peace, prosperity, happiness—we want to have firmly established within our State sound and wholesome business principles—we realize that ours is one of the richest of the States, that as never before our prospects for a magnificent development are almost beyond comprehension; we are in the limelight on the world's stage of action; States and nations are beholding us; the Panama Canal, the gateway to the commerce of the world, is open, and the dream of the Honorable John T. Morgan is a reality. Men and women in many parts of the country are seeking our State as a splendid opportunity in the equable climate that we have, in the agricultural possibilities, in the many fields of endeavor. So we come to the people, as friends and brethren together, to appeal to them as patriots, to get together as a man, and put down demagoguery and its train of attendant destructiveness, and enthrone a reign of material prosperity and development in the State of Alabama, such as our natural resources and the manifold blessings of Almighty God have laid at our door. Fellow citizens, in conclusion let me ask that you consider fairly and dispassionately, which is best for you and for all the people of our beloved State. Two men are before you, two policies are outlined; you must choose between the two; there is no other alternative. Will you have strife, turmoil, agitation, extravagance, fightings and bitterness, and a man at your head who is the creator and preserver of all such destructive elements? Or will you turn your faces toward the glorious sunshine of peace and contentment, based upon the broad, sound principles of constructive statesmanship, and place at the head of your government the champion of such wholesome policies as we stand for in this campaign? Will you have Comer and chaos, or will you have Henderson and harmony?

CLANTON PRESS

PUBLISHED IN THE INTEREST OF CHILTON COUNTY AND HER PEOPLE

VOL 5. CLANTON, ALA., THURSDAY MAY 7, 1914 NO. 5

Probate Judge

Governor Comer's

Special Letter to the Farmer

To the Farmers of Alabama:

The election of May 11th, will be decided by the Democratic farmers of Alabama. As of old, their votes still control the destinies of this State.

I was born and raised a farmer and all my life I have been engaged in farming, my interests and wants and feelings identical with those of other farmers.

The farmer's prosperity and his hopes are menaced by the rapid approach of the boll weevil. This destructive pest now covers one-half of the territory of the State, in a few years cotton cannot be successfully grown in a large part of the State. The hope of the farmer and business interests depending upon him can only be found by converting the cotton farm into a grain and stock farm. To make this successful the farmer must have low freight rates and good roads. Mr. Henderson, who is opposing me for Governor, surrendered to the railroads the cheap rates which were established by the legislature when I was Governor, and gave back to the railroads $3,000,000 which they had unjustly exacted from the people by overcharges for carrying freight and passengers. If elected Governor, I will urge the restoration of these rates and make the rates the same in Alabama as they are in Georgia. A majority of the legislature already nominated agree with me on this subject.

To get the full benefit of these rates, the farmer must have good roads over which to carry his produce to market, and to make country life what it should be. If elected, I will urge the legislature to enact laws under which good roads will be established. I will urge the passage of laws to take out of the mines and lumber camps misdemeanor convicts and place them upon the public roads. As soon as the financial condition of the State will justify it, I will urge that all State convicts be worked upon the public roads, where the treatment of these unfortunates will be more humane, where the public will receive the benefits from their labor, and where they will be taken out of competition with free labor, as is now successfully done in Georgia and in Jefferson, Houston and other counties of this State.

The farmers of the State lose millions of dollars annually by the ravages of hog cholera, because they have no effective means of preventing it. If elected, I will urge the enactment of laws to prevent the existence and spread of this scourge on the prosperity of the people of the State. With cheap freight rates, good roads and the prevention of hog cholera in the State, the farmers can well afford to withstand the ravages of the boll weevil and devote their energies to other crops and to the growth of live stock.

If elected, I will urge the appropriation of a sufficient amount to educate our farmers, and especially the boys, in use of intensive methods in farming.

I will insist upon the largest possible appropriation for the common school of the country, so as to give country children a full nine months' term with comfortable houses in which to be taught.

I favor liberal appropriation for pensions to Confederate soldiers.

I will urge the abolition of the County Back Tax Commissioner, retention of the 60 per cent tax valuation, and will insist upon economy in the administration of the affairs of the State.

I appeal to you to join with me and sustain me in the great work of removing our Capitol from Montgomery, [illegible]

HIGH SCHOOL MEETING

On Wednesday night of last week a meeting of the citizens of Clanton was held at the court house for the purpose of devising ways and means for the location and establishment of the Chilton County High School.

The meeting was largely attended and much enthusiasm was manifested.

Prof. J. J. Pickens was elected chairman and Mr. Barney M. Roberts Secretary.

A committee of three, consisting of Messrs. J. B. Downs, E. E. Upchurch and W. I. Mullins, was appointed to secure options on different locations in the city, and the following committee was appointed to raise funds for the building and equipment of the school: Dr. E. A. Matthews, J. B. Downs W. I. Mullins, W. L. Popwell and E. E. Upchurch.

FRIDAY NIGHT MEETING'S

Another largely attended meeting was held on Friday night, with Mr. E. M. Pinckard as Chairman.

The reports of different committees were received. Three different sites were reported by Mr. W. I. Mullins, Chairman of the Location Committee.

The committee on raising funds reported that $7,710.00 had been subscribed up to the time of Friday night's meeting. Since the meeting $10,000.00 had already been subscribed and subscriptions continue to come in. Every citizen who feels an interest in the establishment of this institution should contribute to this fund, and may do so by seeing any member of the Finance Committee within the next few days.

A delegation composed of Clanton business men were appointed to go to Montgomery in a special car to confer with the High School Commission in reference to coming to Chilton county at an early date and visit all the towns that have made application for the school

This delegation realizes the importance of this institution to the county, and believing that Clanton is the proper place for its location, they will vigorously push Clanton's claims.

The citizens of Clanton want to see the school located. They are for Clanton first, but should Clanton's claims be rejected, our citizens will give their hearty support to the town selected by the Commission.

BUSINESS MEN VISIT LOCK 12

Upon invitation of the officials of the Alabama Power Co., a large delegation of prominent business men of Talladega arrived in Clanton on a special train Monday morning last, and went out to Lock 12 on an inspection trip of the Company's properties. The party numbered about eighty, and were met in Clanton by Automobiles from Birmingham and immediately driven to Lock 12, where about two hours were spent in viewing the great work of construction that has been going on there for the past year and a half.

The party was in charge of Vice-President, R. A. Mitchell of Gadsden, and Mr. J. K. Lanning, district passenger agent of the L. & N., at Anniston.

Today (Thursday) a delegation numbering over 200 from Anniston are the guests of the Power Co., at Lock 12.

CHILTON MAN KILLED NEAR SYLACAUGA

Late Monday afternoon, as an automobile party were returning from Rockford, in Coosa county, the dead body of Mr. M. B. Manning was found about two miles south of Sylacauga, where he had been killed, and evidences of robbery is the motive.

Mr. Manning resided near Thorsby and came up on the noon train and left Sylacauga on foot early in the afternoon. A pistol shot wound was found in his breast. An open knife was found in the road, and evidences of a struggle were to be seen. The body was brought to Sylacauga and turned over to a local undertaker.

IN MEMORY OF MR. G. W. PARRISH.

On April 27, grim death laid his cold hand on Mr. G. W. Parrish and cast a mantle of sorrow over his relatives and friends. After a few days patient suffering he bravely faced the common destroyer, and surrendered his life to God, who had given and preserved it for 41 years.

G. W. was a son of Rev M. J. and Sarah Parrish. He leaves a wife and six children and a host of relatives and friends to mourn his departure.

Nearly twenty years ago he united himself with the Missionary Baptist church and from that time until his passage into the Great Beyond he obeyed its mandates, living an earnest and devoted life, always striving to improve his talents so that he might return with an increase to his Maker.

Being an earnest worker with us in the Sunday-school work was but a preparation for the great Sunday school of eternity.

GOOD ROADS MEETING

The Executive Committee of the Birmingham-to-Montgomery Association met in Clanton last Friday and formulated plans for a big barbecue and reception to be held at Clanton on Friday, May 29.

HON. TIPTON MULLINS

On April 23, 1914, occurred the death of Mr. Tipton Mullins. The end came as a sweet relief to a sufferer, who had, for the past few years, borne much pain. In the demise of Mr. Mullins, Chilton county has sustained the loss of one of its most useful and most highly respected citizens.

Mr. Mullins was a son of Mr. and Mrs. Oliver Mullins, who have, since their childhood, resided near Clanton. He was the oldest of a family of eight sons and daughters, he was very nearly 48 years of age, and the first member of the family to be claimed by death.

Having been reared upon the farm, God's out-of-doors held a peculiar fascination for him. In his last years, the contemplation of returning to the free, happy life of the farmer afforded genuine pleasure.

Educated primarily in the rural schools of the county, he always had at heart, the interests of the boys and girls who attended the county school.

Mr. Mullins was graduated from the Peabody Normal College in Nashville, with an A. B. degree. He engaged in teaching in his home county for a number of years, but followed this vocation as a stepping-stone to his chosen profession, the practice of law. He read law with the firm of Houghton & Collier, of Birmingham, and was admitted to the bar in '95. Immediately after admission to the bar, Mr. Mullins located in the county site of his native heath, and became a member of the Clanton bar; afterward he also became a member of the State Bar Association.

On the 3rd. of February, '99, Mr. Mullins became married to Roberta A. Johnson, eldest daughter of the late Jos. S. Johnson, of Maplesville, Chilton county. Mrs. Mullins, together with four children, respectively: Oliver, Mary Sue, Joseph and Sophia, survives her husband.

As a professional man, Mr Mullins enjoyed State-wide recognition He attained marked distinction before the bar of the State. His opinions have been sought when issues of vast import were brought into question. His decisions could always be safely relied upon as emanating from serious reasoning and a conscientious heart. He was active in politics; he stood firmly by his convictions and always advocated those principles that, in his opinion would accrue to the greatest possible amount of good.

He served as a member of the State Democratic Executive Committee, for a period of ten years. He also served for the same length of time as Chairman of the Democratic Executive Committee of Chilton county. At the time of his death he was the local attorney for the L. & N. Railroad; he was also local attorney for the Southern Railway and for the Alabama Power Company.

In retrospecting the life of Mr. Mullins, it is clearly evident that he cherished a high ideal; from which he moulded his own strong character. In public life, in church work, and in the home relation, he was capable, resolute, sympathetic and conscientious. He loved his God and served him by serving his fellowmen.

The funeral services were held in the Clanton Baptist church, of which church he was a member

THE ONLY TWO REAL ISSUES

After all the various attempts made by liquor and special interest newspaper organs to muddy the waters by dragging in matters that have little or no material bearing on the gubernatorial campaign with the hope of saddling Charles Henderson on the people of Alabama as a continuation of the policies of the O'Neal administration, try though they may, they can't get away from two propositions which are the real issues in the contest.

These are, First, the important part Henderson had in going squarely back on the people's interests and costing them millions of dollars through that railroad rate surrender, whereby the recalcitrant railroads got everything and the people lost everything after the people had virtually won their case on its merits.

Secondly, Henderson is closely affiliated with the O'Neal administration which is exercising every influence at its command to elect him. His success would mean the perpetuation of policies and methods that are repugnant to the ideas and wishes of a great majority of the people of Alabama.

The people have already expressed their views and sentiments on both of these propositions. When they defeated at the polls Julian and McCord, Henderson's colleagues on the railroad commission who had a minor part in "putting over" that surrender of the people's interests, and elected in their places two gentlemen who were practically unknown in the public life of the State, they went on record as being thoroughly dissatisfied with the surrender.

The people also expressed their views and wishes as to a possible perpetuation of the O'Neal administration policies when they defeated at the polls practically all the candidates who had the misfortune to be affiliated with the O'Neal regime either by appointment from that source or through sympathies.

Charles Henderson is undertaking to carry both of these ponderous loads. It is beyond the capacity of any man, and Henderson will be forcefully reminded of the fact on May 11th, through an overwhelming and ignominious repudiation at the ballot box. The wonder is why he did not come down before this in the interests of peace and to prevent further useless political agitation. But perhaps he was "in the hands of his friends" who are undertaking to elect him, and had to follow their dictates as indicated in his attitude towards the allied interests, including the liquor trust.—Birmingham Ledger.

Aunt Dinah was a colored saint in Charleston, who could shout above the entire congregation. It was the custom during the collection to sing "Fly abroad, thou mighty Gospel," and Aunt Dinah always threw back her head, shut her eyes, and sang away lustily till the plate was returned to the altar.

Deacon Alphronius Green, noting this, stopped when he reached her pew one Sunday, and said:

"Look-a-heah, Dinah! What use you a-singing 'Fly abroad, thou mighty Gawspel' ef you ain't give nothin' to make her fly?"

Startling Contrasts Between O'Neal-Henderson Claims and the Actual Truth.

The O'Neal-Henderson combination has given the State the most INEXCUSABLY WASTEFUL AND EXTRAVAGANT ADMINISTRATION in its history. Note the WASTE of money of this school of politics as compared with that of Governor Comer.

STATE OF ALABAMA.

MONTGOMERY, AT THE CAPITOL.

I, C. B. Smith, State Auditor, hereby certify that the above and foregoing figures are true and correct as shown by the Auditor's books of the disbursements under the Comer and O'Neal administrations, showing the exact amount each spent - Governor Comer for four years and Governor O'Neal for three years. Given under my hand and seal of office this 29th day of April, 1914.

C. B. Smith
State Auditor.

From the above figures certified by the State Auditor we find that Governor Comer spent during his administration as Governor $21,030,121.11, or an average of $5,257,530.28 for each and every year while in office. It shows that Governor O'Neal spent as Governor for the THREE YEARS he has been in office $19,674,713.98, or for each and every year while in office $6,558,237.99.

O'Neal annual disbursements	$6,558,237.99
Comer's annual disbursements	5,257,530.28
	$1,300,707.71

thus showing the excess of O'Neal's disbursements over Comer's to be for each year and every year he has been in office the SUM of $1,300,707.71, which makes O'Neal's excess for the three years the total of $3,902,123.13.

This $1,300,707.71 EXCESS disbursements of O'NEAL over COMER, divided by 365 DAYS in a year shows the average DAILY EXCESS expense of O'Neal's administration over COMER'S administration to be $3,563.03.

Every dollar disbursed during the Comer administration is accounted for and was expended for some useful purpose. Mr. Henderson condemns this, but approved the O'Neal expenditures, waste, extravagance and all.

Governor Comer left $975,000 in the treasury, so reported by the committee of the O'Neal Legislature, who went there and counted it. In spite of this Governor O'Neal has been complaining of bankruptcy ever since he got a chance at the treasury, and began to spend the public money at the rate of $18,000.00 A DAY.

HENDERSON REITERATION

Seeing defeat staring him in the face ex-Governor Comer, with the same bull-dozing tactics displayed during his four years of disastrous administration of the State's affairs, addressed a telegram to Charles Henderson during the past week demanding a correction of a statement of the Henderson Campaign Committee that Mr. Comer enjoys a coal rate discrimination secured by the passage of an act of one of the latter's special sessions of his Legislature. Instead of making a correction, Mr. Henderson reiterated the assertion and below is given the complete proof in the matter:

"Birmingham, Ala., April 29, 1914.

"Mr. Charles Henderson, President Alabama Railroad Commission, Montgomery, Ala.

"Your Campaign Committee advertises in many weekly papers as follows: 'Special rates for Mr. Comer. Mr. Comer had one of his special sessions of the Legislature to pass an act authorizing the railroads to give him a special coal rate for his cotton mills at Sylacauga of 50 cents per ton, while the public pays 70 cents. Mr. Comer now enjoys this discrimination.' You know this was impossible and false. The Sylacauga coal rate was given years before I was Governor, in connection with Talladega, Anniston, Gadsden, Alabama City and Attalla, with the making of which I had nothing whatever to do. This rate applies equally to all the above points to any one using steam coal. As president of the Railroad Commission, correct this injustice done to a citizen and shipper of the State.

(Signed) "B. B. COMER."

Charles Henderson, the Man Whom Alabama Needs.

"Hon. B. B. Comer, Birmingham, Alabama:

"Your telegram of this date asking me as president of the Railroad Commission to correct what you call an injustice to you regarding the charge that your Legislature of 1907 passed an act permitting you to enjoy special rates on coal to your cotton mill at Sylacauga, received. It is my duty, and I should be glad to correct any error or prevent any injustice, even though by so doing you were elected and I was defeated, if such error existed or injustice was done, but the facts prove that the charges made against you are correct and true. A bill prepared by me was passed by your Legislature and approved by you as Governor on February 23, 1907, which provided that no person, firm or corporation should pay a greater or lesser rate than that charged to all others.

"Under this act of the Legislature, you could not have legally gotten your coal hauled to Sylacauga at any less rate than the public paid. Your special Sylacauga coal rates were in force before you were Governor, but this was also before I was Railroad Commissioner, and I have never known how you managed to get these special favors, but had the act I prepared, which was passed by your Legislature, remained unamended or unrepealed by you and your Legislature, you would be paying today the same rate on your coal to your Sylacauga cotton mill that the public at Sylacauga is paying, but on November 23, 1907, you had your Legislature pass and you approved an act that again made legal these special rates for your cotton mill at Sylacauga.

"In addition to this, your Legislature in February, 1907, tied the Railroad Commission's hands by passing the maximum rate bill, which prevented the raising of any rates, and also tied the Commission's hands by specifically prescribing that the Commission could reduce, but could not advance, any rates, thereby placing your special Sylacauga coal rates, not only out of reach of the Railroad Commission, but out of reach of the courts. The further statement in your telegram, that these special rates apply equally to all parties using steam coal in the towns named by you is untrue, and not borne out by the facts.

We do not ask you to do our experimenting

During the twenty-one years in which we have been building motor cars, we have never asked the public to do our experimenting. Every unit of the Haynes car is designed, checked and thoroughly tested before receiving its final O. K.

The American Simms Dual High Tension Magneto is positively the most simple dual ignition ever devised. It was recommended by the Haynes engineers after careful speed and compression tests proved beyond doubt that it was unusually efficient and absolutely dependable.

The Leece-Neville Starting and Lighting Separate Unit System was chosen in 1910 because of its high efficiency and has been used on the Haynes car ever since, although numerous other starting and lighting systems have been tested in our laboratories from time to time. This system is dust-proof and has proven itself 100% efficient in every instance. There is no apparatus, however, on the

that has been subjected to a more severe test than the Vulcan Electric Gear Shift. This device is even a greater improvement than the starting and lighting system, because it not only simplifies the control but positively prevents stripping of gears.

While the electric gear shift is a great invention, it is not radically new, being just a natural development of the electro-magnet, which has been in use since 1820. The same principle is used by steel companies to lift tons and tons of metal; the electric railways adopted it long ago to shift switches automatically, and the little hammer that strikes the bell in your telephone is actuated by the impulse of a similar magnet.

The Haynes car is not an experiment. It represents the height of refinement, convenience and reliability in motor car design. It's the year-ahead car.

One of the men of the First Royal Scots Fusiliers, who reached Southampton recently from South Africa, was Private McDevet, who, though in the prime of life, has snow-white hair.

He had a narrow escape from being buried alive in India. After an attack of fever he was pronounced to be dead, and was placed on a slab in the mortuary to await burial. Two hours later the sentry outside heard knocking from within. He opened the door and was startled to see McDevet sitting up.

The experience turned McDevet's hair white. The sentry was driven mad by the shock and died.—London Tit-Bits.

AFTER HALF-CENTURY MARK

No Real Reason Why Man of That Age Should Not Be Capable of Good Work.

Speaking of the age of efficiency, a Toledo gentleman located it beyond the half-century mark. He calls our attention to the fact that Columbus was fifty-six when he discovered America, that Darwin, Kant, Spencer, Wagner, Haydn, and others did their greatest and best work when far past the fifty mark, and that some have persisted in great accomplishment until seventy or more years of age. This argument won't help the man who is aged and broken and tottering at fifty, will it? But it will hearten the man of forty or more who has been careful of his resources, to think that to him achievement still is a possibility—and it may find him the opportunity to achieve by convincing some master of opportunity that years do not always spell senility or loss of virility. The young man may reflect that he has the opportunity to run a long race—and he may catch sight of the fact that the man of fifty is not necessarily a "back number" merely because of his half-century.

SKIN TORTURES WILL YIELD TO RESINOL

If you have eczema, ringworm, or other itching, burning, unsightly skin eruptions, try resinol ointment and resinol soap and see how quickly the itching stops and the trouble disappears, even in the severest, stubbornest cases. Resinol ointment is also a wonderful household remedy for pimples, dandruff, sores, burns, wounds, boils, piles, and for a score of other uses where a soothing, healing application is needed.

Resinol contains nothing of a harsh or injurious nature and can be used with perfect safety on the tenderest or most irritated surface. Every druggist sells resinol ointment (50c and $1), and resinol soap (25c). Avoid worthless, harmful, imitations.—Adv.

The Trimmer.

"The late Bishop Bowman," said a Philadelphia minister, "once rebuked my too soft and conciliatory leanings by telling me a story about a little girl.

"This little girl, it seems, had written with great pains a composition on the cow. The composition ran as follows:

"'The cow is a very useful animal.'

"That evening the bishop dined at the little girl's house, and her mother, since she was a very little girl, indeed, was proud of the composition, had requested its author to read it aloud.

"The little girl got her manuscript, but, instead of reading it as it stood, she amended it on the bishop's behalf so that it ran:

"'The cow is the most useful animal there is except religion.'"

Sounded Like It.

Mr. Murray, irritable from long confinement to a sick bed, cocked up his ears and listened.

"Phat's all that piano-bangin' in th' parlor?" he then demanded, glaring at his wife.

"'Tis our daughter Mary takin' her first steps in piano-playin'," rejoined the wife.

"Her first steps! Phat's she doin', walking on the kayboard?"

Why?

Aiden has reached the "Why" age. It isn't always easy to answer the boy. One day he lay on the floor with his eyes shut.

"Am I asleep, mother?" he asked.

"You know you aren't," said his mother.

"Well, I'm lying down; my eyes are shut, why ain't I asleep?"

HAPPY NOW

Family of Twelve Drink Postum.

"It certainly has been a blessing in our home" writes a young lady in regard to Postum.

"I am one of a family of twelve, and, before using Postum, would make a healthy person uncomfortable by often complaining of headache, dizziness, sour stomach, etc., from drinking coffee.

"For years mother suffered from palpitation of the heart, sick headache and bad stomach and at times would be taken violently ill. About a year ago she quit coffee and began using Postum.

"My brother was troubled with headache and dizziness all the time he drank coffee. All those troubles of mother and brother have disappeared since Postum has taken the place of coffee.

"A sister was ill nearly all her life with headache and heart trouble, and got all she cared for was coffee and tea. The doctors told her she must leave them alone, as medicine did her no permanent good.

"We thought nothing would take the place of coffee until we induced mother to try Postum. Now her troubles are all gone and she is a happy little woman enjoying life as people should."

Name given by the Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich.

Postum now comes in two forms: Regular Postum — must be well boiled. 15c and 25c packages.

Instant Postum—is a soluble powder. A teaspoonful dissolves quickly in a cup of hot water and, with cream and sugar, makes a delicious beverage instantly. 30c and 50c tins.

The cost per cup of both kinds is about the same.

"There's a Reason" for Postum.

CLAYTON SUCCEEDS LATE JUDGE JONES

Not Known Just When He Will Take Up Office—Nomination Confirmed by the Senate.

Washington.—The nomination of Henry D. Clayton to be United States judge for the Middle and Southern district of Alabama was sent to the Senate by the President. The Senate, after a brief executive session, confirmed Judge Clayton without the formality of referring the nomination to the judiciary committee for a day, as is the usual procedure.

It is not definitely settled just when Judge Clayton will assume the duties of his office. Representative Webb, the ranking democrat on the House judiciary committee, who will in all probability succeed Judge Clayton as chairman of the committee, said that he had personally requested Judge Clayton to remain at the head of the judiciary committee until the anti-trust bills now pending were reported to the House. This may be done at almost any time, as the bills are said to be completed.

SENTIMENT IN IRON IS NOT IMPROVED

Absence of Important Contracts for Material Results in Concessions.

New York.—Dun's weekly trade review says:

While some betterment is discernable in certain branches of trade, in others a further moderate recession in activity is manifest. Fundamental conditions are sound and the agricultural outlook augurs well for the future, yet hesitancy is general in anticipating forward requirements.

Complaints are still heard, especially in the east, of the restraining influence of unsettled weather, which checks a full retail distribution of seasonable merchandise and also hampers outdoor work. Although expansion in building operations is to be expected at this period of the year, nearly all wholesale lines dependent upon new construction are at present quiet. Absence of any important contracts for structural material has resulted in price concessions, and sentiment in iron and steel is not improved.

Failures this week numbered 308 in the United States against 293 last year, and 53 in Canada compared with 34 a year ago.

CANCER DEATH RATE.

New York 82 in Each 100,000; Boston 112, and Chicago 86.

New York.—In a statement issued showing the death rate of cancer in 1913 the American Society for the Prevention of Cancer calls attention to the need of the national movement to check the death rate from this source. For New York city the rate was 82 in each 100,000 of the population against an average of 19 for the last five years. Boston's rate was 112 against an average of 79 for the last five years, and for Chicago 86 against an average of 81. Other cities showed similar increases in the last five years.

The cancer society has recently made special efforts to enlist the cooperation of nurses and nurses' organizations in its work.

It is believed the instruction of nurses as to the essential facts will be of special value in leading to a more general dissemination of information regarding symptoms, diagnoses, treatment and preventive measures.

Safety Measures Before Reichstag.

Berlin.—The international convention on safety-at-sea, signed at the international conference in London last July, was referred by the German reichstag to a second reading.

More Banks in System.

Washington.—One hundred and ninety-three additional banks subscribed to federal reserve bank stock in their respective districts, according to the treasury department. This makes a total of 8753 subscriber banks.

SOMETHING OF A DIPLOMAT

Jimmie's Bright Idea Worked for a Time, but Finally Ended in Disaster.

"What do you mane by writing me that my Jimmie can't pass into the next grade?" stormed an irate female, bursting into the principal's room. "An' after him doin' such grand work all the year."

"Why, Mrs. Flaherty," replied the teacher, "you must know better than that. I've sent you his report cards every month, and you know that his marks have been nearly all 'D's.'"

"Indade they hov, and yit you say he can't pass. I don't understand it, mum."

"I am afraid you don't understand our system of marking. D means deficient, you know."

"Sure I don't know phat that may be, mum, but Jimmie told me all about the letters. Sure 'D' is dandy, 'C' is corking, 'B' is bum, an' 'A' is awful—an' he's got 'C's' an' 'D's' ivery month."—Harper's Magazine.

AFTER HOSPITALS AND DOCTORS FAILED—EX-ZEMA-FO CURED.

D. Holmes, Ozone Park, Long Island, N. Y., writes: "While you have not asked for a testimonial, I feel that it is due. A preparation such as EX-ZEMA-FO should be known to everyone. I was a sufferer of that terrible disease called eczema for seven years, doctored with the most eminent New York specialists and several various Skin Hospitals to the expense of over $300. Two bottles of EX-ZEMA-FO cured me, and the best of it all was that I was able to give up the use of a salve, which was what they all prescribed. Your remedy EX-ZEMA-FO is a clean liquid, did not soil my linen and went right to the spot. I have been recommending it to every one afflicted with this disease and results have been the same as in my case.

Brothers, Eh?

A certain curate was of a painfully nervous temperament, and in consequence was constantly making awkward remarks intended as compliments—to the bishop and others.

Having distinguished himself in an unusual degree during a gathering of clergy at an afternoon tea a short while ago in the bishop's palace, he was taken to task for his failings by a senior curate, who was one of his companions on the way home.

"Look here," said Simms, the senior, decidedly, "you're a donkey. Why can't you keep quiet instead of making your asinine remarks? I am speaking to you as a brother."

Loud laughter interrupted him at this point, and for the moment he did not see the joke.

NATIVE OF THE SOUTHLAND

And Nothing Pleases This Lady More, Than to Praise Cardui, The Woman's Tonic.

Chillicothe, Ohio.—"I am a native of the Southland," says Mrs. Ed. Davis, of this town, "and nothing pleases me more than to speak a word of praise for Cardui, the woman's tonic, for I firmly believe that it snatched me from the grave. Although I do not need it now, I always keep a supply on hand.

I have been married 14 years, and had two children. After the youngest was born, I was not able to walk, and for four years, I was not strong enough to stand on my feet five minutes at the time, without something to support me.

After everything else had failed, I wrote to the Ladies' Advisory Department, of the Chattanooga Medicine Co., for advice, and they kindly told me what I needed. I commenced taking the Cardui Home Treatment. I used only about four bottles of the Cardui, but, today, I am well, can do my own work, and walk as far as I want to.

I can never praise Cardui enough, and my neighbors cannot get done wondering at the change in me."

Cardui will surely do as much for you, as it did for the writer of the above letter, if you will only give it a trial.

Don't delay. Begin taking Cardui today. Your druggist sells it.—Adv.

MR. TAX PAYER:

Comer is the real Business Governor.

O'Neal's Extravagant administration cost the state per month.....$546,519.00

Comer's Business Administration cost the state per month.....$438,127.00

Comer's saving to tax payers each month.....$108,392.00

It cost the present administration [backing Henderson] about $3,566.00 per day more or nearly one million and a quarter dollars each year to run the state than during Comer's administration.

Comer will save the people of Alabama over $1,3000.000.00 per year.

A vote for Comer is a vote to save the money of the taxpayers.

Some folks have the temerity to say that it was the merchant who was the beneficiary of the low freight rate and not the farmer, during the Comer administration. This was not the case, not on your sweet life. Jones paid the freight, and Jones is none other than the horny-handed son of toil.

Julian and McCord, the associate Railroad Commissioners were defeated on April 6. Henderson was the principal who pulled off the trade. What are you going to do with him?

This is the last week of the campaign, and the people of Alabama will decide next Monday who shall direct the affairs of this great commonwealth, the L. & N. R. R., Charles Lewis and his cohorts, or that champion of the people's rights, Hon. Braxton Bragg Comer.

Circuit Court convenes in Clanton next Monday ,and those attending court are respectfully invited to drop in at the Press office and make yourself at home. Those in arrears for their subscription are especially urged to pay us a visit.

Lowndes County voted that bond issue for good roads. The vote was unanimous in some precincts. That is as it should be. Lowndes needs several good roads. Birmingham Ledger.

We need several good roads in Chilton County, and the sooner our people realize that a bond issue is the only way to procure good roads, the better it will be for our county.

The Southern Railway and other friendly roads haul one ton fertilizer, for 99 cents while the L. & N., charges $1.50 for the same service, the Southern hauls 100 pounds of potatoes for 9 cents, while the L. & N. charges 21 cents. Why should they be allowed to do this? Ask O'Neal and Henderson. There are 110 comparisons like this.

Two gentlemen were discussing the Mexican situation, one remarking that with the probability of the intervention of foreign powers a long drawn-out conflict might result. Another, hearing the conversation, ventured this remark: "Why, that is dead easy, we could take the Democratic majority over the Bull Moose in Chilton county and lick that bunch to a frazzle."

GAILLARD COMES OUT FOR COMER

SAYS HENDERSON SHOULD BE RECALLED.

Uniontown, April 20.—(Special.)—B. P. Gaillard of Mobile, recently nominated for railroad commissioner, in a speech here tonight advocated the nomination of B. B. Comer for governor.

Mr. Gaillard took the ground that he would not only not support Henderson, but would favor his recall from his present office. His speech in part follows:

"A careful study of the official records of Messrs. Comer and Henderson leaves me no alternative but to support Governor Comer, quite apart from any personal feelings toward either candidate.

"As I read Mr. Henderson's record, I not only feel compelled to exert my personal influence against his promotion to the governorship, but if it were possible I would vote to recall him from his present office of president of the railroad commission."—Birmingham Age-Herald, May 1, 1914.

ARE YOU A DEMOCRAT?

If so, help to drive Alabama along the highway of progress by voting for Chas. Henderson for governor. He believes in better highways, better schools, better school houses. In fact he believes in prosperity in every respect. He believes in peace and harmony instead of hatred and strife. A vote for Henderson is a vote for peace and harmony. A vote for Comer is a vote for strife and turmoil. A vote for Henderson is a vote that will demand more labor. A vote for Comer is a vote that if Comer is elected will cause many a man to lose a job, thereby causing many women and children to go hungry. I have been reliably informed that if Comer was elected saw mills would shut down, and that hands that are working at different jobs would be layed off.

Listen! Does any man want to cast his ballot for a man when it is likely to cause 10,000 men in Alabama to lose a job? God forbid that I ever do such a thing. You may say this is all bosh, but when it is too late you will see. Comer said last week, if he was elected he would urge laws passed that would take the convicts out of the mines and place them on the roads as soon as the financial condition of the State will justify it.

Listen! If he is elected, and don't beat what he did before, the financial condition of the State will never justify it. He found $1,200,000 in the treasury; raised our taxes 45 per cent, making $5,000,000 more. He spent it all and left an empty treasury. Does that sound like the financial condition of the State will justify anything under his administration?

Henderson is a good, honest, sober, Christian gentleman, and he said there was a business side as well as a political side. Why not help to save the State from bankruptcy?

Democrat.

C. REESE MULLINS

WRITES MR. JOHN PATTON, JR., HIS VIEWS ON THE COUNTY HIGH SCHOOL.

Clanton, Ala., May 5, 1914.

Mr. John Patton, Jr.,
Jemison, Ala.

Dear John: Please allow me to congratulate you on your enthusiasm to build the Chilton County High School, as I feel the same enthusiasm myself. Now for you to want this school built in your town is nothing more than natural and I am sure all the good people of Jemison would like to see this school in their midst as all good people stand for higher education. I want you and your people to know that I stand on this question where I have always stood, and that is if the High School Commission should locate this school in some town or some other place in the county, I, for one, am willing for such community to have the $4000 appropriated by the county for this school, and I have my doubts as to any place in the county building this school without the help of the county. This is by no means a small undertaking, but one of considerable magnitude, and if we fail to build this school, and to build it now, I say shame on us all. I am with you for the Chilton County High School, let it be located where it may, also for better rural schools, free school books and good roads.

Your friend,
C. Reese Mullins.

DEATH OF W. C. CULVER

Mr. W. C. Culver, who was an employe of the Jackson Lumber Co., was seriously hurt on the 17th day of January while coupling cars. He was immediately carried to an infirmary in Selma, where he received the best of treatment. He improved, and at the end of four or five weeks he returned home and remained there a couple of weeks. His condition, however, grew worse and he was carried back to the infirmary and grew weaker day by day until the end came May 2nd, at 12:40.

Mr. Culver was a Woodman of the World, and by losing him Riderville Camp No. 759 lost one of its best members. He was buried on Sunday at Stanton by the Woodmen fraternity of which he was a member. The deceased was well thought of in this section and his death comes as a severe shock to his many friends.

Weep not, loved ones, for the Lord saw fit to take him home, where love, happiness and kindness can never decease or end, where kind and loving Jesus is his Saviour and friend.

A Woodman's Wife.

Mr. Comer, in his legislative message of January 15, 1907, says: "At ten cents a pound our farmers make money on cotton and get a fair return on their lands and labor." The average amount per pound which the manufacturer makes on cotton goods is 12 to 15 cents per pound. Mr. Comer O. K.ed the Comer Legislature's act taxing everything the farmer uses to make 10 cents a pound cotton, and exempting everything the millionaire mill owner uses to make 12 to 15 cents profit per pound on the same cotton. Mr. Comer is proud of this act of personal thrift at the expense of the "horny handed son of toil," and says he will "do it again," if given the chance. Will you vote on the 11th to give him a chance to "do it again?"

JUDGE DENSON FOR COMER

Hon. B. B. Comer,
Birmingham, Ala.,

Dear Sir:

I am heartily and unqualifiedly in favor of your candidacy, and believing that your nomination and election to the office of governor will better subserve the state, I hope and trust that you will be unanimously nominated by an overwhelming majority.

But for important business engagements I would join with others of your friends in the advocacy of your candidacy on the stump.

With sentiments of highest esteem, I am,

Yours truly,
(Signed) N. D. Denson.

Mr. Comer had one of his special sessions of the legislature to pass an act authorizing the railroads to give him special coal rates for his cotton mills at Sylacauga of 50 cents per ton, while the public pays 70 cents.

Mr. Comer now enjoys that Discrimination Cotton mills at Selma, Enterprise, Uniontown, Montgomery, Mobile, Piedmont, Jacksonville, Florence and other points in the State of Alabama, which compete with Mr. Comer have no such special privilege.

CAVALRY LANCE AGAIN IN USE

European Armies Now Adopting Weapon Discarded and Put on Retired List.

London.—A fortune may be waiting for the person who invents a collapsible yet strong and serviceable lance, which is rapidly regaining some of its old-time favor as a cavalry arm in European armies. For some time back the six English regiments of lancers have had their favorite arm restored to them after it had been practically placed on the retired list, or, in other words, reserved for parade purposes only. The French dragoons and chasseurs are now also equipped with lances, so that, as the papers say, they shall not be behind the Prussian Uhlans in this respect. The French weapon is the lightest of all; it is a hollow steel shaft nine feet long and it only weighs four pounds. It is claimed to be a handier and better balanced weapon than the German. The French hussars and cuirassiers will not be equipped with the lance for the present.

The latest addition to the cult of the lance is the Russian war department, which has just decided to arm the principal of the czar's cavalry regiments with a formidable steel shaft nearly 12 feet long and weighing close upon six pounds. The Austrian and Italian cavalry are still holding aloof from the adoption of the lance for service purposes. The one great objection to it is that the shaft is in the way when not actively in use, but there is no doubt—so military authorities think—that the lance would be universally adopted if it could be made to fold or to shut up like a telescope, and yet be instantaneously ready for active use.

FLYING WILL BE COMMON

Rudyard Kipling Makes Prediction In Lecture Before Royal Geological Society.

London.—Rudyard Kipling, lecturing before the Royal Geological society on the subject of "Travel," referred to the past modes of travel as obsolete and said he was looking forward to sky travel. He said:

"The spirit of man is alone unaltered and unappeasable. The time is not far off when a traveler will know and care just as little whether he is over land or sea as today he knows or cares whether a steamship is over 40 fathoms or over Tuscarora deep.

"Then we shall hear the lost ports of New York and Bombay howling like Tarshish and Tyre. Incidentally, too, all our mental pictures of travel will be changed."

The Organization of the Chilton County Improvement Association.

The Chilton County Improvement Association met at the court house April 25, and was duly organized. The meeting was opened by the President, Miss Mary C. Gibson.

Representatives from different beats were present. Routine business took all the forenoon, in the afternoon interesting and instructive addresses were delivered by Miss Helen G. Harlan, County Red Cross Visiting Nurse; J. Sterling Moran, field agent of the Rural Organization Service; Miss Elizabeth Hoops, teacher of Domestic Science in the Thorsby Institute, and others. Deepest and most enthusiastic interest was manifested from start to finish.

The following committees were appointed for the different branches of work:

Committee on Constitution and By-Laws, J. S. Moran, Miss Helen G. Harland, W. T. Bean, Supt., Mrs. W. T. Callen and Judge E. B. Deason.

Committee on Information:

Judge E. B. Deason, Mrs. J. M. Horn, Supt. Bean, Mr. W. H. Conway and Mrs. W. T. Callen.

It was resolved at this meeting that the officers shall be designated as follows:

A County President, Beat Manager, District Superintendent, Secretary and Treasurer. As soon as possible the committees' will draft and have printed pamphlets on constitution, by-laws and suggestive improvements, which the Secretary will mail to the respective Beat Managers.

Following are the suggestions for Town and County Associations:

HYGIENE AND SANITATION.

1—For the incorporated towns; (a) Better water supply and sewerage system; Town Councils should be urged to act in this vital matter to prevent disease. (b) Better toilet facilities and greater cleanliness in public buildings, railway stations etc. (c) Better methods of destroying, or removing garbage—using covered barrels for same until it is removed. (d) "Cleaning up" days appointed when all trash including tin cans, paper, brush etc., shall be removed from streets and yards, (e) Screening of meets, fruits and vegetables urged upon our merchants, as flies are known to carry disease germs. (f) Screening of homes.

2—Country District; (a) Better wells—walled up and covered in such a way that surface water cannot enter, pumps installed where it is possible, as the ropes and buckets handled by different members of the household are apt to become infected with desease germs and so find access to the water. (b) Sanitiary privies at our schools, churches and homes. This is one of our greatest needs to prevent soil polution from typhoid fever, hookworm, tuberculosis and other diseases. Pamphlets describing simple, inexpensive buildings as recommended by the State Board of Health can be obtained free of charge from Dr. V. J. Gragg County Health Officer, Clanton, or Miss Helen G. Harlan, County Nurse, Clanton. (c) Screening of homes. (d) "Cleaning up" days appointed when all trash including tin cans, paper, brush etc., shall be removed from the yards of schools, churches, homes and cemeteries. (e) Organize industrial classes in each school. (f) Stimulate the people for better equipped schools

Charles Henderson, if elected Governor, will enforce ALL the laws and will bring criminals promptly to justice, thereby making life and property safe.

The VALIANTS of VIRGINIA

By HALLIE ERMINIE RIVES

ILLUSTRATIONS by LAUREN STOUT

COPYRIGHT BY BOBBS-MERRILL COMPANY

SYNOPSIS.

John Valiant, a rich society favorite, suddenly discovers that the Valiant corporation, which his father founded and which was the principal source of his wealth, has failed. He voluntarily turns over his private fortune to the receiver for the corporation. His entire remaining possessions consist of an old motor car, a white bull dog and Damory court, a neglected estate in Virginia. On the way to Damory court he meets Shirley Dandridge, an auburn-haired beauty, and decides that he is going to like Virginia immensely. Shirley's mother, Mrs. Dandridge, and Major Bristow exchange reminiscences during which it is revealed that the major, Valiant's father, and a man named Sassoon were rivals for the hand of Mrs. Dandridge in her youth. Sassoon and Valiant fought a duel on her account in which the former was killed. Valiant finds Damory court overgrown with weeds and creepers and decides to rehabilitate the place. Valiant saves Shirley from the bite of a snake, which bites him. Knowing the deadliness of the bite, Shirley sucks the poison from the wound and saves his life. Valiant learns for the first time that his father left Virginia on account of a duel in which Doctor Southall and Major Bristow acted as his father's seconds. Valiant and Shirley become good friends. Mrs. Dandridge faints when she meets Valiant for the first time. Valiant discovers that he has a fortune in old walnut trees. The yearly tournament, a survival of the jousting of feudal times, is held at Damory court. At the last moment Valiant takes the place of one of the knights, who is sick, and enters the lists.

CHAPTER XXIII.—Continued.

The twelve horsemen were now sitting their restive mounts in a group at one end of the lists. Two mounted monitors had stationed themselves on either side of the rope-barrier; a third stood behind the upright from whose arm was suspended the silver ring. The herald blew a blast, calling the title of the first of the knights. Instantly, with lance at rest, the latter galloped at full speed down the lists. There was a sharp musical clash, and as he dashed on, the ring flew the full length of its tether and swung back, whirling swiftly. It had been a close thrust, for the iron pike-point had smitten its rim. A cheer went up, under cover of which the rider looped back outside the lists to his former position.

In an upper tier of the stand a spectator made a cup of his hands. "The Knight of the Golden Spur against the field," he called. "What odds?"

"Five to one, Spotteswood," a voice answered.

"Ten dollars," announced the first.

"Good." And both made memorandum on their cuffs:

A second time the trumpet sounded, and the Knight of Castlewood flashed ingloriously down the roped aisle—a miss.

Again and again the clear note rang out and a mounted figure plunged by, and presently, in a burst of cheering, the herald proclaimed "The Knight of the Black Eagle—one!" and Chilly Lusk, in old-rose doublet and inky plume cantered back with a silver ring upon his pike.

No simple thing, approaching leisurely and afoot, to send that tapering point straight to the tiny mark. But at headlong gallop, astride a blooded horse straining to take the bit, a deed requiring a nice eye, a perfect seat and an unwavering arm and hand! Those knights who looped back with their pikes thus braceleted had spent long hours in practice and each rode as naturally as he breathed; yet more than once a horse shied in mid-course and at the too-eager thrust of the spur bolted through the ropes. Valiant made his first essay—and missed—with the blood singing in his ears. The ring flew from his pike, catching him a swinging blow on the temple in its rebound, but he scarcely felt it. As he cantered back he heard the major's bass pitting him against the field.

And then, suddenly, stand and field all vanished. He saw only the long level rope-lined lane with its twinkling mid-air point. An exhilaration caught him at the feel of the splendid horse-flesh beneath him—that sense of oneness with the creature he bestrode which the instinctive horseman knows. He lifted his lance and hefted it, seeking its absolute balance, feeling its point as a fencer with his rapier. When again the blood-red sash streamed away the herald's cry, "Knight of the Crimson Rose—one!" set the field hand-clapping. From the next joust also, Valiant returned with the rags upon his lance. Two had gone to the Champion of Castlewood and two to scattering riders. When Valiant won his fourth the grand stand thundered with applause.

The trumpet again pealed its silvery proclamation. Judge Chalmers was on his feet. "Fifty to ten on the Crimson Rose," he cried. This time, however, there were no takers. He called again, but none heard him; the last tilts were too absorbing.

Where had John Valiant learned that trick of the loose wrist and inflexible thrust, but at the fencing club? Where that subconscious management of the rein, that nice gage of speed and distance, but on the polo field? The old sports stood him now in good stead. "Why, he has a seat like a centaur!" exclaimed the judge—praise indeed in a community where riding was a passion and horseflesh a fetish!

"Oh, dear!" mourned Nancy Chalmers. "I've bet six pairs of gloves on Quint Carter. Never mind; if it has to be anybody else, I'd rather it were Mr. Valiant. It's about time Damory Court got something after Rip-Van-Winkling it for thirty years. Besides, he's giving us the dance, and I love him for that! Quint still has a chance, though. If he takes the next two, and Mr. Valiant misses—"

Katharine looked at her with a little smile. "He won't miss," she said.

She had seen that look on his face before and read it aright. John Valiant had striven in many contests, not only of skill but of strength and daring, before crowded grand stands. But never in all his life had he so desired to pluck the prize. His grip was tense on the lance as the yellow doublet and olive plume of Castlewood shot away for a last time—and failed. An instant later the Knight of the Crimson Rose flashed down the lists with the last ring on his pike.

And the tourney was won.

In the shouting and hand-clapping Valiant took the rose from his hat-band and bound it with a shred of his sash to his lance-point. As he rode slowly toward the massed stand, the whole field was so still that he could hear the hoofs of the file of knights behind him. The people were on their feet.

The mounted herald blew his blast. "By the Majesties of St. Michael and St. George," he proclaimed, "I declare the Knight of the Crimson Rose the victor of this our tourney, and do charge him now to choose his Queen of Beauty, that all may do her homage!"

Shirley saw the horse coming down the line, its rider bareheaded now, and her heart began to race wildly. Beyond wanting him to take part, she had not thought. She looked about her, suddenly dismayed. People were smiling at her and clapping their hands. From the other end of the stand she saw Nancy Chalmers throwing her a kiss, and beside her a tall pale girl in champagne-color staring through a jeweled lorgnette.

She was conscious all at once that the flanneled rider was very close * * * that his pike-point, with its big red blossom, was stretching up to her.

With the rose in her hand she curtsied to him, while the blurred throng cheered itself hoarse, and the band struck up "You Great Big Beautiful Doll," with extraordinary rapture, to the tune of which the noise finally subsided to a battery of hilarious congratulations which left her flushed and a little breathless. Nancy Chalmers and Betty Page had burst upon her like petticoated whirlwinds and presently, when the crowd had lessened, the judge came to introduce his visitor.

"Mr. Fargo and his daughter are our guests at Gladden Hall," he told her. "They are old friends of Valiant's, by the way; they knew him in New York."

"Katharine's lighting her incense now, I guess," observed Silas Fargo. "See there!" He pointed across the stand, where stood a willowy tan figure, one hand beckoning to the concourse below, where Valiant stood, the center of a shifting group, round which the white bulldog, mad with recovered liberty, tore in eccentric circles.

As they looked, she called softly, "John! John!"

Shirley saw him start and face about, then come quickly toward her, amazement and welcome in his eyes.

As Shirley turned away a little later with the major, that whispering voice seemed to sound in her ears—"John! John!" There smote her suddenly the thought that when he had chosen her his Queen of Beauty, he had not seen the other—had not known she was there.

A few moments before the day had been golden; she went home through a landscape that somehow seemed to have lost its brightest glow.

CHAPTER XXIV.

Katharine Decides.

Katharine left the field of Runnymede with John Valiant in the dun-colored motor. She sat in the driver's seat beside him, while the bulldog cowered, ecstatically barking, from side to side of the rear cushions. Her father had declined the honor, remarking that he considered a professional chauffeur a sufficient risk of his valuable life and that the Chalmers' grays were good enough for him—a decision which did not wholly displease Katharine.

The car was not the smart Panhard in which she had so often spun down the avenue or along the shell-roads of the north shore. It lacked those fin-de-siecle appurtenances which marked the ne plus ultra of its kind, as her observant eye recognized; but it ran staunch and true. The powerful hands that gripped the steering-wheel were brown with sun and wind, and the handsome face above it had a look of keenness and energy she had never surprised before. They passed many vehicles and there were few whose occupants did not greet him. In fact, as he presently remarked, it was a saving of energy to keep his hat off; and he tossed the Panama into the rear seat. On the rim of the village a group raised a cheer to which he nodded laughingly, and further on a little old lady on a timid vine-colored porch beside a church, waved a blackmitted hand to him with a sweet old-time gesture. Katharine noted that he bowed to her with extra care.

The Tournament Ball at Damory Court That Night Was More Than an Event.

"That's Miss Mattie Sue Mabry," he said, "the quaintest, dearest thing you ever saw. She taught my father his letters."

Where the Red Road stretched level before them, he threw the throttle open for a long rush through the thyme-scented air. The light, late afternoon breeze drew by them, sweeping back Katharine's graceful sinuous veil and spraying them with odors of clover and sunny fruit. They passed orchard clumps bending with young apples, boundless aisles of green, young-tasseled corn and shadowy groves that smelled of fern and sassafras, opening out into more sunlighted vistas overarched by the intense penetrable of the June sky.

John Valiant had never seemed to her so wholly good to see, with his waving hair ruffling in their flight and the westering sun shining redly on his face. Midway of this spurt he looked at her to say: "Did you ever know a more beautiful countryside? See how the pink-and-yellow of those grain fields fades into the purple of the hills. Very few painters have ever captured a tint like that. It's like raspberries crushed in curdled milk."

"I've quite lost my heart to it all," she said, her voice jolting with the speed of their course. "It's a perfect pastoral * * * so different from our terrific city pace. * * * Of course it must be a trifle dull at times * * * seeing the same people always * * * and without the theater and the opera and the whirl about one—but * * * the kind of life one reads about * * * in the novels of the South, you know * * * I suppose one doesn't realize that it actually exists until one comes to a Southern place like this. And the negro servants! How odd it must be to have a white-haired old darky in a brass-buttoned swallow-tail for a butler! So picturesque! At Judge Chalmers' I have a feeling all the time that I'm walking through a stage rehearsal."

The car slackened speed as it slid by a white-washed cabin at whose entrance sat a dusky gray-bearded figure. Valiant pointed. "Do you see him?" he asked.

"I see a very ordinary old colored man sitting on the door-step," Katharine replied.

"That's Mad Anthony, our local Mother Shipton. He's a prophet and soothsayer. Uncle Jefferson—that's my body-servant—insists that he foretold my coming to Damory Court. If we had more time you could have your fortune told."

"How thrilling!" she commented with half-humorous irony.

He pointed to a great white house set in a grove of trees. "That is Beechwood," he told her, "the Beverly homestead. Young Beverley was the Knight of the Silver Cross. A fine old place, isn't it? It was burned by the Indians during the French and Indian War. My great-great-great-grandfather —" He broke off. "But then, these old things won't interest you."

"They interest you a great deal, don't they?" she asked.

"Yes," he admitted, "they do. You see, my ancestors are such new acquaintances. I find them absorbing. You know" when I lived in New York—"

"Last month."

He laughed a little—his good, boyish laugh she had known in the past. "Yes, but I can hardly believe it; I seem to have been here half a lifetime. To think that a month ago I was a double-dyed New Yorker."

"It's been a strange experience for you. When you come back to New York—"

He looked at her, oddly she thought. "Why should I go back?"

"Why? Because it's your natural habitat. Isn't it?"

"That's the word," he said smiling. "It was my habitat. This is my home."

She was silent a moment in sheer surprise. She had thought of this Southern essay as a quickly passing incident, a colorful chapter whose page might any day be turned. But it was impossible to mistake his meaning. Clearly, he was deeply infatuated with this Arcadian experience and had no thought at present but to continue it indefinitely.

They were passing the entrance of a cherry-bordered lane, and without taking his hands from the gear, he nodded toward the low broad-eaved dwelling with its flowering arbors that showed in flashing glimpses of brown and red between the intervening trees. "The palace of the queen!" he said—"Rosewood, by name."

She looked in some curiosity. Clearly, if not a refuge of genteel poverty, neither was it the abode of wealth; so, from her assured rampart of the Fargo millions, Katharine reflected complacently. The girl was a local favorite, of course—he had been tactful as to that. It was fortunate, in a way, that he had not seen her, Katharine, in the grand stand until afterward. Feeling toward her as she believed he did, with his absurd directness, he would have been likely to drop the rose in her lap, never reflecting that, the tourney being a local function, the choice should not fall upon an outlander.

The slowing of the car brought her back to the present, and she looked up to see before them the great gate of Gladden Hall. She did not speak till they had quite stopped.

Then, as her hand lay in his for farewell, "You are right in your decision," she said softly. "This is your place. You are a Valiant of Virginia. I didn't realize it before, but I am beginning to see all it means to you."

Her voice held a lingering indefinable quality that was almost sadness, and for that one slender instant, she opened on him the unmasked batteries of her glorious gray eyes.

* * * * * * * * *

The tournament ball at Damory Court that night was more than an event. The old mansion was an irresistible magnet. The floor of its yellow parlor was known to be of delectable hugeness. Its gardens were a legend. The whole place, moreover, was steeped in the very odor of old mystery and new romance. Small wonder that to this particular affair the elect—the major was the high custodian of the rolls, his decisions being as the laws of the Medes and Persians—came gaily from the farthest county line, and the big houses of the neighborhood were crammed with over-night guests.

By half past nine o'clock the phalanx of chaperons decreed by old custom had begun to arrive, and the great iron gate at the front of the drive—erect and rustless now—saw an imposing processional of carriages. These passed up a slope as radiant with the fairy light of paper lanterns as a Japanese thoroughfare in festival season. The colored bulbs swung moon-like from tree and shrub, painting their rainbow lusters on grass and driveway. Under the high gray columns of the porch and into the wide door, framed in its small leaded panes that glowed with the merry light within, poured a stream of loveliness: in carriage-wraps of light tints, collared and edged with fur or elder, or wide-sleeved mandarin coats falling back from dazzling throats and arms, hair swathed with chiffon against the night dews, and gallantly cavalliered by masculine black and white.

These from their tiring-rooms overflowed presently, garbed like dreams, to make obeisance to the dowagers and then to drift through flower-lined corridors, the foam on recurrent waves of discovery. Behind the rose-bower in the hall, which shielded a dozen colored musicians—violins, cello, guitars and mandolins—came premonitory chirps and shivers, which presently wove into the low and dreamy melody of "Carry Me Back to Old Virginia."

Promptly as the clock in the hall chimed ten, the music merged into a march. Doors on opposite sides of the upper hall swung wide and down the broad staircase came, with slow step, a stately procession: two heralds in fawn-colored doublets with scroll and trumpets wound with flowers, behind them the Queen of Beauty, her finger-tips resting lightly in the hand of the Knight of the Crimson Rose, and these followed by as brave a concourse of lords and ladies as ever graced castle-hall in the gallant days "when knighthood was in flower."

Shirley's gown was of pure white: her arms were swathed in tulle, crossed with straps of seed-pearl, over which hung long semi-flowing sleeves of satin, and from her shoulders rose a stiff pointed medieval collar of Venetian lace, against whose pale traceries her bronze hair glowed with rosy lights. The edge of the square-cut corsage was powdered with the pearls and against their sheen her breast and neck had the soft creamy ivory of magnolia buds. Her straight plain train of satin, knotted with fresh white rose-buds (Nancy Chalmers had labored for a frantic half-hour in the dressing-room for this effect) was held by the seven-year-old Bytoe twins, beribboned knickerbockers, duly impressed with the grandeur of their privilege and grimly intent on acquitting themselves with glory.

Shirley's face was still touched with the surprise that had swept it as Valiant had stepped to her side. She had looked to see him in the conventional panoply a sober-sided masculine mode decrees. What she had beheld was a figure that might have stepped out of an Elizabethan picture-frame. He was in deep purple slashed with gold. A cloak of thin crimson velvet narrowly edged with ermine hung from his shoulders, lined with tissue-like cloth-of-gold. From the rolling brim of his hat swept a curling purple plume. He wore a slender dress-sword, and an order set with brilliants sparkled on his breast.

The costume had been one he had worn at a fancy ball of the winter before. It had been made from a painting at Windsor of one of the dukes of Buckingham, and it made a perfect foil for Shirley's white.

The eleven knights of the tourney, each with his chosen lady, if less splendid, were tricked out in sufficiently gorgeous attire. Many an ancient brocade had been awakened for the nonce from its lavender bed, and ruffs and gold-braid were at no premium.

ADDITION TO HIS EFFICIENCY

Business Manager Would Do Well to Remember That His Personality Counts for Much.

"He's really very agreeable outside of business hours." How often we hear this remark about a certain type of man at the head of a large enterprise. He is the man whose office demeanor is characterized by the coldness of a snowball and the indifference of a stone.

In his desire to become efficient and make every one about him the same he squeezes every bit of human feeling out of his relations with his subordinates and becomes a part of a working system, as dehumanized as his filing system or his adding machine or the typewriter which his stenographer manipulates. During office hours he is a machine which dictates letters, looks over reports and develops efficiency. But—"he's really very agreeable outside of business hours."

This man needs to know that, his ability being efficient, he becomes more efficient as he becomes more human, just as a machine is more efficient the more flexible it becomes. The whole is known that the best of the head of a big concern must have personality if he is to hold his business together, and that personality is a good thing to keep on top.

The man who subordinates his personality to his position is the man who lets his position run him and who is a jobholder before he is a man. A pitiable state, indeed, for anybody to find himself in. Being a man with a personality as well as an executive with a high degree of efficiency is an ideal which every business man might well hold before himself, inside of business hours or otherwise.—Milwaukee Journal.

Japanese Theater.

To a foreigner, stage management in Japan would appear somewhat eccentric. When an actor is killed during the play a man in black rushes on the stage and holds a large clock before the supposed corpse, who soon rises and runs off the stage.

The scenes are never shifted, but the whole stage revolves on wheels, while between the acts the children passing the audience drink tokens of the refinis and play until the drum beats for another act. The performance begins at 10 a. m. and the audience provides themselves for 24 hours, during us on meals and spending the whole time.

Profitable Side Dressing

The use of side dressing is increasing on COTTON and CORN

It pays to do it, if one uses the right goods.

Two applications of 200 pounds each per acre are recommended by a well-known Southern investigator and experimenter. He suggests a 5-5-5 formula, or a mixture of equal parts of Acid Phosphate, Kainit and Nitrate of Soda.

KAINIT

Side dress cotton when the plants are 10 inches high and again when the bloom begins to open. Where cotton is inclined to rust, use Kainit, making two applications of 200 pounds each per acre. This is also effective against root lice and cut worms on corn, if applied early enough. It will pay you to try it, for Potash Pays.

Order Kainit now before the supply is exhausted. We sell Kainit and Potash Salts, any quantity from one 200-lb. bag up.

GARBER, COMER'S CAMPAIGN MANAGER DECLARED WHEN ATTORNEY GENERAL NO FURTHER LEGISLATION NEEDED

THE AUTHORITY DELEGATED TO THE RAILROAD COMMISSION IN THE MATTER OF RATE MAKING RENDERING ADJUSTMENT FEASABLE AND PRACTICAL IN EVERY INSTANCE

Extract From His Report Made to the Governor in 1910 Tears the Last Fragment of Support From Under His Candidate.

HENDERSON'S NOMINATION IS ASSURED

THE COMER AGREEMENT

"It is further understood and agreed that in the making of this settlement, and the dismissal of the pending litigation, according to the terms of the verbal agreement between the parties hereto made contemporaneously with this instrument, there is to be no liability upon the said——— railroad company growing or arising out of the bond or bonds which said company was required to give on securing the injunction heretofore issued in the pending litigation.

THE HENDERSON AGREEMENT.

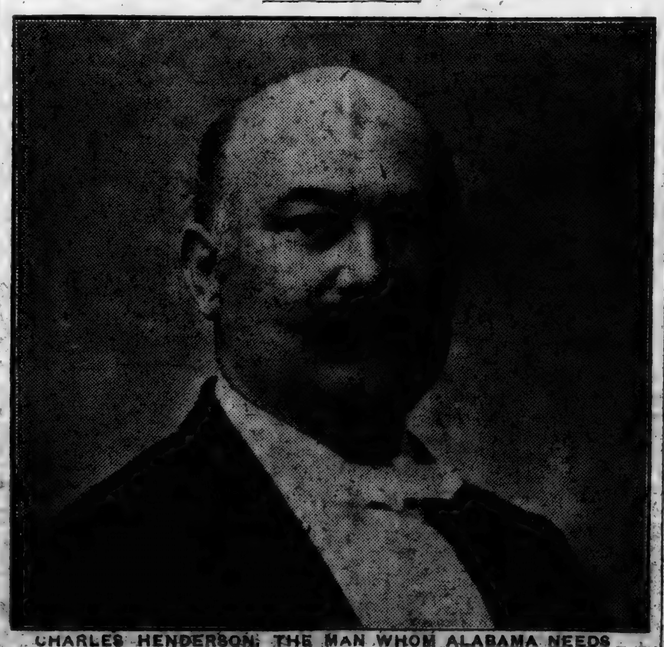
"It is further understood and agreed that in the making of this settlement and providing for the dismissal of the pending litigation as aforesaid, there is to be no liability upon the railroad companies, or either of them, growing or arising out of the bonds they were required to give on securing temporary restraining orders."

EXTRACT FROM A REPORT OF ALEX. M. GARBER, ATTORNEY GENERAL OF ALABAMA, MADE TO THE THEN GOVERNOR B. B. COMER IN 1910, SHOWING THE DIFFERENCE BETWEEN THE OPINION OF THE THEN ATTORNEY GENERAL AND THE NOW CAMPAIGN MANAGER OF EX-GOVERNOR COMER.

"The affirmation, by the United States Circuit Court of Appeals, of the delegated authority conferred by statute upon the Railroad Commission in the matter of rate making, to meet changed conditions, renders such an adjustment feasible and practicable in every instance. NO FURTHER LEGISLATION IS NEEDED. This recognized power of the Railroad Commission of Alabama, intelligently and reasonably exercised, is ample to meet and settle every possible difference that has arisen or may arise concerning the reasonableness or compensatory character of Alabama's statutory rates." —Biennial Report of the Attorney General of Alabama, 1908-1910. Page XXIV.

VIEWS OF TWO FORMER ANTI-COMER CANDIDATES FOR GOVERNOR

CAPT. KOLB TO HIS FRIENDS OF THE STATE



"I consider the things that Charles Henderson's candidacy stands for to be practically the same as the policies I advocated as a candidate and that they represent the measure of the people's requirements. I therefore, invite my friends to join me in my allegiance to that gentleman's standard."

—Capt. Kolb's letter of declaration in favor of Charles Henderson.

LIEUTENANT-GOVERNOR SEED TO HIS FRIENDS OF THE STATE THROUGH A FRIEND IN MOBILE.

"When I cast my ballot for him, it will be solely because of those who are now behind him and not for Governor Comer's sake. If you have kept up with my speeches, from which I have nothing to retract, you will see how I regard him."

—Letter of Lieut.-Gov. Seed to Dr. Harry T. Inge, of Mobile.

CHARLES HENDERSON, THE MAN WHOM ALABAMA NEEDS

When this is read by the majority of Alabamians the campaign for Governor will have practically ended. Everything relating to candidates, platforms, records and policies that can be told the people, has been said. The masses are wise on most of the things that should be known as matters to aid them in forming convictions and making alignments. The different sides of every public question have been redected. The claims of the aspirant for Governor have been presented. Orators championing their preferences on stumps have grown hoarse and listening voters wearied in surfeit of their eloquence. Newspapers are lapsing into the habit of vain repetitions and are rehashing argumentative pros and cons, which the voters know by heart. In a word, the logic and drift of a long political campaign has ended in a single, settled conviction of NEED on one hand and FEAR on the other.

Is there an Alabama voter who will hesitate to make his choice and make that choice Charles Henderson, who stands for peace, prosperity and harmony in Alabama as against discord, dissention and chaos as is exemplified in the person and temperament of his opponent.

DEFEAT OF COMER WOULD BE CALAMITY

THIS IS OPINION OF BUSINESS MEN OF BIRMINGHAM—ENDORSE COMER IN STRONG RESOLUTIONS.

Wholesale Merchants and Lumber Men Add Their Voice to the Swelling Comer Chorus.

The following are the resolutions signed by leading business men of Birmingham calling upon all of the business men of the State to work for and support the candidacy of B. B. Comer for the governorship:

"Believing that it is to the best interest of the State of Alabama that there shall be an era of peace and business activity, and that its affairs should be handled by a thorough and trained business man, one that is a success in private life and who has demonstrated by his administration that he is competent to again handle the affairs of Alabama in a business way, and who will inspire confidence in the business world, attract capital and labor to Alabama, and who will see that all classes and business interests have a fair play in every way; therefore, be it

"Resolved, that the Business Men's Comer Club, composed of members from every class of business men, most heartily endorse former Governor B. B. Comer for Governor, and urge the people of Alabama to give him their vote and support in the coming primary.

"Resolved, second, that we believe his election is for the best business interest of the State, and that his defeat would be a calamity to the business interests, and it behooves every business man to work and support his candidacy and to help secure his election by an overwhelming majority on May 11.

FEELS LIKE A NEW WOMAN

As Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound Dispelled Backache, Headaches and Dizziness.

Piqua, Ohio.—"I would be very ungrateful if I failed to give Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound the praise it deserves, for I have taken it at different times and it always relieved me when other medicines failed, and when I hear a woman complain I always recommend it. Last winter I was attacked with a severe case of organic weakness. I had backache, pains in my hips and over my kidneys, headache, dizziness, lassitude, had no energy, limbs ached and I was always tired. I was hardly able to do my housework. I had taken Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound on one other occasion, and it had helped me so I took it again and it has built me up, until now I feel like a new woman. You have my hearty consent to use my name and testimonial in any way and I hope it will benefit suffering women."—Mrs. ORPHA TURNER, 431 S. Wayne St., Piqua, Ohio.

Women who are suffering from those distressing ills peculiar to their sex should not doubt the ability of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound to restore their health.

If you want special advice write to Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co., (confidential) Lynn, Mass. Your letter will be opened, read and answered by a woman and held in strict confidence.

Have You a Bad Back?

Does your back ache night and day, making work a burden and rest impossible? Do you suffer stabbing, darting pains when stooping or lifting? Most bad backs are due to hidden trouble in the kidneys and if the kidney secretions are scant or too frequent of passage, proof of kidney trouble is complete. Delay may pave the way to serious kidney ills. For bad backs and weak kidneys use Doan's Kidney Pills—recommended the world over.

OFF FOR MEXICO

Brooklyn, N. Y., April 24, 1914.
U. S. S. Texas.

Editor Press—If you will allow a few lines in your valuable paper I will say a few words to my friends in dear old Chilton, and in Clanton especially. Perhaps some of my friends are wondering why I haven't written to them lately. Well, I will explain my reason, I was transfered to the U. S. S. Juanita, a navy tug boat, and there we had but little time to spare, and when I was off duty I was sleeping or on a few hours share liberty. On the first of April I put in a request for a New York Ship and on the eighteenth I was notified to pack up my hammock and bag, and report for duty on the "Texas" in New York. I left on the ship Princess Anna, on the Old Dominion Line, April 20th, 7:30 p.m., enjoying a fine trip, and it was home to be on tne "Briny Deep" once more. On the 2nd we were at a wireless station and picked up a message from Key West stating where one of my former shipmates had been killed in Mexico. It made me feel at loss as I was expecting to meet him in New York.

After reporting on board the "Texas" I met a ship's cook, who, was at one time, my shipmate, (the reason I call him shipmate, is because when we were aboard together, I could go in the "Galley" at any time and get a lunch,) "he was a friend in need."

We were granted our liberty and of course we hit for the New York side and remained over there until two a.m., taking in some of my old haunts. Our liberty expiring at eight a.m., we turned in on time, carrying the "Banner" all night.

I am on the greatest Sea Fighter in the world, we are at present working day and night, to get her in full commission as we leave the 5th or 6th for Mexico to let the Mexicans look into the muzzle of her 10 and 14 inch guns for their first time, and if they don't surrender it will be their last, for when our 10-14's open up it will be nix for the Mexicans, the faster they come the faster they fall.

Well, I will fall into my hammock for slumberland, if I don't, a "Jimmy Leg" will fall on me with a club as 9 o'clock is the turning in time and it is 8:40 now.

If nothing happens in Mexico and we get furloughs Christmas I hope to see you all. Respectfully,

Jadie Wagoner.

WOULD HELP BOYS

Agricultural Scholarship Instead of Washington Trips.

U. S. Department of Agriculture Recommends Former as the More Valuable Prize for Youthful Members of the Farming Clubs.

Washington, D. C.—The department of agriculture recommends that in place of a trip to Washington the young prize-winners of the Corn, Canning and Poultry and other agricultural clubs be given a year's course in practical training at some agricultural college. In case the young champion's academic training would not enable him to enter the agricultural college of his state, a more elementary course in a school where agriculture is taught or a course in an agricultural high school is recommended.

The department considers that such courses have considerably more lasting value for prize-winners and for the agriculture of their sections than flying trips to the capital. The state and local organizations which have been paying for these trips have been sincerely interested in developing a true appreciation of farming as a business among the boy and girl farmers. Some of these have already considered this question and have decided on the agricultural course as the more desirable prize.

One of the first persons to raise the question as to whether the practical training or the more spectacular trip was preferable, was Willie P. Brown, an Arkansas Corn club prize winner. Given his choice of all the prizes offered by the state, including the trip to Washington, he selected a scholarship giving him a year's tuition in an agricultural school. This gave impetus to the idea in Arkansas, and now the biggest annual prize offered the Corn club boys is a scholarship given by the Bankers' association. The same association gives a similar scholarship to the girl champion of the canning clubs.

Other suggestions regarding prizes have been made from time to time by those who have been most interested in these clubs and understand the needs of the boy and girl farmers. Some of the suggestions are offered herewith for the consideration of others who might care to profit by them.

While a year's course with all expenses paid is the suggestion of the department for the biggest prize for state winners, less extensive courses might be offered to county winners. It has been suggested that such counties as care to give prizes, give one or more short courses in the state agricultural and mechanical colleges to the fortunate county champions. These courses are usually only two weeks long and are held in winter or in summer. The training given is of the most practical sort, and the amount of time spent is no gauge of the amount of benefit to be obtained. These short courses have already been given as prizes by certain counties, and have proved most valuable to the young people.

Large cash prizes are not to be encouraged according to those who have worked with the young contestants. Better suggestions are as follows: A pair of registered pigs, a pair of full blooded chickens, a fine colt, a registered calf, an up-to-date corn planter, a two-horse wagon, a gold watch, books on agriculture, a double-barreled shotgun, a first-class bicycle, a ton of good fertilizer, a $5 hat, a fireless cooker (for girl winners).

In general it is better to offer many small prizes than a few large ones. If twenty boys try for a prize and only one is fortunate, some of the nineteen unsuccessful contestants will probably be too discouraged to try again. But if five of the boys are rewarded for their efforts, more merit will have received recognition and the remaining fifteen will see more possible opportunities of success the following year.

Some boards of trade and chambers of commerce have also recognized the efforts of the clubs, by giving banquets for the young people and entertaining them with street car and automobile rides. On other occasions clubs have been honored by an invitation to march in parades, where they have attracted deserved attention.

From Memphis, Tenn., comes an interesting story which is a sample of what has been done in other states for young prize winners. In the three states (Arkansas, Tennessee and Mississippi), which are annually represented at the Memphis tri-state fair, it was decided to send certain boy prize winners to the fair as a reward for their excellence.

A trip to a fair is a more or less spectacular event as is the Washington trip, but it gives the young farmers certain concrete agricultural experience, which they do not receive from excursions to the sights of Washington. At the fair in question the young men were housed on the fair grounds in tents, two to four in each tent, all in charge of men employed by the state or government to look after their interests.

The young men had a regular program which kept them busy most of the week of their stay. One day an expert took the young men to view the improved farm implements on display. The boys were shown the machinery, and its uses were explained. Another day a seed expert showed the boys the exhibits of seeds, and gave them practical advice on seed selection. The boys were taken in the same manner to view the [illegible] other live stock.

WOULD AID YOUNG OLD MEN

Appeal Issued for Workless Side-Tracked Because of Gray Hairs.

Washington.—An appeal for the establishment of "Young Old Men's" associations throughout the country to aid in finding employment for elderly men, who have been barred from securing work simply because of their gray hairs, is contained in a letter received by Mrs. J. Borden Harriman, resident commissioner of the Federal Commission on Industrial Relations. The communication was from George W. Crossett, seventy-eight years of age, honorary president of the Young Old Men's association of Cleveland, and relates what has been done by that organization to help those who have lost their positions because they "look old."

Mrs. J. Borden Harriman.

"The story of the gray-haired man, strong, able and willing, being denied even a hearing because he looks old," writes Mr. Crossett, "is one of the world's tragedies. Elderly men who have been laid aside only because their hair is gray are entitled to some consideration. A man is as old as he feels, and in our association we have many men who still feel young and capable. Our list of men seeking employment includes men fitted for every line of industry, and a like association should obtain in every large city. Your commission may be able to interest some persons who would be willing to take the initiative and start a proposition that would bring a blessing to many a gray head and keep the wolf from the door."

Mr. Crossett states that the Cleveland association has found employment for many unfortunates and they are now "earning a modest living."

NASHVILLE BOOSTERS TO VISIT CLANTON

Nashville, Tenn., May 9, '14
Editor Clanton Press,
Clanton, Ala.

Dear Sir:—The Nashville Booster Club will start on its 10th Annual Tour on Monday, May 18th, and will be in Clanton, Monday, May 18th, at 5:55 p.m., leaving at 6:30 p.m.

Our party will be composed of representatives of the largest and most progressive business concerns in our city; we enclose booklet showing personnel and itinerary.

We are prompted in making these Tours by a desire to cultivate the friendship of our sister cities and to encourage and increase reciprocal trade relations.

We believe when the South produces what she consumes she will have "arrived." Why not patronize and encourage Southern manufacturers?

We do not wish to take anything from your community but will add to your growth and prosperity in whatever way we can, believing you in turn will be disposed to be helpful to us.

We know, to make friends, we must be one and we are ready to make good on this proposition. As making friends is one of our missions we will be greatly obliged if you will give publicity to our coming which will give us the opportunity of meeting your business and professional men.

We also have the hope we may encourage co-operation amongst the business interests and communities of the South, and that in so doing, we will materially aid in more rapidly developing our most favored section, whose growth and prosperity has been retarded by conditions, which happily, no longer exist.

Trusting our visit will be agreeable to your people and that it may impose an obligation to visit Nashville, where they will be welcome at any time, we are,

Nashville Booster Club.

The special train to be used by the Boosters consists of advertising car, commissary car, three Pullman sleepers, and diner.

THE SERVANT QUESTION SOLVED

So Far as This Lady is Concerned —She Doesn't Seem to Need One.

Pollock, La.—Mrs. T. S. Blair, of this town, has the following to say, which should be of interest to women generally: "For months, my health was very bad, and the medicines I took did not seem to do me any good.

I was very weak and nervous, and some days, I could not be up.

I asked my husband to get me a bottle of Cardui, the woman's tonic, to try, and before I had taken one bottle I was up and doing my work. Before I commenced taking Cardui, I had such spells I was not able to do anything. Now, I have only taken three bottles of Cardui in all, and I feel fine.

A few months ago I weighed 135 pounds. Now I weigh 158, and I do all my own work, cook, wash and milk—and feel like I did when I was 'sweet sixteen.'

Taking Cardui has cured me."

As a relief from the distressing symptoms of womanly ailments, nothing has been found during the past 50 years that would take the place of Cardui.

Its superiority is still unquestioned as a mild, building tonic for cases of womanly weakness where tired nature needs help. Made from purely vegetable ingredients, Cardui has no bad after effects and can do you nothing but good.

Try Cardui.—Adv.

STOP THAT BACKACHE

There's nothing more discouraging than a constant backache. You are lame when you awake. Pains pierce you when you bend or lift. It's hard to rest and next day it's the same old story.

Pain in the back is nature's warning of kidney ills. Neglect may pave the way to dropsy, gravel, or other serious kidney sickness.

Don't delay—begin using Doan's Kidney Pills—the remedy that has been curing backache and kidney trouble for over fifty years.

A NEW JERSEY CASE

Louis Hunter, 40 East 32d St., Bayonne, N. J., says: "I was in such bad shape with kidney trouble that I often fell, being too weak to stand up. The suffering would have killed any other man. I spent hundreds of dollars doctoring, but nothing helped me and one doctor said I couldn't live. I used Doan's Kidney Pills and they cured me. I haven't had a sign of kidney trouble or backache since."

NATIONAL CAPITAL AFFAIRS

Great Excitement, But the Goat Was Serene

WASHINGTON.—This is about a lawyer and a goat. Not the lawyer's goat, but a real Billy that belonged to a boy. All the lawyer had to do with it was to tell what happened to show the serenity of a goat when subjected to excitement. And as a serene goat isn't an everyday affair, here goes:

Scene, Massachusetts avenue as it enters Scott circle. Hour, about 9:15, when bankers, brokers, corporation lawyers and capitalists of early bird habits were whizzing downtown in their limousines, touring cars and what not—which means any vehicle above a street car—until they came to the goat.

He was on the wrong side of the street. And he wouldn't budge.

The conveyance to which he was hitched—a box on wheels, 1914 model—was crowded with sections of six small boys whose legs were dangling outside. They urged and beseeched, cajoled, threatened and whacked, but the goat calmly chewed his gum and stayed put.

There's never any telling what goes on under the horns of a billy goat in the brains we don't concede him.

Perhaps he had a hunch that his one best way to get rid of hauling six boys was to refuse to haul one. So he stood and stood and stood, until—

The composite banker, broker, corporation lawyer and early bird capitalist canned in his nifty machine had blocked the asphalt, and the street was fringed with mere everyday humans, who will have to walk until they acquire wings. No reference whatever to airships. Then a blue cloth guardian of the law breezed into the foreground and—

Got his goat.

Call Him the Story Teller in Chief to the House

ONE funny story in one ten-minute speech, by all tradition, unwritten rules and precedent of the house of representatives, is amply sufficient. But since this administration has set its face against following precedent, Tom Heflin, representative from Alabama and story teller in chief to the house, has started out loyally to upset tradition. He has taken to telling two stories instead of one in the time mentioned. Here are two samples Mr. Heflin recently interjected into debate:

"A fellow had lost an eye, and he said to the surgeon, 'Doc, I have just naturally got to have another eye, and I don't want any glass eye. I want a flesh eye.' The doctor replied, 'I can put a cat's eye in for you.' The man said, 'All right, just so I can see with it.'

"So the surgeon very skilfully transplanted the cat's eye in the place of the one the man had lost. In about three months the surgeon saw his patient and said, 'Bill, how is your eye?' Bill replied, 'Well, Doc, it is all right, I guess. The only objection I have got to the darned thing is that it is always looking for crickets and mice.'"

The second one:

"On one occasion a dyspeptic preacher went home with a member of his church for dinner. The good wife had prepared a feast fit for the gods. There was fried chicken, round, robust biscuits, red ham swimming in red gravy and the finest coffee that ever flowed from a spout. The good lady was justly proud of what she had spread before the parson.

"Bud, the nine-year old son, with fork in hand, was just ready to do battle with the good things before him, when his mother said, 'Parson, won't you have some of the chicken?' To their surprise and the utter bewilderment of Bud, the parson replied, 'No; I never eat chicken.'

"The good lady then asked, Parson, have a piece of ham.' But the parson answered, 'No, I dare not eat ham.' Bud dropped his fork.

"The good lady then said, 'Won't you have a biscuit?' and the parson replied, 'Did you use soda in the composition of those biscuits? Well, then, I cannot eat biscuits made with soda.'

"Bud, in wide-eyed astonishment, looked at his mother and exclaimed, with anger and earnestness, 'Ma, maybe the darned old fool would suck a raw egg!'"

How a North Carolina Moonshiner Won His Case

REPRESENTATIVE E. W. POU of North Carolina tells a good one on himself. He says: "In my home county was a man by the name of Reaves, who was indicted for a violation of the revenue laws, and retained me to defend him. As he was regarded as a weak-minded man, the judges were disposed to be lenient, though the evidence was conclusive as to his guilt.

"I told Reaves that he must act as foolish as he could in order to help his case. So on the day the case was tried Reaves appeared in court—it was a roasting summer day—wearing a heavy overcoat buttoned up to his throat.

"When the court was opened by the marshal Reaves jumped up and made a spectacle of himself by calling out foolish statements. As the judge would have to take action, I rose and told the judge that he could see for himself that my client was not a responsible person; so the case was nolle prossed and Reaves told to go and sin no more.

"Several years later, when I was the prosecuting attorney, I found that Reaves had been up to his old tricks and was in court for trial on another violation of the revenue laws. When he took the stand I asked him the following questions:

"'You have frequently been indicted for this offense?'

"'You ought to know,' replied Reaves. 'You were my lawyer.'

"'Yes,' I returned, 'but did you not go in court and play the fool to get out of trouble?'

"'No, sir,' said Reaves, quickly. 'As for playing the fool, it was you, sir, did that!'"

Why John Sharp Williams Never Joined the Army

SENATOR JOHN SHARP WILLIAMS was never in the Confederate army. But the fault is not his. He started with the best intentions, as well as with a knapsack filled with a good lunch. The war was at its height when he was a big boy of eleven, and as his father was in the army, and dozens of friends and relatives had gone forth to battle against the dreaded "Yank," John Sharp one night decided that his country called him to arms. The fact that he was only eleven, and about the only road he knew was that to the candy shop, did not deter him. Out in the darkness of the night the "call" of his country sounded as loud as the dinner horn to hungry hands in the harvest field.

So young Williams arose and set forth down the road in the early dawn. And as he tramped down the lanes of dust, past the still farmhouses over which hung the early smoke from the kitchen chimneys, he dreamed dreams of how he would some day [illegible] and ride back home [illegible] long horseback. Looking back, he saw [illegible] smoke. Uncle Zeph pulled up his [illegible] and [illegible]

COTTON EXCHANGES MAY BE ELIMINATED

HOUSE TO CONSIDER AMENDMENT TO COTTON FUTURES BILL.

SENATE BILL HAS PASSED

Amendment Provides for the Adoption of the Government Standard.

Washington.—D. C.—Within another week the house committee on agriculture is expected to report its cotton futures bill, as an amendment for the measure which has passed the senate.

It is conceded to be practically certain that the house will pass the measure. It has gone on record several times as favoring the reform of the iniquitous practices on the New York cotton exchange, even to the extermination of the exchange if it would not be reformed.

Here is the only difference between the two bills:

The senate favors reforming the exchange through the federal power to regulate commerce, and make it effective through its control over the mails, telegraph and other means of communication.

The house committee on agriculture inclines towards a bill to employ the taxing power of the federal government to effect the reform or to drive the exchange out of business.

Both bills will provide for the adoption of the government standard grades—nine grades in all, applying to both long staple and upland cotton. Future contracts are to be settled on the basis of the actual value of the cotton in the spot market.

2 MEN KILLED IN ACCIDENTS

Atlanta Is Visited by a Series of Accidents in One Day.

Atlanta, Ga.—Two men were killed and two others badly injured in four mishaps in different parts of the city. The first accident that has ever happened on the elevator run by B. G. Dorsey, known as "Shorty," during his career of ten years in the employ of the Austell building, proved fatal to him when he fell from the eighth floor to the pit of the elevator shaft in a crumpled mass.

F. B. Weeks, aged, 38, a decorator, while arranging some flag bunting on the top floor of the Masonic temple on Peachtree street slipped and fell the height of the building to the sidewalk.

He received a fractured skull, broken nose, dislocated knee and several bruises. He died several hours later. The accident was witnessed by a large number of Shriners, who were in the neighborhood of the Masonic temple.

STRIKE-BREAKERS SHUT OUT

U. S. Army Officers Instructed to Prevent Importation of Miners.

Trinidad, Colo.—President Wilson, through the war department, has instructed Col. James Lockett, commanding troops in southern Colorado, to permit no importation of strike-breakers and further announced a time limit would be set immediately in which the delivery of arms must be completed.

In his statement on President Wilson's instruction on strike-breakers, Major Holbrook said commanding officers here had been advised that no one shall be employed in any mine in the Colorado fields who had not been actually in its employ April 22, the date when the first proclamation ordering the federal troops into the field was published. He ordered that no mine which had not been in operation at that time could open, but those which were in operation may open under full protection by the government.

Southern Baptist Convention.

Nashville, Tenn.—The fifty-ninth session of the Southern Baptist convention will meet in Nashville, Tenn., and Georgia, as usual, will take a very important part in the deliberations of the body. Between sixteen hundred and two thousand representatives will be there, sent up from more than twenty-four thousand Baptist churches scattered all over the South and West. These churches have a membership of two and a half million. In addition to this there are fully as many negro Baptists in the same territory.

Anti-Trust Bill Is Criticised.

Washington.—One provision of the administration anti-trust bill threatens to put an indirect tax on the American people of $10,000,000 a year, according to a statement made before the senate interstate commerce committee by H. W. Chase, representing the Chicago Association of Commerce, who said that in addition to the provision requiring

MORE TROOPS TO MEXICO

WAR DEPARTMENT RUSHES PREPARATIONS TO MOVE LARGE BODIES OF SOLDIERS.

Huerta Complains United States Has Violated Armistice—Bryan Says No.

Washington.—High tension marked the Mexican situation on both the military and the diplomatic sides.

The war department was the chief center of activity and while no authoritative statement was made beyond Secretary Garrison's formal reply that "no orders for any national troop movements have been sent," it became known that the administration was considering sending off additional troops to Vera Cruz, and probably would do so.

Huerta's protest to the mediators that the United States had broken the armistice by landing additional troops at Vera Cruz, was considered by the cabinet, and later Secretary Bryan announced that the reply of this government stated that no aggressive steps had been taken by the United States forces and that nothing had been done to violate the suspensions of hostilities. The American reply was delivered to the mediators. The mediators themselves also took the view that the question raised by Huerta over the observance of the armistice could be settled.

Vera Cruz.—Reports of rebel victories continue to reach Vera Cruz. It was reported that Emaliano Zapata had taken Cuernavaca, capital of the state of Morelos, which is within forty miles of Mexico City. Reports of rebel successes are still being suppressed in the capital and few persons there know of General Villa's steady approach from the north.

Galveston, Texas.—On orders from Washington the Fourth and Sixth brigades of the United States army at Texas City were made ready to embark for Mexico at a moment's notice and the troops are prepared to go aboard transports quickly as orders are received.

Three steamships, the Denver and Colorado of the Mallory line, and Ossabaw, of the Texas City Steamship company, were chartered to be used as transports and carriers of supplies.

The Denver came into port from New York with eighty-four recruits for the army. The Morgan line steamer El Valle is here and probably will be drafted for service by the government. It also was reported that certain railroads have been asked by the war department to keep themselves in readiness to handle a large number of troops on short notice. Maj. Gen. J. Franklin Bell will arrive here to take command of the Second division.

Great quantities of supplies for the army were delivered at the government pier by the railroads and as fast as possible these were loaded on the transport Kilpatrick, which had orders to sail as soon as she was loaded. The Kilpatrick will carry one hundred horses. The Satilla was almost ready to leave for Vera Cruz with permanent camp equipment for General Funston's troops. Several torpedo boat destroyers sailed for Vera Cruz.

The second division now at Texas City embraces the Fourth brigade, composed of the Twenty-third, Twenty-sixth and Twenty-seventh regiments, and the Sixth brigade, composed of the One Hundred and Tenth, Eighteenth and Twenty-second regiments. There also is in camp at Texas City two battalions of engineers and the Fourth field artillery. The company of army aviators at Fort Crockett here is also ready to embark.

Vera Cruz Heroes Arrive.

New York.—Nation and city paid tribute in silence to the seventeen men who gave their lives in the first move made in the American investment of Vera Cruz. Bearing the dead, also an injured gunner, Montana, accompanied by the scout-boat yacht, Mayflower, with Secretary Daniels aboard, reached port early and, escorted by the tugs Chesapeake, Wyandotte, Richmond and the [illegible]

WILSON WEDDING BRILLIANT AFFAIR

ELEANOR WILSON IS MARRIED TO WILLIAM G. McADOO, SECRETARY OF TREASURY.

CEREMONY AT WHITE HOUSE

Youngest Daughter Is Second of President Wilson's Girls to Marry in the White House.

Washington.—The wedding of Miss Eleanor Randolph Wilson and Mr. William Gibbs McAdoo took place on Thursday afternoon, May 7, at six o'clock in the blue room.

The wedding procession proceeded from the main stairway into the corridor, through the north door of the blue room, to the platform erected in the south bay window of the blue room.

Miss Sallie McAdoo led the procession, followed by Mrs. Sayre and Miss Margaret Wilson. Miss Nancy Lane directly preceded the bride, who was escorted by the president. The groom, with Dr. Cary Travers Grayson, met the wedding party at the altar. Mr. McAdoo wore evening clothes, and Doctor Grayson wore his uniform. Rev. Sylvester W. Beach performed the ceremony.

After the ceremony the wedding party proceeded to the red room, where they received the congratulations and good wishes of the company. The marine band furnished the music. Supper was served at small tables in the state dining room. The decorations of the blue room were lilies and ferns and the decorations in the dining room were pink and white roses.

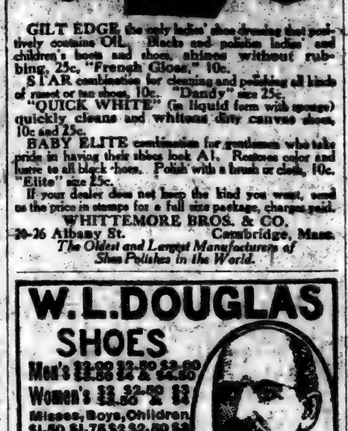
The bride's bouquet was of orange blossoms, white orchids and lilies of the valley.

The wedding gown worn by Miss Eleanor Wilson was made of ivory white satin and trimmed with real old point lace that was a masterpiece in the art of lacemaking. The bodice of the gown was softly draped with satin which crossed in the front and brought to a point below the shoulders. The long mosquetaire sleeves were made of tulle. The real old point lace was gracefully draped over the right shoulder to the left side of the waist and fastened with a spray of orange blossoms; the lace then continued as a border to the long transparent tunic of tulle which graduated to the side of the skirt at the train. The low sweeping train was three and a half yards in length. Upon her head the bride wore a cap effect bridal wreath with orange blossoms and a long draped veil.

Congress May Quit 10th of July.

Washington.—Probable adjournment of congress by July 10, was predicted by Senator Kern (Dem.), leader of the senate, after a white house conference at which the president and Senators Kern, Smith and O'Gorman discussed the legislative program. Senator Kern said he believed the Panama canal tolls repeal bill would be disposed of within two weeks and that the administration anti-trust program would be completed before adjournment. He said he was hopeful the rural credits bill would be reached.

War Camps Planned for Students.



Washington.—There will be no suspension or abandonment of the elaborate plans of the war department for holding the students' military instruction camps this summer because of the Mexican crisis. In fact, the Mexican trouble has served to emphasize the necessity for such preparation of the youth of the country, in the opinion of the general staff. Many letters are being received from heads of the educational institutions and from individual students asking for information as to the

HUMOR DISFIGURED BABY

Clarendon, N. C.—"My baby was broken out with a red, thick and rough-looking humor when about two months old. It would come in patches and went almost all over her in that way. The places were like ringworm and as they would spread they would turn red and make sores and itch. The trouble went to her face and disfigured her badly. Her clothes irritated it.

"I saw the advertisement of Cuticura Soap and Ointment and I got a sample and in one night's time I could see a change in the redness and in two days the place would be nearly gone. I sent and got one twenty-five cent cake of Cuticura Soap and two fifty-cent boxes of Cuticura Ointment, which cured my baby. She was well in three months." (Signed) Mrs. Bertha Sawyer, Oct. 11, 1912.

Had Made a Good Start.

In a certain family there is one of those rare old maids—a type that is almost extinct. Two sad love affairs have made life appear rather curdled, and she's about as cheerful as a rainy day at the seashore. A five-year-old grandniece is her one confidante, because she's the "only one who understands me." The other day at dinner, after casting a reproachful glance at the other members of the family, she murmured: "Yes, darling, I never thought enough of myself. I'm only now beginning to. I hope when you grow up you'll think something of yourself." "Oh, auntie!" exclaimed the little one, "I don't have to wait 'till then, 'cause I think a whole lot of myself now!"

RESINOL WILL HEAL BABY'S ITCHING SKIN

Resinol ointment and resinol soap are absolutely free from anything of a harsh or injurious nature, and can therefore be used with perfect confidence in the treatment of babies' skin troubles—eczema, teething rash, chafings, etc.—where you wouldn't dare use ordinary "skin-cures." Resinol stops itching instantly and speedily heals even severe and stubborn eruptions. Doctors have prescribed it for the past nineteen years.

Resinol soap and resinol ointment clears away pimples, blackheads and dandruff, and is an invaluable household remedy for sores, burns, boils, piles, etc. Sold by every druggist.—Adv.

Monday last was not Comer's day.

Our hats are off to Alabama's next Governor, Hon. Charles Henderson.

While our preference was for Comer, we gracefully bow to the will of the majority. Charles Henderson will make a splendid Governor, there is no doubt about that. A man of large experience in business affairs, broad vision, conservative in his views, friendly to capital, we predict that under his administration the material upbuilding of this great Commonwealth will go on unhampered by strife and turmoil.

It's really amusing to listen to the excuses that some of the leading Bull Moosers are putting up for not getting out a larger vote on April 21. Seeing defeat already staring them in the face, they are in a state of desperation and are like a drowning man grasping for a straw. Some were sick, others could not leave their crops, and still others "jest didn't want to." Did you ever see a sure enough sick Bull Moose? The woods will be full of them after the November election.

"A Voter," in the Union-Banner last week makes much ado about a negro who happens to be an office holder in far away Washington. Bud, we intended not to humiliate you with this negro question, you know it is a very delicate subject for you to discuss, but as you have started the game, we will say it was not necessary for you to travel all the way to Washington to find a negro who held office. During Roosevelt's administration there were a number of negro office-holders right here under our own observation—in Alabama if you please—and they were as black as the ace of spades.

Then, too, your memory is not so vague but that you can call to mind how those kinky-heads flocked to your couventions. Why it was actually so dark with "Cuffy's" presence at those powwows that a white man would have to take a flash-light along to see how to get in. Pretty dark times, those, don't yer know. Then you have the audacity to talk about a negro holding office a thousand miles away whom you read of in your favorite mouthpiece, the "Yellow Jacket." Shame on you!

HAPPENINGS AROUND THE COURT HOUSE

A mortgage was filed in the office of the Probate Judge last Friday for $25,000 to secure the amount of $25,000 bonds issued by the Town of Clanton for the construction of a waterworks and sewerage system for the town. The mortgage was filed by the Chicago Bank and Trust Company of Chicago.

By a decision rendered by the jury in the Probate Court Saturday, the will of the late J. T. Cooley was admitted for Probate.

The contract has been let by the Commissioners' Court for the grading of six miles of the Birmingham to Montgomery highway, beginning at Clanton and running south. The contract was awarded to Wynne Contracting Company of Dadeville.

Miss Lena Downs has resigned her position as clerk in the Probate Judge's office and accepted a position with Kemp Bros. as bookkeeper and stenographer.

Mr. W. S. Keller, State Highway Engineer, was in attendance at Commissioners' Court Saturday last.

MONDAY'S PRIMARY

The democratic primary passed off quietly in Chilton county. The vote was not as large as that cast in the April primary, about 850 being cast. This is attributable to the busy season with the farmers and lack of interest manifested. From unofficial returns Comer appears to have carried the county with a bare majority of possibly not over 15.

WORK BEGUN ON WATER MAINS

The contract for putting in the water-mains and sewers for the Town has been awarded to the J. B. McCrary Company of Atlanta, and already a large force of men are busily engaged in laying the water-mains. The system will extend to all parts of town and there will hardly be a residence in Clanton but what won't receive the benefits of this service.

From twenty to thirty car loads of sewers will arrive next week, the ditching machine will also be here and work will be pushed as rapidly as possible. Mr. W. M. Moore, who has charge of installing the system, states that with favorable conditions everything will be in working order by at lea st August 15.

Malaria or Chills & Fever

Prescription No. 666 is prepared especially for MALARIA or CHILLS & FEVER. Five or six doses will break any case, and if taken then as a tonic the Fever will not return. It acts on the liver better than Calomel and does not gripe or sicken. 25c

CARD FROM MR. ATCHISON

Maplesville, Ala., May 9, 1914
Editor Press: As both primaries are over and the nominees declared, just a short letter submitted from your friend will, I think, be in order. As most all the people know, I am the nominee of the democratic party and have served about one year on the Board of Revenue, acting impartially with all men with no other motive than equal rights to all and special favors to none, which is the guide of the entire Board. Nevertheless some hard things have been said about us, we heed them not, nor should we heed them when we alone have been chosen to look to the interest of the county and the welfare of our friends.

I was appointed by the governor to fill the unexpired term of my dear friend, E. J. Hayes, and I believe if it were possible for him to speak he would say amen to what has been done.

Now, I am glad to be honored by the Democratic party and I will strive to work for the good of all citizens of the county alike.

We are all members of the same body, and with the assurance that in a multitude of council there is safety, I take courage, asking Divine guidance, knowing that all laudable undertakings should implore us to do our duty. I feel that with my experience in county affairs I am better fitted to perform the duties of this important office.

I thank my friends for their hearty support in our primary.

W. Y. Atchison.

OFFICERS SCHOOL VERY SUCCESSFUL

EXCELLENT RESULTS OBTAINED BY REGULAR ARMY INSTRUCTORS.

STATE CAPITAL HAPPENINGS

Doings in and Around the State House Chronicled for Our Readers.

—Montgomery.

After a full week of instruction in military tactics and in the art of warfare, the Officers' School of the Alabama National Guard broke camp, and the majority of those in attendance left for their homes in other parts of the State.

Excellent results were obtained by the regular army instructors during the week, and the school this year was the most successful that has been yet held. The last official act of Adjutant General Joseph B. Scully, who was in command of the camp, was to publish an order thanking Capt. William P. Screws, United States army, and his associates for their untiring efforts during the course of the instructions. The next meeting of the officers of the Alabama National Guard, in the event of the State militia is not mobilized by order of the war department, will probably be at Chickamauga, Ga., during the summer, where the Alabama Guard may go into encampment for two weeks.

A. N. G. Ordered to Georgia Camp.

Three regiments of the Alabama National Guard have been ordered by the war department to go into camp next July at Chickamauga, Ga., according to announcement made by Adjutant General Joseph B. Scully. These orders were sent to the Alabama troops from the department of the east.

General Scully announced that he will renew his request that the Alabama troops be ordered to camp in Montgomery in July and in this request he will have the support of the members of the Montgomery Business Men's league. Grounds have already been obtained for the camp and the members of the Alabama officers' school were camped on these grounds.

Urges Librarians to Visit Capital.

Dr. Thomas M. Owen, director of the department of archives and history, issued a statement i nwhich he urges all library workers in Alabama to attend the meeting of the American Library association and affiliated bodies which convene in Washington May 25-30. The meetings cover a whole week, but they are so arranged that visitors can see Washington without interfering with the primary purposes of the trip.

Dr. Owen's statement in part is as follows:

"Washington City is always a delightful place to visit; and more than a thousand trained librarians, specialists and others will be in attendance. Alabama has in recent years made wonderful advances in library work, and no State, certainly in the south, has more fully met its duty to this form of cultural activity. Library extension work is officially provided through the department of archives and history, which does the promotion work usually done by State Library associations elsewhere. Through it traveling libraries, and books for the blind are circulated.

"The State in 1911 made an appropriation, whereby rural schools may secure State aid, in co-operation with local effort, in the purchase of small libraries. This has been working admirably, and already its fine and helpful influence has been felt.

"Alabama now has 21 library buildings devoted specially to library uses, and more than 50 fully or partially trained librarians and library workers. The Federation of Women's clubs, ministers and teachers have all shared in the library growth of the State.

"Another helpful agency has been the Alabama Library association, organized in Montgomery in 1904, and which will hold its next meeting in the City of Montgomery during the fall of the current year."

Take Up Duties Next Few Months.

Representative Henry D. Clayton, recently appointed by President Wilson to succeed the late Federal Judge Thomas G. Jones, is expected to take up his new duties within the next three or four weeks, according to an unofficial announcement made here.

The various candidates who have announced for Mr. Clayton's seat are: Judge A. A. Evans, member of the State tax commission; T. Sidney Fraser of Union Springs, Henry B. Steagall of Ozark and Byrd S. Farmer of Dothan.

Montgomery Jail O. K.

In a report to the Governor of the Montgomery county jail, Dr. William H. Oates, State prison inspector, gave that institution an excellent bill of health, declaring that it was in a "magnificent sanitary condition, well kept and systematically cleaned at regular intervals.

The only recommendations made by Dr. Oates relative to the all was that the prisoners be given a change of food. He reported that there were 97 persons confined in the jail.

Nominate School Faculties.

Members of the faculties of the six State Normal schools of Alabama were nominated by the presidents of the various institutions at a meeting of the State Normal school bard, held in the office of Governor O'Neal May 14. Each president of the State Normal school nominates his faculty and his list is later passed upon by the State Normal school board. All presidents were re-elected at a meeting held recently.

At the meeting of the board the new courses of study that are to be adopted by the Normal schools were submitted and discussed by the members. Recently a sweeping revision in the courses of study in the Class A Normal schools was recommended by the board.

Members of the State Normal school board are Governor O'Neal, W. F. Feagin, State Superintendent of Education John B. Weakley, of Birmingham; R. L. Glenn, of Florence; Captain, Will T. Sheehan, of Montgomery; W. W. Lavender, of Centerville; R. B. Evins, of Greensboro, and Charles McDowell, of Eufaula.

Talks Away His Freedom.

Dave Jordan, a Montgomery county negro, bragged too much about being paroled out of the penitentiary by the governor and as a consequence Dave is again pacing back and forth behind the grim walls of the stockade at Lucile mines. Dave was serving a 25 year sentence at Lucile on a charge of murder. About 10 days ago he escaped and came back to his old haunts around Pike Road. He obtained a position on a farm and was contentedly chopping cotton and telling the other negroes how he obtained his release from prison.

Some of his neighbors became suspicious of Dave's story and when a Montgomery officer happened to be in the neighborhood, he was asked to take a look at Dave. The officer immediately recognized the prisoner and he was quietly but firmly led away to the county jail. The officer picked up $50 reward while Dave has gone back to picking coal.

Veterans Will Be Awarded Diplomas.

At the commencement exercises of the University of Alabama this year the degree of bachelor of arts will be conferred on more than 100 Confederate soldiers of this State who left college before graduation to participate in the Civil War. The Governor signed all the diplomas and sent them to President Denny of the university.

The majority of the old Confederate soldiers on whom the degrees will be conferred left the university within one year of graduation. Others left college in their senior year.

The conferring of degrees on old Confederate veterans of Alabama who left the class room to fight for the cause of the South, will be one of the features of the commencement exercises of the university, and it is expected that practically all of the recipients of such honors will be present when the diplomas are conferred.

Many Pensioners Declared Illegal.

Pensions are being paid illegally to 132 pensioners in Etowah county, to 113 in Fayette county, according to citations that have been issued by the State pension board.

These pensioners must appear before Special Master Gen. Fred S. Ferguson, and show cause why their names should not be dropped from the pension rolls of the State.

Since the work of purging pension rolls began it has been discovered that there are many pensioners in each county of the State who have been drawing money from the State, although they failed to prove a war record as required by law.

Mathews Appointed Registrar.

Governor O'Neal appointed John R. Mathews, deputy clerk of the circuit court of Montgomery county, as a member of the Montgomery county board of registrars to succeed Harvey M. Blue, resigned. Mr. Blue has accepted a position as field agent of the State tax commission.

Thomas Paroled.

Executive clemency has been extended to Doc Thomas of Dale county, who was sentenced to 75 days at hard labor for violating the prohibition laws. The parole was recommended by the State board of pardons and by the citizens of Dale county, and the parole is conditioned on Thomas's future good conduct.

Hobson Reports $16,785 Expense.

Capt. Richmond P. Hobson, who was defeated in the April primary for United States Senator by Oscar W. Underwood, spent $16,785.32 in the campaign, according to an expense account filed with the Secretary of State. Of the amounts, $6,237.58 was for clerk hire; $5,297.74 for advertising, and the remainder for committee assessments and personal and traveling expenses. Walter D. Seed spent $5,964 in his unsuccessful race for nomination for Governor.

Wooden Legs Used as Weapons.

With each using his wooden leg as a weapon, two city prisoners held in the same cell fought an indecisive battle. Jailer Phenix called off hostilities and ordered the men to turn in their wooden legs. He had found the prisoners pounding each other as they stood at arm's length, hobbling about the floor of the cell in dodging and gaining points of advantage. One of the combatants said he had rather be shot than to part with his wooden leg.

PALMER'S REPORT SHOWS FINE WORK

SUNDAY SCHOOL ACTIVITIES OF PAST YEAR REVIEWED BY EXECUTIVE COMMITTEE.

EVERY COUNTY WAS VISITED

Workers Reach Three-Fourths of All Sunday Schools in State of Alabama.

Montgomery.—The State executive committee of the Alabama Sunday School association held its annual meeting in the offices of the association in Montgomery with the following members present: William D. Dunn, Grove Hill, president; M. M. Sweatt, Montgomery, vice chairman; Michael Cody, Montgomery, treasurer; L. M. Hooper, Selma; W. H. Banks, Hurtsboro; W. D. Dillard, Mathews; P. W. Hodges, W. F. Thetford and B. M. Ohme of Montgomery.

General Secretary Leon C. Palmer submitted a full report, showing that there has been a large increase in the amount of field work and office work accomplished by the association, as well as an increase in printed matter distributed. In spite of the increased amount of work, less money had been borrowed and fewer obligations have been incurred. All bills and obligations have been paid in full and a small cash balance remains in the treasury.

The report of field work showed that General Secretary Palmer had visited every county of the State from one to 18 times during the past convention year, and good work had been accomplished by the other employed workers. Three-fourths of all Sunday schools of all denominations in Alabama have been reached during the year by the employed workers of the State Sunday School association.

The report of volunteer work accomplished by the State, county and district officers of the association without salary, showed a total of 2,760 addresses on Sunday school work, 2,003 Sunday schools reached, and 1,541 Sunday schools personally visited. The amount of work accomplished by the unsalaried volunteer workers was shown to be equal to the time of 10 employed field secretaries all serving without any compensation.

It was voted to accept the invitation of Dothan to held the next State convention in that town, and the date for same was referred to a subcommittee, to be reported within the next five days. It was voted also to hold in connection with the Birmingham Sunday School association a State-wide conference of older boys in Birmingham September 24-25.

A vote of thanks wts extended, and to the volunteer workers of the State association for their services. A vote of thanks was also given to the counties which had increased their pledges at the recent State convention.

A standard of efficiency was officially adopted for each of the departments of the Sunday school, the elementary division, the cradle roll, the secondary division, the adult division, the home department, teacher training department, missions department, and temperance department.

The general secretary reported that a large number of persons had applied for election as delegates to the International Sunday School convention to be held in Chicago June 23-30, and that additional applications were being received daily. It was voted to refer the election to official delegates from Alabama to a sub-committee, to report at an early date.

In view of the increasing needs and the growing strength of the work, it was voted to employ three additional field secretaries and others as needed. It was also voted to largely increase the State Association Sunday School Library with a view to lending to any Sunday school worker on request any book on modern Sunday school methods.

After thorough consideration of the reports submitted and the plans for the coming year the committee adjourned.

ATTALLA MINES RESUME.

Miners Return to Work After Long Period of Idleness.

Gadsden.—The Consolidated mines at Attalla, which furnish iron ore for the Gulf States Steel company of this place, resumed full operations after a long shut-down. About 200 miners returned to work. Local iron and steel men claim there is a better tendency in the trend of the market and that there is a better demand for furnace products.

GEWIN NAMED U. S. MARSHAL.

Greensboro Man Nominated for Job By President Wilson.

Washington.—O. C. Gewin of Greensboro was nominated by President Wilson to be United States Marshal for the southern district. Mr. Gewin's nomination leaves only the northern district to be filled. It is understood that a nomination for this place will be made within the next few days.

MUCH MALARIA IN STATE.

Government Health Report Says There Were 21,516 Cases of Malarial Fever in Alabama in 1913.

Washington.—There were 21,516 cases of malarial fever in Alabama in 1913, and as a result of this disease 434 deaths. This startling information is contained in a report of the public health service at Washington made by Surgeon R. H. von Endorf. The number of deaths, however, was less for 1913 than for any year in the past four. In 1912 there were 546 deaths in the State from malarial fevers, and in 1911, 437, and 1910, 467.

The regions in the State in which malaria prevails to the greatest extent are apparently in the Tennessee Valley belt, which extends across the northern part of the State and also in the central prairie region known as the "Black Belt." The disease also prevails to a large extent in counties scattered over the State, particularly in the southernmost counties of Washington and Mobile.

The largest number of deaths have occurred in the counties which have the largest population, such as Jefferson, Montgomery and Mobile. The number of deaths among the colored population exceeded that of the whites, the proportion being 1.45 colored to 1 white.

The number of deaths occurring among children during the first decade of life was 125, or 28.8 per cent of the total for the year. The report further shows that 41.7 per cent of the total malarial deaths occurred during the first two decades of life. Deaths were reported for every month. It appears from the mortality records for the past four years that the months of greatest mortality are August, September and October. The reported deaths begin to increase in number in the month of April, reaching a maximum in September, subsiding slightly in October, and rapidly in November, and average about the same for the months of December to March inclusive.

Mosquitoes are found in every county in the State as well as places for them to breed. Mosquitoes are responsible for the great prevalence of malaria.

RENOMINATION COSTS $1621.

May Have Fight on His Hands, With a Republican in the Feld.

Montgomery.—John L. Burnett, who was re-nominated for Congress in the Seventh district, spent $1621 in his campaign, according to his expense account filed in the office of Cyrus B. Brown, secretary of State. Mr. Burnett was opposed by L. B. Rainey of Gadsden.

It is probable that Mr. Burnett will face another hard campaign as he will be required to make the race in the general election against a republican, probably former Congressman M. W. Howard.

CONVICTED OF ROBBING MAIL.

Robbery Occurred in 1913 Between Riverside and Lincoln.

Anniston.—Marshall Moon was convicted by the jury in the Federal Court of robbing the mail train between Riverside and Lincoln in January, 1913. The jury brought in the verdict of guilty. Judge Grubb sentenced Moon to 25 years in the federal prison.

CHAS. HENDERSON NOMINATED GOVERNOR

DECISIVE MAJORITY IS GIVEN THE PIKE COUNTY MAN OVER HIS OPPONENT, FORMER GOVERNOR B. B. COMER, OF JEFFERSON.

William L. Martin, of Montgomery, is Elected as State's Legal Representative by a Safe Majority — Short Term Senator Receives Flattering Complimentary Vote.

HENDERSON'S STATEMENT

Troy.—Charles Henderson, the successful candidate for Governor in the primary, received the returns at his home here. When asked the result Mr. Henderson said:

"It has been a bitter campaign and a good many harsh things have been said, but I regard the outcome as a rebuke to those who have fostered and given voice to unworthy charges.

"I thank the people of the State for their loyal support and especially the friends who have labored so valiantly in my behalf.

"Alabama has decided through her sovereign voters that she wants no more strife and turmoil, and has spoken in no uncertain terms against such methods as the bringing of fictitious charges which come only from the fertile imaginations of those who hope to profit from them."

Birmingham.—Chares Hendersn, of Troy, was nominated for Governor of Alabama by a decisive majority.

Returns indicate that Mr. Henrerson's majority over former Governor B. B. Comer will be approximately 10,000, and may possibly exceed that figure.

It appeared that Henderson's majority for the state would be determined by his four big counties, Jefferson, Mobile, Montgomery and Pike, although the returns indicated that Governor Comer might even come up to these counties with a small majority.

W. L. Martin defeated D. H. Riddle for attorney general by a majority which will probably go well avobe 20,000.

Persons Apparently is Nominated.

Dr. A. A. Persons has apparently been elected commissioner of agriculture, though his opponent, J. H. Wade, showed special strength in some of the South Alabama counties and ran ahead even in the upper tier of counties.

W. W. Callahan, of Decatur, and Judge E. B. Almon, of Sheffield, ran a close race, but Judge Almon apparently has the best of it.

In the race for Governor Jefferson county gave the next Governor his banner majority and it proved to be all his friends had claimed. With all boxes of the county reported except 20 small county precincts the vote stood: Henderson 8293, Comer 4851, giving Henderson a majority of 3442.

Forty-two Jefferson county boxes, Persons 7418 and Wade 4523.

Forty-one boxes in Jefferson gave Martin 7410 and Riddle 3077.

The school tax carried favorably by a large majority in Jefferson county.

Early Returns Indicate Result.

The result in the Governor's race was indicated very early when the returns from the country precincts of Jefferson county began to come in. It was realized before the primary by political observers that Governor Comer would have to hold down Henderson's majorities in Jefferson and this he failed to do. The first 28 country boxes in Jefferson showed

Henderson leading fully 2 to 1 and this ratio was even more than maintained when the city returns began to come in.

The first results from the smaller counties early showed that Governor Comer was not getting the vote that he and his friends had expected. When reports came that Blount, Madison, Shelby, Etowah, Tallapoosa and Dallas and other widely scattered counties had given Henderson larger majorities than even his friends had anticipated, it was soon seen that it was only a question of the Henderson majority.

In order for Comer to win it was necessary for him to come to the big counties of Jefferson, Mobile, Montgomery and Pike with several thousand majority, but the returns soon indicated that in this he had failed.

When Etowah's returns came showing that Henderson had carried this rock-ribbed prohibition county Comer's friends gave up.

When the returns from the state's three largest cities began to come in there was no longer any doubt of the outcome. The Southside fire department box was the first Birmingham box to report. It showed Comer 303, Henderson 718. Then came Ensley with Comer 315 and Henderson 612. Bessemer was the next big box in Jefferson and it showed an even greater proportion, the result being Comer 277 and Henderson 651.

Mobile came in early with a majority in the city for Henderson of practically 1500, while Montgomery upheld the sanguine expectations of the Henderson leaders by making it almost a runaway.

Capt. Frank S. White was given a large complimentary vote for United States senator for the short term to succeed the late Joseph F. Johnston. The election of Captain White was a more formality, as he was nominated over Ray Rushton on April 6, and had no opposition in the special election called by the Governor.

MONTGOMERY CELEBRATES HENDERSON'S NOMINATION.

Montgomery—Montgomery celebrated the nomination of Charles Henderson by an immense torchlight procession, the parade having been made up entirely of Henderson supporters. As soon as the first returns indicated that Henderson was leading for Governor, a great Henderson demonstration was held on the streets in the business section of the city. Cheers were heard on every corner and a band played lively airs.

SYNOPSIS.

John Valiant, a rich society favorite, suddenly discovers that the Valiant corporation, which his father founded and which was the principal source of his wealth, has failed. He voluntarily turns over his private fortune to the receiver for the corporation. His entire remaining possessions consist of an old motor car, a white bull dog and Damory court, a neglected estate in Virginia. On the way to Damory court he meets Shirley Dandridge, an auburn-haired beauty, and decides that he is going to like Virginia immensely. Shirley's mother, Mrs. Dandridge, and Major Bristow exchange reminiscences during which it is revealed that the major, Valiant's father, and a man named Sassoon were rivals for the hand of Mrs. Dandridge in her youth. Sassoon and Valiant fought a duel on her account in which the former was killed. Valiant finds Damory court overgrown with weeds and creepers and decides to rehabilitate the place. Valiant saves Shirley from the bite of a snake, which bites him. Knowing the deadliness of the bite, Shirley sucks the poison from the wound and saves his life. Valiant learns for the first time that his father left Virginia on account of a duel in which Doctor Southall and Major Bristow acted as his father's seconds. Valiant and Shirley become good friends. Mrs. Dandridge faints when she meets Valiant for the first time. Valiant discovers that he has a fortune in old walnut trees. The yearly tournament, a survival of the jousting of feudal times, is held at Damory court. At the last moment Valiant takes the place of one of the knights, who is sick, and enters the lists. He wins and chooses Shirley Dandrige as queen of beauty to the dismay of Katherine Fargo, a former sweetheart, who is visiting in Virginia. The tournament ball at Damory court draws the elite of the countryside.

CHAPTER XXIV.—Continued.

To the twanging of the deft black fingers, they passed in gorgeous array between files of low-cut gowns and flower-like faces and masculine swallow-tails, to the yellow parlor. Once there the music ceased with a splendid crash, the eleven knights each dropped upon one knee, the eleven ladies-in-waiting curtsied low, and Shirley, seated upon the dais, leaned her burnished head to receive the crown. What though the bauble was but bristol-board, its jeweled chasing but tinsel and paste? On her head it glowed and trembled, a true diadem. As Valiant set the glittering thing on those rich and wonderful coils, the music of her presence was singing a swift melody in his blood.

His coronation address held no such flowery periods as would have rolled from the major's soul. He had chosen a single paragraph he had lighted on in an old book in the library—a history of the last Crusade in French black-letter. He had translated and memorized the archaic phrasing, keeping the quaint feeling of the original:

"These noble knights bow in your presence, fair lady, as their leige, whom they know as even in judgment, as dainty in fulfilling these our acts of arms, and do recommend their all unto your Good Grace in as lowly wise as they can. O queen, in whom the whole story of virtue is written with the language of beauty, your eyes, which have been only wont to discern the bowed knees of kneeling hearts and, inwardly turned, found always the heavenly solace of a sweet mind, see them, ready in heart and able with hands not only to assailing but to prevailing."

A hushed rustle of applause—not loud: the merest whisper of silken feet and feathered fans tapped softly—testified to a widespread approbation. It was the first sight many there had had of John Valiant and in both looks and manner he fitted their best ideals.

The queen's curtsey was the signal for the music, which throbbed suddenly into a march, and she stepped down beside him. Couple after couple, knights and ladies, ranged behind them, till the twenty-four stood ready for the royal quadrille. It was the old-fashioned lancers, but the deliberate strain lent the familiar measures something of the stately effect of the minuet.

Quadrilles were not invented as aids to conversation, and John Valiant's and Shirley's was necessarily limited. "The decorations are simply delicious!" she said as they faced each other briefly. "How did you manage it?"

"Home talent with a vengeance. Uncle Jefferson and I did it with our little hatchets. But the roses—"

They were swooped apart and Shirley found herself curtsying to Chilly Lusk. "More than queen!" he said under his breath. "I had my heart set on naming you today. I reckon I've lost my rabbit-foot!"

Opposite, in turn, Betty Page had slipped her dainty hand in John Valiant's. "Ah haven't seen such a lovely dance for yeahs!" she sighed. "Isn't Shirley too sweet? If Ah had hair like hers, Ah wouldn't speak to a soul on earth!"

The exigencies of the figure gave no space for answer, and presently, after certain labyrinthine evolutions, Shirley's eyes were gazing into his again. "How adorable you look!" he whispered, as he bowed over her hand. "How does it feel to be a queen?"

"This little head was never made to wear a crown," she laughed. "Queens should be regal. Miss Fargo would have—"

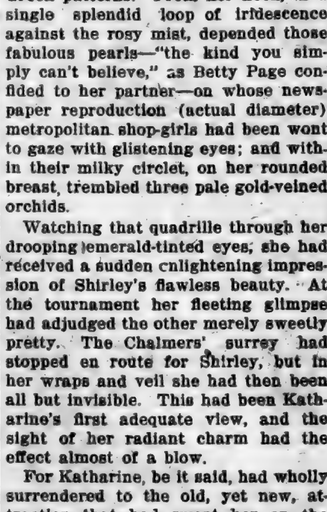
The music swept the rest away, but not the look of blinding reproach he gave her that made her heart throb wildly as she glided on.

* * * * * * *

The last note of the quadrille slipped into a waltz dreamily slow, and Valiant put his arm about Shirley and they floated away. Once before, in the moonlighted garden at Rosewood, she had lain in his arm for one brief instant then she had seemed like some trapped wood-thing resisting. Now, her slender body swaying to his every motion, she was another creature. Under the drooping tawny hair her face was almost as pale as the white satin of her gown; her lips were parted, and as they moved, he could feel her heart rise and fall to her languorous breath.

CHAPTER XXV.

By the Sun-Dial.



Eyes arched with fan-shielded whispers, and fair faces, foreshortened as they turned back over powder-white shoulders, followed their swallow-like movement. From an ever-widening circle of masculine devotees Katharine Fargo watched them with a smile that cloaked an increasing and unwelcome question.

Katharine had never looked more handsome; a critical survey of her mirror at Gladden Hall had assured her of that. Never had her poise been more superb, her toilet more enrapturing. She was exquisitely gowned in rose-colored mousseline-de-sole, embroidered in tiny brilliants laid on in Greek patterns. From her neck, in a single splendid loop of iridescence against the rosy mist, depended those fabulous pearls—"the kind you simply can't believe," as Betty Page confided to her partner—on whose newspaper reproduction (actual diameter) metropolitan shop-girls had been wont to gaze with glistening eyes; and within their milky circlet, on her rounded breast, trembled three pale gold-veined orchids.

Watching that quadrille through her drooping emerald-tinted eyes, she had received a sudden enlightening impression of Shirley's flawless beauty. At the tournament her fleeting glimpse had adjudged the other merely sweetly pretty. The Chalmers' surrey had stopped en route for Shirley, but in her wraps and veil she had then been all but invisible. This had been Katharine's first adequate view, and the sight of her radiant charm had the effect almost of a blow.

For Katharine, be it said, had wholly surrendered to the old, yet new, attraction that had swept her on the tourney field. And what had lain always in the back of her mind as a half-formed intention, had become a self-admitted purpose during the motor ride.

In another moment the waltz fainted out, to be succeeded by a duex-temps, and presently the host, in his crimson cloak, was doffing his plumed hat before her. Circling the polished floor in the maze, there was something gratefully like former days in the assured touch, the true and ready guidance. The intrusive question faded. He was the John Valiant she had always known, of flashing repartee and graceful compliment, yet with a touch of dignity, too—as befitted the lord of a manor—which sat well upon him. After a decorous dozen of rounds, she took his arm and allowed her perfect figure to be conducted through the various rooms of the ground floor, chatting in quite the old-time way, till a new gallant claimed her.

Katharine Had Never Looked More Handsome.

The mellow strings made on their merry tune, and at length the Washington Post marched all in flushed unity of purpose to the great muslin-walled porch with its array of tables groaning under viands concocted by Aunt Daphne for the delectation of the palate-weary.

And then once more the waltz-strain supervened and in the yellow parlor joy was again unconfined.

Again Valiant claimed Katharine and they glided off on "The Beautiful Danube." Her paleness now had a tinge of color, but nevertheless he thought she drooped. "You are tired," he said, "shan't we sit it out?"

"Oh, do you mind?" she responded gratefully. "It has been a fairly strenuous day, hasn't it?"

He guided her to a corridor, where branches of rhododendron screened an alcove of settees and seductive cushions. Here, her weariness seemed put to rout. There was no drooping of fringed lids, no disconcerting silences; she chattered with even more than her usual piquancy.

"I have been listening to paeans all the evening," she said. "And you deserve them. It's a fine big thing you are attempting—the restoring of this old estate. And I know you have even bigger plans, too."

He nodded, suddenly serious and thoughtful. "There's a lot I'd like to do. It's not only the house and grounds. There are . . . other things. For instance, back on the mountain—on my own land—is a settlement they call Hell's-Half-Acre. Probably it has well earned the name. It's a wretched collection of hovels and surly men and drabs of women and unkempt children, the poorest of poor-whites. Not one of them can read or write, and they live like animals. If I'm ever able, I mean to put a manual-training school up there. And then—"

He ended with a half laugh, suddenly conscious that he was talking in a language she would scarcely understand—in fact, in a tongue new to himself. But there was no smile on her lips and her extraordinary eyes—cool gray, shot through with emerald—were looking into his with a frankness and sympathy he would not have guessed lay beneath her glacial placidity.

To Katharine, indeed, it made little difference what philanthropic fads the man she had chosen might affect as regarded his tenantry. Ambitions like these had a manorial flavor that did not displease her. And the Fargo millions would bear much harmless hammering. A change, subtle and incommunicable, passed over her.

"I shall think of you," she sighed, "as working on in this splendid program. For it is splendid. But New York will miss you, John."

"Ah, no. I've no delusions on that score. I dare say I'm almost forgotten there already. Here I have a place."

Her head, leaned back against the cushion, turned toward him, the pale orchids trembling on her bosom—she was so near that he could feel her breath on his cheek. A new waltz had begun to sigh its languorous measures.

"Place?" she queried. "Do you think you had no place there? Is it possible that you do not understand that your going has left—a void?"

He looked at her suddenly, and her eyes fell. Before he answered, however, the big form of Major Bristow appeared, looking about him.

"It has—left a void," she said, her eyes still downcast, her voice just low enough, "—for me."

The major pounced upon them at this juncture, feelingly accusing John of the nefarious design of robbing the assemblage of its bright and particular star. When Katharine put her hand in her cavalier's arm, her eyes were dewy under their long shading lashes and her fine lips ever so little tremulous. It had been her best available moment, and she had used it.

As she moved away, her faint color slightly heightened, she was glad of the interruption. It was better as it was. When John Valiant came to her again. . . .

But to him, as he stood watching her move lightly from him, there was vouchsafed illumination. It came to him suddenly that that placidity and hauteur which he had so admired in the old days were no mask for fires within. The exquisite husk was the real Katharine. Hers was the loveliness of some tall white lily cut in marble, splendid but chill. And with the thought, between him and her there swept through the shimmering candle-lighted air a breath of wet rose-fragrance like an impalpable cloud, and set in the midst of it a misty star-tinted gown sprayed with lilies-of-the-valley, and above it a girl's face clear and vivid, her deep shadow-blue eyes fixed on his.

The music of a two-step was languishing when, a little later, Valiant and Shirley strolled down between the garden box-hedges, cypress-shaped and lifting spire-like toward a sky which bent, a silent canopy of mauve and purplish blue. Behind them Damory court lay a nest of woven music and laughter. The long white-mullioned porch shimmered goldenly, and beside it under the lanterns dallied a flirtatious couple or two, ghost-like in the shadows.

"Come," he said. "Let me take you to see the sun-dial now."

The tangle had been cut away and a narrow gravel-path led through the pruned creepers. She made an exclamation of delight. The onyx-pillar stood in an oasis of white—moonflowers, white dahlias, mignonette and narcissus; bars of late lilies-of-the-valley beyond these, bordered with Arum-lilies, white clematis, iris and bridal-wreath, shading out into tender paler hues that ringed the spotless purity like dawning passion.

"White for happiness," he quoted. "You said that when you brought me here—the day we planted the rose-bushes. Do you remember what I said? That some day, perhaps, I should love this spot the best of all at Damory court." He was silent a moment, tracing with his finger the motto on the dial's rim. "When I was very little," he went on—"hardly more than three years old, I think—my father and I had a play, in which we lived in a great mansion like this. Every night

Wishing House, and it was in the middle of the Never-Never Land—a sort of beautiful fairy country in which everything happened right. I know now that the Never-Never Land was Virginia, and that Wishing House was Damory court. No wonder my father loved it! No wonder his memory turned back to it always! I've wanted to make it as it was when he lived here. And I want the old dial to count happy hours for me.

Something had crept into his tone that struck her with a strange sweet terror and tumult of mind. The hand that clutched her skirts about her knees had begun to tremble and she caught the other hand to her cheek in a vague hesitant gesture. The moon-flowers seemed to be great round eyes staring up at her.

"Shirley—" he said, and now his voice was shaken with longing—"will you make my happiness for me?"

She was standing perfectly still against the sun dial, both hands laced together, against her breast, her eyes on his with a strange startled look. Over the hush of the garden now, like the very soul of the passionate night, throbbed the haunting barcarole of "Tales of Hoffmann:"

"Night of stars and night of love—"

an inarticulate echo of his longing. He took a step toward her, and she turned like one in sudden terror seeking a way of escape. But he caught her close in his arms.

"I love you!" he said. "Hear it now in my bride's garden that I've made for you! I love you, I love you!"

For one instant she struggled. Then, slowly, her eyes turned to his, the sweet lips trembling, and something dawning deep in the dewy blue that turned all his leaping blood to quicksilver. "My darling!" he breathed, and their lips met.

In that delirious moment both had the sense of divine completion that comes only with love returned. For him there was but the woman in his arms, the one woman created for him since the foundation of the world. It was Kismet. For this he had come to Virginia. For this fate had turned and twisted a thousand ways. Through the riot of his senses, like a silver blaze, ran the legend of the calendar: "Every man carries his fate upon a riband about his neck." For her, something seemed to pass from her soul with that kiss, some deep irrevocable thing, shy but fiercely strong, that had sprung to him at that lip-contact as steel to magnet. The foliage about them flared up in green light and the ground under her feet rose and fell like deep sea-waves.

She lifted her face to him. It was deathly pale, but the light that burned on it was lit from the whitest altar-fires of southern girlhood. "Six weeks ago," she whispered, "you had never seen me!"

He held her crushed to him. She could feel his heart thudding madly. "I've always known you," he said. "I've seen you a thousand times. I saw you coming to meet me down a cherry-blossomed lane in Kyoto. I've seen your eyes peering from behind a veil in India. I've heard your voice calling to me, through the padding camel's feet, from the desert mirages. You are the dream I have gone searching always! Ah, Shirley, Shirley, Shirley!"

CHAPTER XXVI.

The Doctor Speaks.

While the vibrant strings hummed and sang through the roses, and the couples drifted on tireless and content, or blissfully "sat out" dances on the stairway, Katharine Fargo held her stately court no less gaily for the stealthy doubt that was creeping over her spirit. She had been so certain of what would happen that evening that when her father (between cigars on the porch with Judge Chalmers and Doctor Southall) had searched her out under a flag-of-truce, she had sent him to the right-about, laughingly declining to depart before royalty. But number followed number, and the knight in purple and gold had not paused again before her. Now the scarlet cloak no longer flaunted among the dancers, and the white satin gown and sparkling coronal had disappeared. The end of the next "round-dance" found her subsiding into the flower-banked alcove suddenly distrait amid her escort's sallies. It was at this moment that she saw, entering the corridor from the garden, the missing couple.

It was not the faint flush on Shirley's cheek—that was not deep—nor was it his nearness to her, though they stood closely, as lovers might. But there was in both their faces a something that resurgent conventionality had not had time to cover— a trembling reflection of that "light that never was, on sea or land"—which was like a death-stab to what lay far deeper than Katharine's heart, her pride. She drew swiftly back, dismayed at the sudden verification, and for an instant her whole body chilled.

A craving for a glass of water has served its purpose a thousand times; as her cavalier solicitously departed to fetch the cooling draught, she rose, and carelessly humming the refrain the music had just left off, sauntered lightly out by another door to the open air. A swift glance about her showed her she was unobserved and she stepped down to the grass and along the winding path to a bench at some distance in the shrubbery. Here the smiling mask slipped from her face and with a shiver she dropped her hot face in her hands.

There were no tears. The wave that was welling over her was one of bitter humiliation. She had shot her bolt and missed—she, Katharine Fargo! For three years she had held John Valiant, romantically speaking in the hollow of her shapely hand. Now she had all but thrown herself at his feet—and he had turned away to this flame-haired, vivid girl whom he had not known as many months!

Heavy footfalls all at once aproached her—two men were coming from the house. There was the spitting crackle of a match, and as she peered out, its red flare lighted the massive face and floating hair of Major Bristow. His companion's face was in the shadow. She waited, thinking they would pass; but to her annoyance, when she looked again, they had seated themselves on a bench a few paces away.

To be found mooning in the shrubbery like a schoolgirl did not please her, but it seemed there was no recourse, and she had half arisen, when the major's gruff-voiced companion spoke a name that caused her to sit down abruptly.

Sam Blythe, on the Water Wagon, Found That He Had Nothing to Play With.

Two years ago Sam Blythe, the writer, elected to mount the water cart. He became boastfully, painfully, selfishly arid. For a time false friends tried to lure him back into the shackles—between September 15, 1911, and June 28, 1912, he received 418 bottles of whisky from 218 persons—but they finally gave it up as a bad job. The other day Blythe was talking with two serfs of the demon at the Waldorf. By and by their manie came upon them. They began to edge toward the bar.

"Well, Sam, see you later," they said.

"No," said Blythe. "Dunno. You may not care to have me in your little party, but I am going right along. I will drink water, or lemonade, or ginger ale, or any non-alcoholic thing you say, but I am not going to sit and look on all alone."

"Why, Sam, you're welcome, only the least you can do—"

"No, I am not," said Blythe. "I can tell by the tone of your voices I spent the best 20 years of my life making a collection of drinking friends, and now I have no one to play with."—Cincinnati Times-Star.

Concave Cinema Screen.

Eliminating false perspective and making every portion of the picture equally distant from the projecting light, a Chicago inventor has patented and placed on the market a concave screen for which much is claimed. The screen is a segment of a sphere, the lens of the projecting apparatus being at the focal point of the screen, and as a result all the rays of light strike the surface at the same angle and are reflected to the visitors without distortion. Another virtue claimed for the concave screen, says Popular Mechanics, is that it improves the acoustic properties of the hall, or theater, in which it is used. As sound waves are projected and reflected in the same manner as the rays of light, reflections from the surface of the screen are sent to all parts of the auditorium, preventing like cases, and such rents, incomes, revenues and profits shall be applied by such receiver according to law and the orders and directions of the court.

Article 6. IT IS FURTHER COVENANTED AND AGREED that in case of any default for which a right of entry, and sale or sale without entry would arise, as hereinbefore provided, the Trustee may, in its discretion, waive such right of entry, or of entry and sale, or sale without entry, and proceed to foreclose this mortgage and take all necessary steps for the protection of the rights of the bondholders hereunder by such proceedings at law or in equity as it may by counsel be advised are proper and necessary. And in case of sale under the decree of any court of competent jurisdiction the proceeds of such sale shall be disposed of in the same manner and for the same purposes as are hereinbefore described, in regard to a sale by the Trustee on its own authority.

Article 7. IT IS HEREBY DECLARED AND AGREED that it shall be the duty of the Trustees to exercise the power of entry and sale or the power of sale without entry hereby granted, or to take proper proceedings for foreclosure in equity or at law to enforce the rights of the bondholders under this indenture, upon receipt of an indemnity and the request in writing of the holders of a majority in amount of the bonds and coupons secured hereby.

Article 8. IT IS HEREBY COVENANTED AND AGREED that in the event the Trustee shall take possession of and operate the said waterworks plant or shall make sale of said property in accordance with the foregoing provisions, or shall foreclose this mortgage by proceedings in court that in all such cases the Trustee, or the person or persons, corporation or corporations, to whom said property shall or may, from time to time, be sold or the receiver, or person appointed by the court as herein provided shall have and is hereby irrevocably granted full power and right to operate and control said waterworks plant and system, with all the appurtenances thereunto belonging and to collect and receive the rents, incomes, revenues and profits thereof, according to the terms of the ordinance of the Town of Clanton authorizing this indenture.

ARTICLE 9. In case of default being made in the payment of any installment of interest on any of said bonds, and such default shall continue for a period of six (6) months, the trustee may, and upon the written request of the majority in amount of all of said bonds outstanding, shall declare the principal of all of said bonds to be due and payable and thereupon the said principal shall be and become forthwith due and payable, anything in said bonds or herein contained to the contrary notwithstanding. And upon such principal sum being declared due and payable it is expressly covenanted and agreed that all rights of entry or entry and sale, or sale without entry, or to legal proceedings for foreclosure, shall immediately belong to and be fully vested in the Trustee, according to the conditions and provisions of this mortgage. This provision, however, is subject to the condition that if at any time after the principal of said bonds shall have been so declared due and payable, all arrears of interest upon all such bonds with interest on over-due installments of interest, shall either be paid by the town or be collected out of the mortgaged property before any sale of the mortgaged property shall have been made, then and in every such case the holders of a majority in amount of the bonds hereby secured may by written notice to the Town of Clanton and to the Trustee, rescind and annul such declaration and its consequences, but no such rescission shall extend to or affect any subsequent default.

ARTICLE X. In the event that the Chicago Title and Trust Company shall for any reason decline, fail or be incapable to act as Trustee hereunder, the Continental and Commercial Trust and Savings Bank of Chicago, Illinois, and F. William Craft, of Chicago, Illinois, or either of them legally capable to act, is hereby authorized to succeed to all the rights, privileges and duties of such Trustee as fully and effectually as though they or either of them had been named as the Trustee herein.

In case at any time there shall be a vacancy in the office of the Trustee hereunder, such vacancy may be filled and the successor to party of the second part appointed by a writing duly signed and acknowledged by the holders of a majority in amount of the bonds then outstanding, which writing shall be recorded in the office of the Recorder of Chilton County, Alabama, and the successor as appointed shall become and be vested with all the powers, rights, estates and interests granted or conferred upon the Trustee by these presents, without any further assurance or conveyance whatever.

IN WITNESS WHEREOF the Town of Clanton, by the Mayor and Council, has caused these presents to be executed in its behalf by its Mayor, countersigned by its Treasurer, attested by its Clerk, and its corporate seal to be hereto affixed this First day of April, A.D., 1914.

PUBLISHED IN THE INTEREST OF CHILTON COUNTY AND HER PEOPLE

VOL 5. CLANTON, ALA., THURSDAY MAY 21, 1914 NO. 7

REPORT OF GRAND JURY

The State of Alabama,
Chilton County.

Circuit Court of said County and State; Spring, 1914 Term.

To the Hon. W. W. Pearson, Judge of the 15th Judicial Circuit:

We, the Grand Jury, duly empannelled and sworn at the Spring Term, 1914, of the Circuit Court of Chilton county, Alabama, beg leave to submit this our final report:

We have investigated 83 alleged violations of the law and have returned unto your Honor's Court 40 indictments;

THE PROHIBITION LAW.

Many witnesses were summoned before the Grand Jury and examined as to violations of the prohibition law. The prevailing idea with the people in supporting the liquor traffic is highly insufficient to suppress the unlawful sale of whiskey in Chilton county. The indiscriminate summoning of witnesses, whose ever-ready answer "I ordered it" or "I don't know" only entails much expense to the county, and results in but few indictments.

We firmly believe that, with the proper co-operation on the part of our reputable citizenship, this evil (the traffic in liquor) can, in a large manner be eradicated. But it cannot be done by the indiscriminate summoning of witnesses before the Grand Juries. We are of the opinion that the illegal sale of whiskey is on the decrease in Chilton county. We also ask that the intelligent citizenship join us in our effort to stamp out this great evil.

COUNTY OFFICERS BOOKS AND BONDS.

We find the books of all county officers neatly kept. In view of the fact that your Honor charged that it was not necessary, we did not make a thorough examination as to exactness of the books of the county officers.

We find the bonds of all the county officers ample in their security.

COUNTY PROPERTY

We find the jail clean, well kept and the prisoners properly cared for. At the court house we find everything in good condition, with the exception of a few minor repairs, which the Judge of Probate has assured us will receive immediate attention. We also commend the Commissioners and Judge of Probate for the concrete work around the court house, which is nearing completion. We further recommend that the office of the County Superintendent of Education be equipped with better furniture.

THE COUNTY POOR

A committee of this Grand Jury has visited the poor house and find therein 22 inmates, all white. They are very well cared for and seem to have clean and comfortable quarters. We further recommend that the County Commissioners allow the inmates 30 cents per head per day for keeping.

COUNTY ROADS.

We find many of the county roads in good condition, and practically all of them in a better condition than heretofore known. We also, wish to commend the Board of County Commissioners and Judge of Probate for the work they are accomplishing along the lines of road-building. We earnestly urge all citizens of the county, irrespective of religion or politics, to join with the County Commissioners and co-operate with them in furthering the good roads movement.

Having finished the duties for which we were empannelled, we wish to thank your honor for his able charge; also our able Solicifor his efficient services and instructions, and Sheriff Jones and his deputies, we respectfully request that we be finally discharged

L. ROY SAWYER,
Foreman.

To The Hon. Solicitor and Gentlemen of the Grand Jury of the Spring Term, 1914, of Circuit Court of Chilton County, Alabama.

I beg to report to your honorable body that I have cash on hand to credit of the following funds:

May 11th, to Cash on Hand, General Fund	$3,665.15
Special Road Fund	580.80
Fine and Forfeiture	4,334.85
Redemption of Land	679.10
Total	$9,659.95

I, J. W. Littlejohn, Treasurer of Chilton County, Alabama, do hereby certify that the above is a true and correct statement of the finances of Chilton county as shown by my books.

Respectfully submitted,
J. W. LITTLEJOHN,
Treasurer of Chilton County, Alabama.

Balance May 15, 1914, $7,234.57.

Why the Haynes develops more than its rated horsepower

HAYNES "SIX" 65 H. P.

The Haynes motor is built in the Haynes factory. Elwood Haynes, President of the Company—inventor, metallurgist—passes on all metals used in its construction.

The crankshaft, camshaft, cylinders, and, in fact, all vital parts are made by Haynes experts; each part is subjected to the most rigid test and inspection before being built into the car.

All moving parts on the

HAYNES

America's First Car

including the pistons, connecting rods, crankshafts and flywheel, are accurately balanced.

The scleroscope is used to test all parts that have been heat treated, to insure the proper degree of hardness and to reject defective material.

Every magneto, every carburetor, every starting motor and lighting generator—every unit of the car—receives a careful, scrupulous test.

The transmission shafts are mounted on Timken bearings, which give a sturdy construction and reduce friction to the minimum. The axles likewise are designed to overcome friction without sacrificing strength.

The design is so well balanced that the car weighs practically the same at each wheel.

That's why the Haynes develops more than its rated horsepower.

That's why it has unusual hill-climbing ability.

That's why the Haynes has enjoyed uninterrupted success for twenty-one years.

A beautiful picture in colors, suitable for framing. Price only 10c. W. Davis, B. C. Box 1, Atlanta, Ga.

DEATH OF SOLDIER SUBJECT OF NOTE

BRYAN SENDS SHARP NOTE TO HUERTA DEMANDING A FULL EXPLANATION.

PRIVATE PARKS EXECUTED

Rebels Continue on Their Victorious March Into Huerta's Important Strongholds.

Washington.—The United States demanded of the Huerta government news of the fate of Private Parks, the American infantryman who strayed into Mexican lines near Vera Cruz, declaring that unless information about him was given immediately the American government would consider that "an unfriendly and hostile act" had been committed in violation of the understanding for a cessation of hostilities pending mediation.

President Wilson and Secretary Bryan, it was learned, drafted a strong communication, after receiving word from the Brazilian minister in Mexico City that Parks had been "executed." No mention was made in the minister's report of whether he was shot as a spy after a court-martial or whether his body was burned, as has been reported persistently to General Funston.

The American government cabled the Brazilian minister to inform the Huerta government of the strong feeling of the United States in the matter, directing him to make vigorous representations concerning the incident. The note asked the minister to protest to the Huerta government that if Parks were alive the failure to explain his whereabouts was in itself an unfriendly attitude, and that if the soldier had been executed, as has been reported, such execution of a man who came into the Mexican lines in full uniform was contrary to military procedure of civilized nations and was an act of hostility.

No mention was made in the American note of the course the United States intends to pursue in the matter, but an official close to the president said it was one of the things which would be held up against the Huerta government when the final reckoning came over offenses committed against the United Statees.

Mediation Postponed.

Postponement of the Niagara Falls Mexican mediation conference from Monday to Wednesday, at the request of the Huerta delegates, changed the plans of the South American mediators and the American commissioners for departure, and at the same time produced much speculation as to possible significance in the delay. Later the Spanish ambassador here, who is caring for the interests of Mexico in the United States, authorized a statement that the delay merely meant that the Huerta delegates wanted a brief respite from their long journey and had no political importance.

Lobos Incident Cleared Up.

The three mediators, through the state department, announced that the Lobos island incident had been cleared up. They informed General Huerta that the Mexicans were free to return to the Lobos island lighthouse. The six South Americans reported to have been arrested for sniping turned out to be Mexicans, it was reported, and, like others arrested at Vera Cruz, were discharged. They had claimed they were South Americans to escape punishment. On the whole, President Wilson and his cabinet took a more hopeful view of the Mexican situation than they had for weeks. They are confident mediation will accomplish something toward the pacific settlement of the problem. The Constitutionalists' capture of Tampico brought out the fact that there is no prohibition against the shipment of arms into that port from the United States or any other country.

Colonel Roosevelt Is Ill.

New York.—Owing to the state of Col. Theodore Roosevelt's health, members of his family have requested that no public reception, similar to the greeting extended to him on his return from his African trip, be arranged on his arrival in New York from Brazil next week.

Ten Men Killed.

Detroit, Mich.—Ten men were killed and three more were thought to be fatally injured as the result of an explosion which wrecked the plant of the Mexican Crude Rubber company in the western part of the city. The direct cause of the explosion may never be known. It was reported gasoline was responsible for the accident. Later it was said sulphuric acid probably was the cause. The coroner shared the latter opinion and said he based his belief on the statement of others.

Juarez, Mexico.—Monclova, the last town held by the federals on the National Railways of Mexico between Piedras Negras, opposite Eagle Pass, Texas, and Saltillo, has been occupied by Constitutionalists under Gen. Francisco Murgia, according to a message from General Murgia. The message stated that the federal garrison fled at sight of the advance guard of the Constitutionalists, some in flight. The capture of Monclova, it is said, will probably permit of the opening of communication between Piedras Negras and Monterey.

TAMPICO FALL REBELS' VICTORY

AFTER DAYS OF FIGHTING LAST FEDERAL COAST DEFENSE CAPTURED.

ANOTHER PROBLEM IN U. S.

Rebels' Ammunition Gone, and City Is Without Supplies—What Will United Statese Do?

Washington.—Evacuation of Tampico by the Mexican federal garrison began at 12:50 p. m., according to a relayed wireless dispatch to the navy department from Rear Admiral Mayo. The federal troops were leaving by the railroad.

Rear Admiral Mayo at Tampico reported to the navy department that the Mexican federal gunboats Bravo and Zaragoza steamed out of the Panuco river and anchored near the foreign warships outside.

Admiral Mayo says it was reported that the casualties on both sides have been very heavy.

That the rebels encountered desperate resistance in their final attack and that they were compelled to carry their fight to the heart of the town, was indicated by Rear Admiral Mayo's report. He reported that at one o'clock when it was reported the rebels had occupied Tampico there was heavy rifle firing in the plaza, and that big gun-firing continued.

Advices received by Constitutionalists here said the federals were evacuating Tampico, but details were lacking.

The federal were retreating by way of the railroad leading to San Luis Potosi, and it was assumed that they hoped to reach Pachuca, the terminus of a railway line that leads indirectly to Mexico City. The railroads out of Tampico to Monterey is held by the Constitutionalists.

Few Foreigners in Tampico.

Few, if any, foreigners remain in Tampico, according to the last reports received here. A general exodus began when the news spread that the rebels were preparing for a final assault. Many Tampico refugees passed through here, but few were allowed ashore, as the American authorities were not willing to increase the large colony already to overcrowding the hotels. With the fall of Tampico hostilities on the gulf coast of Mexico come to an end, at least for a time.

Rebels' Ammunition Gone.

Constitutionalists say that after the battles of Tampico and Saltillo, now being fought, the rebels will have little ammunition left with which to continue the fight against Huerta. With a practical embargo on the importation of munitions of war across the American border, in effect the rebels believe their only chance of getting additional ammunition will be from abroad.

On the other hand, should the Constitutionalists be allowed to import ammunition through Tampico, some officials point out that Huerta probably would protest that the holding up of shipments of arms for him at Vera Cruz was unjust.

The position of the American government has been that it held the customs house at Vera Cruz as an act of reprisal, and when a shipment of arms was en route to Puerto Mexico, recently, no attempt was made to prevent its landing, though, in a way unexplained, the German ship carrying the munitions decided not to land its cargo.

NEXT MEETING IN SEATTLE

Dr. Frederick Smith of Rochester, N. Y., New Imperial Potentate.

Atlanta.—From the time that it was announced that Seattle had won the convention for next year until streaks of gray lent sallowness to a ruddy night, the headquarters of Nile temple, of Seattle, were besieged with congratulators and serenaders.

Frederick R. Smith of Rochester, N. Y., is the new imperial potentate, having, according to the rules of the Shrine, been automatically elevated from the post of deputy imperial potentate.

Workhouse for Preacher.

New York.—Bouck White, congressional clergyman, author, Socialist, and Milo Woolmanfl, both Harvard graduates, were sentenced to Blackwell's island workhouse by a police court magistrate for their participation in disorderly scenes enacted last Sunday at the Calvary Baptist church, of which John D. Rockefeller and John D. Rockefeller, Jr., are attendants. White and Woolman were two of a group which invaded the church during the morning services.

Baptists Elect Burrows.

Nashville, Tenn.—Dr. Lansing Burrows of Americus, Ga., was elected president of the Southern Baptist convention which convened here for a five days' session. Doctor Burrows' selection terminated an exciting three-ballot contest in which his four opponents for the honor were eliminated. The first session of the convention was attended by 1,458 authorized delegates representing a constituency of more than two million persons from every Southern state and Mexico.

Sick Women Made Well

Reliable evidence is abundant that women are constantly being restored to health by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

The many testimonial letters that we are continually publishing in the newspapers—hundreds of them—are all genuine, true and unsolicited expressions of heartfelt gratitude for the freedom from suffering that has come to these women solely through the use of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Money could not buy nor any kind of influence obtain such recommendations; you may depend upon it that any testimonial we publish is honest and true—if you have any doubt of this write to the women whose true names and addresses are always given, and learn for yourself.

Read this one from Mrs. Waters:

CAMDEN, N.J.—"I was sick for two years with nervous spells, and my kidneys were affected. I had a doctor all the time and used a galvanic battery, but nothing did me any good. I was not able to go to bed, but spent my time on a couch or in a sleeping-chair, and soon became almost a skeleton. Finally my doctor went away for his health, and my husband heard of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and got me some. In two months I got relief and now I am like a new woman and am at my usual weight. I recommend your medicine to every one and so does my husband."—Mrs. TILLIE WATERS, 1135 Knight St., Camden, N.J.

And this one from Mrs. Haddock:

UTICA, OKLA.—"I was weak and nervous, not able to do my work and scarcely able to be on my feet. I had backache, headache, palpitation of the heart, trouble with my bowels, and inflammation. Since taking the Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound I am better than I have been for twenty years. I think it is a wonderful medicine and I have recommended it to others."—Mrs. MARY ANN HADDOCK, Utica, Oklahoma.

Now answer this question if you can. Why should a woman continue to suffer without first giving Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound a trial? You know that it has saved many others—why should it fail in your case?

For 30 years Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has been the standard remedy for female ills. No one sick with woman's ailments does justice to herself if she does not try this famous medicine made from roots and herbs, it has restored so many suffering women to health.

Write to LYDIA E. PINKHAM MEDICINE CO. (CONFIDENTIAL) LYNN, MASS., for advice. Your letter will be opened, read and answered by a woman and held in strict confidence.

Fatal Defect.

Rev. Bascom Anthony, a presiding elder of the Methodist church in southern Georgia, tells a story of a negro pastor down his way who failed to give satisfaction to his flock. A committee from the congregation waited on him to request his resignation.

"Look here!" demanded the preacher. "Whut's de trouble wid mah preachin'? Don't I argufy?"

"You sho' does, eldah," agreed the spokesman.

"Don't I 'sputify concernin' de Scriptures?"

"You suttinly does," admitted the other.

"Den what's wrong?"

"Well, eldah," stated the head of the committee, "hit's dis way: You argufies and you 'sputifies, but you don't show wherein!"—Saturday Evening Post.

NEWS and GOSSIP of WASHINGTON

Continent Is Rising in Spots and Sinking Elsewhere

WASHINGTON.—Most people know in a general way that large portions of the United States have in the past been covered by the ocean, but it is perhaps not so generally known that the continent is now rising in some places and sinking in others. There is every reason to believe that minor movements of the land are constantly taking place.

Not so very long ago, in a geologic sense, the Hudson river flowed through a deep canyon or gorge at New York city. Soundings show that this gorge extends through the harbor and far out to sea. It is evident that the land surface has been lowered in this region, allowing the ocean to creep in on the land, fill the old river channel, and in places wholly submerge it. The submergence of the land was greater at one time than it is now. In excavations for some of the New York skyscrapers remains of oysters and other salt-water animals have been found. As a rule the only available knowledge in regard to the former submergence of an area is derived from the marine shells and other animals found in deposits laid down by the sea. By the nature of the fossils geologists are able to tell approximately when the ocean invaded the land. They have found evidence of a submergence of much greater magnitude and much older than that which now floods the Hudson valley.

Gothamites and others need not, however, feel alarmed at this statement of the ups and downs of the continent, for while geologically this submergence is not so very old, the geologist thinks and speaks in terms of thousands if not millions of years.

Along the Atlantic coast, from New Jersey southward, it is not unusual to find quantities of sharks' teeth and other marine fossils in the green sands that are now located far inland and are used for fertilizers. In certain sections of the southern Mississippi valley, where limestone is not readily accessible, a farmer will go out and gather a wagon load of fossil oyster shells to burn for lime.

In the course of its investigations of the geology of the country the United States geological survey has been making a study of the cretaceous deposits of the eastern states and has found that the ocean of that time covered much of what is now the Atlantic coastal plain, while the Gulf of Mexico spread widely over the central southern states, probably reaching as far north as Cairo, Ill.

Mysterious Stone Dog Over Gate on 18th Street

MEN and women, as well as children, who pass along Eighteenth street south of F are often attracted by a stone dog above a gate which pierces an old brick wall inclosing half a city square of ground at the rear of a grand, but decayed, dun-colored brick house that is four stories and basement high. The writer has made a number of inquiries concerning the history of this house, but the information obtained has been contradictory and otherwise unsatisfactory. There is no doubt as to its great age, as great age is measured in Washington, the capital of a new country, and there is also no doubt that at some time within a century this house was one of the great and imposing homes of Washington. One bit of information which the writer obtained about this house was that it was the home of William Wirt, who was attorney general in the cabinet of President Jackson. The writer was not told that Wirt was the builder of the house, and it appears to have been built before the time of Jackson's administration.

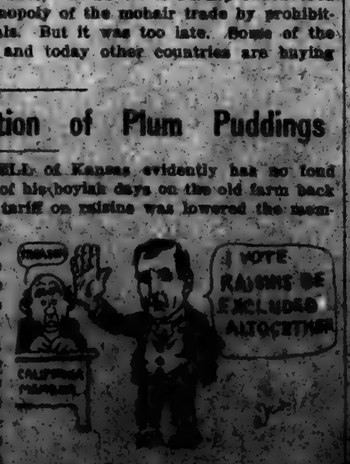
For a long time the house has been occupied by the bureau of insular affairs, or by a part of that bureau, and the last time the reporter passed there a neighbor said that the house was to be torn down and a large and costly government building constructed on its site and over the ground at the rear, which bears traces of once having been a fine garden.

The dog statue is that of a hunter. He is a setter, and he appears to be looking from his place on the wall above the gate at one of the windows at the back of the old house. It may be the effigy of a pet hunting dog which belonged to one of the early tenants of the house, or it may be an architectural fancy.

Uncle Sam Solves the Fuzzy Hair Mystery

THE department of agriculture has made a discovery. Some of the false curls the girls are wearing are made of goat hair. And braving the wrath of the fair sex, Secretary Houston's experts give the whole thing away in a bulletin issued the other day on the Angora goat.

"Formerly," the department bulletin says, "the use of mohair depended so largely upon the prevailing fashion that its price varied widely from year to year. This condition is rapidly changing, as new uses for mohair are continually found, from automobile tops and table covers to dress goods and curled false hair, and today the grower is assured of a reasonably steady market."



Mohair, it may be explained, is the trade name for the fleece of the Angora goat.

The Angora, department experts declare, is the best animal to raise, because he "works and pays for his board at the same time." He does this by helping to clear away the brush from land, will eat weeds and any other refuse about the place, and is invaluable in "cleaning-up" week about the farm or ranch.

"In 1881," the department bulletin adds, "the sultan of Turkey endeavored to preserve for his dominions the monopoly of the mohair trade by prohibiting the exportation of the live animals. But it was too late. Some of the best blood was already in America, and today other countries are buying of us."

Has No Fond Recollection of Plum Puddings

REPRESENTATIVE PHIL CAMPBELL of Kansas evidently has no fond recollection of the plum puddings of his boyish days on the old farm back in the Grasshopper state. When the tariff on raisins was lowered the members from California predicted every disaster the human race could know from measles to earthquakes. The raisin was a sacred institution, the temple of liberty, the fire upon the family altar.

In fact, no one of the raisin breed could have recognized himself in the glowing picture painted by the orators from the Golden state. The raisin, like the flag and the mint julep, followed the Constitution, and only the lowest of poltroons would dare cast a shadow on its time-honored name. Campbell rose in his seat, shed tears and unbosomed himself.

"Gentlemen," he said, with tears in his trembling voice, "the raisins of today are like those I used to eat in plum puddings in my boyhood days back in my state. I vote raisins be excluded altogether."

RATHER DEAD THAN ALIVE

Deplorable Condition of Lumpkin Lady Whose Troubles Multiplied Until Life Became Almost Unbearable

Lumpkin, Ga.—Mrs. G. W. Booth, of this place, says: "I suffered with dumb chills and fever and was very irregular. Was also nervous and weak, short of breath, couldn't do my housework without it being a burden, and then I began suffering untold misery in my left side and back. I got to where I would rather have been dead than alive.

I tried many remedies, but they failed to help me.

Finally, I purchased two bottles of Cardui, the woman's tonic, and began taking it according to directions. Cardui helped me right away. I believe it saved my life.

I cannot praise Cardui enough to my lady friends. It is certainly the medicine for suffering women and girls."

If you have any of the ailments so common to women, or if you feel the need of a good, strengthening tonic, we urge you to give Cardui a trial. It has helped thousands of women in its past 50 years of success, as is proven by the numerous enthusiastic letters of gratitude, similar to the above, which come to us every day.

Don't delay. This letter from Mrs. Booth should convince you that Cardui is worth a trial. Get a bottle from your druggist today. You'll never regret it.—Adv.

Bobby's Well-Meant Effort Probably Made Indignant Private Soldier Madder Than Ever.

Colonel Blank had a little boy five years old, and little Bobby had often heard the men in his father's regiment spoken of as "Colonel Blank's men." So he said to one of them:

"My father owns you."

The soldier was very angry. "You little imp!" he exclaimed. "What are you talking about? Nobody owns me."

Bobby's mother heard about it, and was much distressed. Calling the little boy to her, she said:

"Bobby, you were wrong when you said your father owns his men, and I want you to tell the soldier that you are sorry for what you said."

Running to overtake the private, the little boy exclaimed breathlessly:

"I'm sorroy my father owns you!"

BLOTCHES COVERED LIMBS

19 Roach St., Atlanta, Ga.—"A few months ago I had some kind of skin eruption that spread until my limbs and feet were covered with blotches and watery blisters. It looked like eczema. When the trouble reached my neck and face I was almost driven frantic. It itched and stung so intensely that I could not sleep or wear any clothing on the affected parts. After two months I commenced to use Cuticura Soap and Ointment and after two days I noticed improvement and in six days the trouble left. My skin was fair and smooth again and the eruption never returned.

"My cousin was a sufferer from pimples, known as acne, on his face and seemed to grow worse all the time. I recommended Cuticura Soap and Ointment to him and now his face is smooth for the first time in three years and he owes it all to Cuticura Soap and Ointment." (Signed) Walter Battle, Oct. 7, 1912.

Cause of Death.

"You say your automobile didn't touch this man, and yet he was dead when you picked him up?" shouted the prosecuting attorney.

"That's my claim," coolly retorted the prisoner. "My machine didn't touch him.

"And you were driving not over 12 miles an hour?"

"Not over 12 miles and—"

"And you saw this man start to cross the street?"

"Yes."

"Did you blow your horn?"

"I did."

"What sort of a horn is it?"

"One of those newfangled clatter boxes that create a sound that is a cross between a shriek and a dying wail."

"That explains it. You simply scared the man to death."

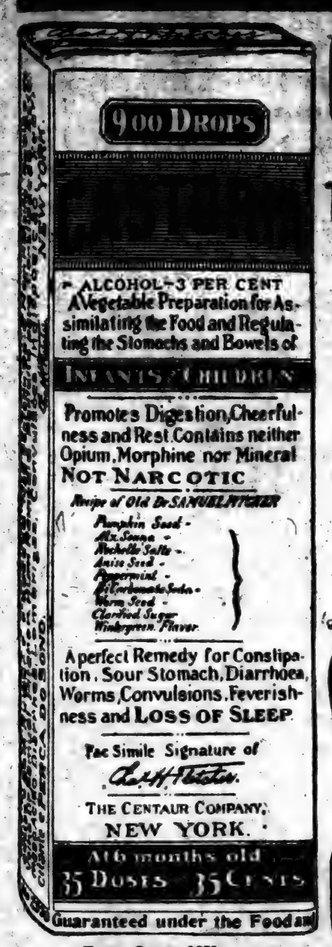
WANTED THE STAGE FILLED

Theatrical Magnate Evidently Cared More for Effect Than for Accuracy of Production.



The production of great dramas was his business. His great talent was success, and his weakness was that he always liked to "show off" when he was rehearsing a play. He was in the habit of sitting far back in the darkened theater, and whenever a stranger came in to see the rehearsal work he put himself in the foreground by jumping to his feet and bawling out the actors and actresses. When he was putting on a big production of "The Holy City" three friends of his entered the theater one afternoon to see the dress rhearsal. As soon as they had sat down the producer began to fidget in his seat. He was consumed by the old fever for prominence. He wanted the visitors to see that he was the boss of everything. There were 12 men on the stage, which was unusually large. "Who are those men on the stage?" he called out to his stage manager in a thunderous voice. "That's one of the big scenes of the play," the manager said humbly. "Those men are the 12 disciples." "Oh, well," shouted the impresario imperiously, "go out and get 12 more. That's a big stage, and we want to fill it up."

Town Feuds.

Church—You don't have family feuds here, I suppose?

Gotham—Don't we? Why, say, a family across the street got a phonograph, and the people next door to them started their two boys taking lessons on the fiddle.

Better Soldier Than Statesman.

One hundred years ago on the forty-fifth anniversary of his birth, Lord Wellington was rewarded with the title of duke in recognition of his successes in the Peninsula campaign against the French. At the same time the house of commons voted $2,000,000 for the support of his new dignity. Within a little more than a year the famous soldier was destined to win the great victory at Waterloo and to be made the commander-in-chief of the British forces. Later in life the duke of Wellington became British prime minister, but the strong personal qualities that had helped him to success as a soldier were not the qualities that best befitted for the premiership, and the career of the duke as a statesman added little to his fame.

On Holiday.

While visiting his uncle in the country Willie was much interested in watching the ducks "tipping up" in a pond.

"They're most all young ones, aren't they?" he observed to his uncle.

"Why, no, boy; they're old ones. What makes you think they are young?"

"I thought they were young," Willie explained, "because they don't seem to be able to swim without upsetting."—Saturday Journal.

Don't forget to swat the fly!

The cool days and nights we have experienced of late have been rather hard on cotton. The young plants are looking puny and some re-planting has had to be done.

What assurance do the leading Bull Moosers of this county give to the people who voted in the primary on April 21st that they will have an opportunity to vote the Progressive ticket in the November election? They are so unstable it will indeed be a difficult matter to tell what they will call themselves by the time November rolls around. As the Washington Star truly remarks, this is the day of flip-flopping, and it is especially true in Chilton county.

BIG BARBECUE AT CLANTON JUNE 12TH

Arrangements are being made to have a monster barbecue and picnic at Clanton on Friday, June 12th, 1914.

The barbecue will be given by the people of Chilton county, and its purpose is to arouse and stimulate interest on the part of all citizens who are in favor of better highways, especially the Birmingham-to-Montgomery Highway.

This highway, when completed, will be worth thousands of dollars annually to the people of Chilton and all who can should attend this meeting and by their presence and co-operation lend a helping hand to this great movement.

This will indeed be a most gala event for Clanton and Chilton county; prominent men will be be here from all parts of Alabama, numbers will come in their automobiles from Birmingham and Montgomery, and the day will be devoted to the discussion of good roads.

Aside from the barbecue, there will be other attractions provided to make the day one long to be remembered.

All automobile owners in Clanton are requested to obtain pennants for their cars, with the inscription: "Birmingham-to-Montgomery Highway."

MR. ROOSEVELT AND HIS PROSPECTS

This positive statement is from the Washington Star:

Mr. Roosevelt is a candidate for the presidency. Until now he has based his candidacy on domestic questions, with the trusts and and what he calls "social justice" in the foreground. Suddenly foreign questions have come to bulk large and overshadow all others, and on two of them—Canal tolls and Colombia—he has a record. He has declared for free tolls and asserted that Colombia is without just grievance as to Panama. Unless he has changed his mind—this is a day of fliy-flopping—he is likely to insist on both opinions upon his return, and maybe make them paramount in his effort to return to the White House.

Whereupon The Louisville Courier-Journal has this comment:

He will adopt that course which promises most returns. He is a clever politician. He has studied the cue papers and girded his loins. His neak is clothed with thunder. He will make things hum. But he will never again be President, because his election would mean the Maxicanization of the government and Dixifying of the White House, and God has the Republic in His holy keeping.

It is very much to be doubted whether Mr. Roosevelt will be a candidate for the fourth time. He had enough fun in leading a forlorn hope in 1911 to last him for a long time. He can never get the help or consent of the old-time Republican leaders for a regular nomination, and it seems pretty certain the Progressives, or Bull Moosers, have gone all to pieces, so as to be unable to persuade anybody of consequance to take theis nomination.

The probabilities are that when Mr. Roosevelt gets back to the United States and gets in touch with public opinion here he will decide that no Republican with any sort of nomination can beat President Wilson, and that he will be entirely willing for some one else to have the distinction. Nevertheless, The Courier-Journal is right; even if Mr. Roosevelt should be reckless enough to run, he would be defeated. The people of the United States are not so hard up for the right sort of a man for President as to draft him again. They want no perpetual ruler, and don't take much to perpetual candidates.—Birmingham News.

Minneapolis Lady Badly Scalded While Cooking

While preparing dinner a young Minneapolis wife had the misfortune to scald her hand so badly that over half the skin came off. She was alone at the time and rushed over to her neighbors's for help. This neighbor promptly applied Allen's Ulcerine Salve and in ten days the hand was completely healed without a scar.

This salve is one of the oldest remedies in America and since 1869 it has been known as the only salve powerful enough to cure chronic ulcers and old sores of long standing. Because it is so powerful, it will heal burns or scalds in a remarkably short time. Allen's Ulcerine Salve heals from the bottom up and draws out the poisons. If applied on new cuts and wounds it heals in one-third the time that common salves and liniments take. Sold by the Upchurch Drug Co., and other leading druggists.

BAPTIST CONVENTION AT NASHVILLE

The Southern Baptist Convention met in the Ryman auditorium Wednesday afternoon, May 15.

The Convention was called to order by the President, E. C. Dargin.

The welcome address was delivered by Dr. G. A. Loftin, who in the name of the entire city, made us welcome.

Response was made by Dr. J. B. Gambrell of Texas, who said that we as Baptists have less to boast of than any other people on earth. He said we haven't a single doctrine that we invented, they are every one in the New Testament.

Dr. Lansing Burrows was elected president of the Convention, and Dr. Gregory was made secretary.

The Convention sermon was preached by Geo. W. McDaniel of Virginia, Thursday morning.

Fraternal visitors were received. Then the report on the Negro Theologocal Seminary, and the report on the Judson Centennial.

Many fine speeches were made on Foreign Missions. Dr. J. T. Searcy, a leading negro Baptist, was introduced and made a good speech.

Thursday afternoon a banquet was held at the Y. M. C. A. by the graduates of the Teacher Training Course. More than six hundred were served.

Thursday night a mass meeting was held in the interest of Foreign Missions. Dr. Hooper from Mexico and Dr. Lake from China addressed the Convention. Eight young men, recently appointed to the foreign field, were introduced. among them was David Bryant of Alabama.

Perhaps the greatest speech of the Convention was made by Dr. F. C. McConnell of Texas. The subject was the "Efficiency Commission." He pleaded for a larger paper to represent the Home and Foreign Mission Boards, and that the Boards be located at the same place.

Home Missions was the order for Friday night. A very spirited discussion took place on the question of the Home Board making a donation to the Washataw College of Arkansas. It was voted down at night, but reconsidered Saturday morning and the Board was instructed to give $10,000.

Dr. Powers of Kentucky made a rousing speech on the housing of the homeless church.

Each morning an evangelistic conference was held at the First Presbyterian church by the Board evangelist.

Saturday morning was given to Layman's Work, Denominational Press and the presentation of the Sunday School Board building.

Sunday the pulpits of the different churches of the city were filled by the visiting preachers of the Convention at both hours.

MOUNTAIN CREEK

DEATH OF MRS. RAINES.

On Saturday afternoon, the 25th of April, the death angels visited the home of Rev. Joseph Raines, and took from him his beloved wife, Bertha. She was born April 24th, 1881, and married Joseph A. Raines, Dec. 22, 1901. God saw fit to remove her from this world to a brighter world above. She had been sick ten weeks when God sent His angels bidding her come up higher. She leaves a husband and three little children, a father, four brothers, three sisters and a host of relatives and friends to mourn her loss.

Dear warning relatives and friends, we have nothing of this world's possessions to offer, we do not feel that we could speak one word of comfort to you in your sorrow, or fill the vacancy of this dear one, we can only point you to heaven and ever abide by God's [illegible] bereavement, for we know that she is resting with the angels.

She was laid to rest in Canaan cemetery on April 26, Rev. R. H. Long conducting the funeral.

We extend our heartfelt sympathy to the bereaved husband and children in this hour of grief.

DR. MARVIN H. WILSON KILLED.

Sunday morning last about daylight Dr. Marvin Wilson, a well known young dentist of Clanton, was found by a negro woman lying near the railroad track, about one half mile north of Thorsby in a dying condition.

The woman was walking along the track when her attention was arrested by the groans of someone. A freight train was passing at the time and a member of the crew pointed to where the body lay at the bottom of a steep embankment. Dr. Wilson was still breathing when found and was picked up and carried to Thorsby, but died soon after arriving there.

It is not known how Dr. Wilson met his death, the supposition is, however, that he was thrown or fell off of a moving train. He was said to have been seen on the pilot of the engine on train No. 8 while it was stopped in Clanton, and it is very probable that he fell while the train was going at a high rate of speed. An examination revealed a number of body bruises, and and his skull was slightly crushed; the face was also badly lacerated.

The remains were brought to Clanton Sunday afternoon.

The funeral services were conducted by Rev. L. H. S. Chappelle on Monday afternoon, a large number of friends and relatives attending, after which interment was made in Clanton cemetery.

Marvin Wilson was a young man possessing many kind impulses, and had many friends who will regret his sudden demise. He was especially fond of the young boys of the town, and was never happier than when he had a crowd around him in jolly conversation, and his cheery presence will be missed by them.

Dr. Wilson was about 25 years of age and is survived by a brother, Mr. Will Wilson, who is a student at Highland Home College.

Those indebted to the hostess for a delightful evening were: Misses Corita Wilson, Sarah Wilson, Ola Johnson, Lucile Gross, Gladys Wood, and Margaret Watson; Messrs Frank Thomas, A. C. Wade, L. Most Prompt and Effectual Cure for Bad Colds.

When you have a bad cold you want a remedy that will not only give relief, but effect a prompt and permanent cure, a remedy that is pleasant to take, a remedy that contains nothing injurious. This remedy has a world wide sale and use, and can always be depended upon. Sold by Alred Drug Co.

Health a Factor in Success.

The largest factor contributing to a man's success is undoubtely health. It has been observed that a man is seldom sick when his bowels are regular—he is never well when they are constipated. For constipation you will find nothing quite so good as Chamberlain's Tablets. They not only move the bowels but improve the appetite and strengthen the digestion. They are sold by Alred Drug Co.

FACULTY RE-ELECTED

The School Board of Clanton High School held a meeting Monday night and elected the present faculty for another session. The session just closing has been one of the most successful in the school's history, and the fact that the entire corps of teachers have given universal satisfaction is evidenced by their re-election. The patrons as well as the public generally cherish the hope that they will all return next session.

Clanton is soon to have two more brick buildings. Dr. Arthur Johnson informed the Press man a few days ago that in the near future he would begin the erection of a brick structure on his lot where the old Court House building is located. The Doctor will also erect a brick building on the site where Wagoner & Sanford's barber shop is now located. With the erection of these buildings the entire block will be brick and concrete, and will add greatly to the metropolitan appearance of Second Avenue—Clanton's principal business thoroughfare.

PIANO RECITAL

The piano recital by Alice Stanfield, and her brother Wilmer on violin, at their home on last Friday evening, was a musical treat to the select and appreciative audience who were fortunate enough to attend. Alice, who is a piano pupil of Mrs. R. H. Croswell, played with deep musical feeling, and her wonderful technic showed careful training. The second, Mazurka, by Godard, was beautifully rendered, and would have reflected credit to one much older in years.

Serenade on the violin by Wilmer was especially pleasing, accompanied by his teacher, Mrs. Jas. H. Middleton, who is a successful teacher of the violin.

During intermission punch was served, and later an ice course.

Mrs. Stanfield was charming as hostess and the evening of pleasure will long be remembered.

The following program was rendered:

Dance of Peasants, Eilenberg.
Scene de Ballet, Edward Schutt.
Serenade, Thompson.

Piano and Violin.

Mercean, No. 1, Wollenhaupt
Goblins Frolic, Heller.

The Nashville boosters were in town Monday afternoon and were entertained during their stay of thirty minutes by the citizens of the town.

Mr. Joseph Thompson, a well-to-do and highly respected farmer, living about six miles northeast of Clanton, dropped dead in his field while plowing last Friday. Heart failure was supposed to have been the cause of his death.

NEW HIGH SCHOOL COURSES ARRANGED

FEAGIN BELIEVES NEW SYSTEM WILL REVOLUTIONIZE WORK IN ALABAMA.

STATE CAPITAL HAPPENINGS

Doings In and Around the State House Chronicled for Our Readers.

—Montgomery.

Work of revising the courses of study of the county high schools of the State was completed by the commission appointed by Superintendent of Education William E. Feagin. The special committee had been in session two days, and the new curriculum will be adopted next session.

Many important changes were made by the revision committee, and it is expected that the high schools of the State will be greatly benefited by the new courses of study. The revision specifies three courses, A, B and C, which are provided according to the needs of the students. Courses A and B will be used in high schools with three instructors and course C will be used in high schools with four and more instructors.

Superintendent Feagin believes that the new courses of study will greatly increase the efficiency of the high school in every community, inasmuch as the courses are now arranged with the idea of filling the requirements of all future vocations.

The agricultural course contemplates instruction in the art of farming. Another course is specially arranged for students who may follow the teaching profession, while the third provides sufficient preliminary instruction for students who may pursue classical or professional instructions in the colleges and universities of the country.

The work of revising the courses of study was performed by the following committee: J. B. Hobdy of Auburn, J. S. Thomas of the university, W. C. Blasingame, principal of the Marengo County High school; J. A. Moore, principal of the Walker County High school, and Oscar Horton, principal of the Marshall County High school.

Waller Declines Marshalship.

When the official count of the votes cast in the primary May 11 declared him nominated sheriff of Montgomery county, W. R. Waller, recently appointed United States marshal for the Middle district of Alabama, wrote the department in Washington declining the office. This statement made by Mr. Waller throws new light on the situation and leaves the applications of a number of other Alabamians open for consideration.

Mr. Waller had stated during his campaign for sheriff that he would decline the marshalship if nominated in the primary, but after the primary he would give no statement in regard to the matter until the executive committee had made an official canvass of the votes. His appointment sent in by President Wilson several days ago was immediately affirmed by the Senate and the matter has been awaiting the decision of Mr. Waller.

Citronelle Applies for Bank.

Application for the establishment of a State bank at Citronelle, Mobile county, has been made to the State banking department by R. Dell Buono of that place. Mr. Buono informed the banking department that the new institution will be capitalized at $15,000, with citizens of Citronelle and Mobile county as stockholders.

Submits Report on Cullman Books.

Charles L. Townes, examiner of public accounts, filed in the office of Governor O'Neal a report of his examination of the books and accounts of the officials of Cullman county. Mr. Townes' report has not yet been made public, but it is understood that the books of the Cullman officials were practically correct.

To Observe Fortieth Anniversary.

Lawyers of Alabama who graduated at the University of Alabama Law School are planning to celebrate the fortieth anniversary of that school during the commencement exercises of the university, which will be held May 30 to June 3. All persons who ever attended the University Law School have been invited to attend the meeting by A. B. VandeGraaff, professor of law at the law school. Plans for bringing about improvements in the law school will be formulated at the meeting.

Affirm Pryor Case.

A death sentence imposed on Walter Pryor, a white man at Gadsden, was affirmed and Pryor was condemned to be hanged on June 26. Pryor, in April, 1913, shot and killed George Quest, foreman of the Alabama Power and Development Company near Gadsden. He was rushed to Birmingham for safe keeping and returned to Gadsden a month later for trial. Pryor was an employe of the Power company and his trouble with Quest grew out of a dispute which his wife had and which caused his discharge.

Regulate Freight Rates.

Attorneys for five railroads appeared before the State Railroad Commission in answer to a citation issued by the commission requiring the railroads to show cause why reasonable freight rates should not be established on their lines in Alabama. The railroads are the Louisville & Nashville, Central of Georgia, Western of Alabama and Nashville, Chattanooga and St. Louis.

These citations were issued against the roads in connection with the signing af the recent agreement between the railroads and commission in which the railroads agreed to drop all litigation against the establishment of certain rates fixed by the commission. The passenger rate had been fixed at two and one-half cents a mile and the freight rates will be regulated by the commission after testimony has been taken.

Not only will the commission regulate the rate on 110 commodities, but will also take up any freight rates that are inequitable. The commission will go about the hearing of the freight rates in much the same manner that the testimony in the passenger rate cases was heard.

Charles Henderson, president of the commission, recently nominated for Governor, presided. Leon McCord and Frank N. Julian, associate commissioners, were both present.

Bar Association Will Prosecute.

Lawyers of Alabama who have been charged with violations of the code of ethics of their profession will be vigorously prosecuted by the Central Council of the Alabama State Bar Association, according to an announcement made by Col. Alexander Troy, secretary of the association.

Evidence against several attorneys has been laid before the Central Council and the cases against the attorneys are now being outlined.

"We are determined to rid our profession in this state of its unworthy members," declared Colonel Troy. "For some time we have been receiving protests against the methods used by certain attorneys and have been making quiet investigations of the charges. In several cases we have found that the charges were based on facts and as a consequence we will prosecute to the full extent of the law."

Colonel Troy did not make public the names of the attorneys against whom the charges have been made, but it is understood that two of them reside in Birmingham.

Superintendents to Meet.

Conferences of county superintendents of education will be held in 13 cities of Alabama within the next 30 days for the purpose of discussing matters of great importance to these officials, according to an announcement made by W. F. Feagin, state superintendent of education.

Mr. Feagin has arranged an itinerary which includes all sections of the state and at the cities designated in this list he will meet and confer with the county superintendents.

Following is a list of the places where conferences will be held and the dates for the session: Dothan, Wednesday, May 27; Opelika, Wednesday, June 11; Union Springs, Saturday, June 13; Georgiana, Tuesday, June 16; Mobile, Wednesday, June 17; Selma Friday, June 19; Talladega, Tuesday, June 23; Gadsden, Wednesday, June 24; Birmingham, Thursday, June 25; Tuscaloosa, Monday, June 29; Decatur, Tuesday, June 30.

Postpone Lacy Case.

Attorneys for Theo. Lacy, who was convicted recently on a charge of embezzling $50,000 from the state, will not file transcripts in Lacy's case until the next call of the third division will be made by the state court of appeals. When the Lacy case was called it was postponed until the next call because no transcripts were filed. The law gives 90 days in which to file transcripts, hence the attorneys still have time to file their appeal and if filed after the present call of the third division it will go over until the December term.

Convict Paroled.

Because of tubercular trouble which rendered his physical condition critical, Coot Knight, a Choctaw county convict, has been paroled by Governor O'Neal. Knight has served two years of a ten year sentence for second degree murder.

Big Attendance Looked For.

Gay colored pennants will adorn automobiles going from here to Clanton May 29 to attend the monster barbecue to be given in order to encourage and promote an early completion of the Birmingham-Montgomery highway. State Highway Engineer W. S. Keller has announced that fifty pair of pennants have been ordered. They will be on sale at a local establishment and an automobile bearing the pennants will be allowed free passage across the river bridge near Montgomery.

Returns to Etowah.

Eugene O'Brien, special agent of the State Tax Commission, returned to Gadsden, where he will finish his investigation of tax assessments in Etowah County. Mr. O'Brien has been at work in Gadsden on tax matters for several months. There is no county tax commissioner at present in Etowah and Mr. O'Brien has been doing the work of that office in addition to his own. He announces that he has almost completed his [illegible] work in Walker County.

Gadsden is given a population of 12,326, or a growth of 2,769 in four years. Gains in Anniston, Selma, Tuscaloosa and other cities were not as great. The negroes form 32 per cent of Gadsden's population.

BANKS IN GOOD CONDITION.

Much Improvement Noted in State Institutions Since Last Fall.

Montgomery. — State banks of Alabama are in flourishing condition and much improvement has been noted in these institutions since the last call for statements was made October 21, 1913, according to Alex E. Walker, superintendent of the State banking department, who has issued a statement showing the conditions of the banks as compiled from the reports of these banks made to the department at the close of business April 14, 1914. The figures were compiled by Chandler Lapsley, secretary of the banking department, and are complete and comprehensive.

Nine new State banks have been opened for business during this interval of six months. Capital stock has increased from $12,800,000 to $13,075,000; a total of $275,000. Surpluses increased from $4,668,000 to $4,947,000, a total of $279,000. No profits increased from $2,141,100 to $2,420,000 or $279,000.

Total deposits decreased from $52,935,000 to $52,459,000, a total of $476,000. This is only a small decrease in view of the fact that deposits are usually lower in the spring months than in the fall.

Over drafts have been practically eliminated and bills payable have decreased. Total resources on April 14, 1914, were $75,461,840.28. This includes the State banks, all national banks in Alabama, making their reports to Washington. There are 267 State banks in Alabama.

POLITICS IN THIRD DISTRICT

Five Candidates for Long and Short Terms.

Montgomery. — Alabama's politics will be confined solely to the Third district during the next thirty or sixty days. In this area several men are aspiring to wear the mantel of Hon. Henry D. Clayton, Congressman, who has just been appointed by President Wilson as federal judge at Montgomery.

LABOR LEADERS WILL BE JAILED

UNITED STATES COURT OF APPEALS ORDERS SURRENDER BY JUNE 6.

PLEAD FOR MORE TIME

Only Petition From President Wilson Now Can Save Convicted Men From Serving Sentences.

Chicago. — Twenty-four labor leaders sentenced in the "dynamiting cases," who are at liberty on bonds, have but three weeks more of liberty. The United States circuit court of appeals ordered them to surrender on June 6 to the warden of the federal prison at Leavenworth, Kan., or be taken to the penitentiary from Chicago on that day.

Elijah Zoline, counsel for the defense, pleaded for time before the remanding order went into effect.

"These men are scattered all over the country," he said. "It will be a hardship for them to be separated from their families immediately. They are all under heavy bond and to enable them to straighten affairs before they go to the penitentiary is why I ask for time."

Only a petition from President Wilson can save the convicted men from serving their sentences. Mr. Zoline said he had presented the president with a petition carrying nearly 500,000 signatures.

The court also took under advisement cases of Olaf Tveitmoe of San Francisco, Richard H. Houlihan of Chicago and William Bernhardt of Cincinnati. These three were granted new trials and arguments were made on the government's petition for a rehearing of their cases and the sustainment of the lower court's conviction. Former United States District Attorney Charles Miller of Indianapolis argued the government's case before Judges Seaman, Baker and Mack. Counsel for the defendants were hopeful that the order granting a new trial to Tveitmoe, Houlihan and Bernhardt would remain in effect.

History of the dynamite cases dates back to August 10, 1905, when the International Association of Bridge and Structural Iron Workers declared a strike against the American Bridge Company. Bridges and buildings erected by "open shop" concerns were dynamited. There were nearly 100 instances of such violence until 1911, when the McNamara brothers and Ortie McManigal were arrested.

In 1912, 39 men were found guilty at the federal court in Indianapolis of conspiracy to transport explosives illegally. They were sentenced December 12, 1912. Six of the 39 were freed on suspended sentences. The others were checked in at the Leavenworth penitentiary New Year's Day, 1913. All except Herbert S. Hockin of Detroit appealed and were granted a writ of supersedeas January 3, 1913, and ordered released on bonds of $10,000 for year of sentence imposed.

In 1913 two were paroled and all save six of the remaining 30 were released, as they furnished bond. On January 6 last, the United States circuit court of appeals granted a new trial to six of the 30 and denied a new trial to 24. On March 9 the United States supreme court refused to review the conviction of the 24 and the last hope of being saved from the pen by the law was shattered.

TAFT ON MEXICAN POLICY.

Former President Says Mediation Will Accomplish Little.

New York. — William H. Taft gives his views on the Mexican situation in an address at the Free Synagogue's celebration of Peace. While the former president expressed little hope that the pending mediation conference would accomplish its immediate purpose, he declared the offer of mediation and the United States' acceptance was an important step toward the future settlement of international difficulties in the western hemisphere.

The former president asserted that there was no popular pressure for a military policy which the administration cannot resist. He said that the people were determined to do their duty, even should that duty involve war. But for war, he added, the people at present have little enthusiasm.

Mr. Taft criticised the Wilson administration for aid, which, he said, the administration had given to the Mexican constitutionalists.

TO REPLACE "VANDY."

Conference in Oklahoma City Accepts Majority Report.

Oklahoma City. — The establishment by the Methodist Episcopal church, south, of a new university to replace Vanderbilt University became a strong probability here with the adoption by the general conference of the church majority report of the committee of 15 after [illegible] for and against had been submitted.

The VALIANTS of VIRGINIA

By HALLIE ERMINIE RIVES

ILLUSTRATIONS by LAUREN STOUT

COPYRIGHT BY BOBBS-MERRILL COMPANY

SYNOPSIS.

John Valiant, a rich society favorite, suddenly discovers that the Valiant corporation, which his father founded and which was the principal source of his wealth, has failed. He voluntarily turns over his private fortune to the receiver for the corporation. His entire remaining possessions consist of an old motor car, a white bull dog and Damory court, a neglected estate in Virginia. On the way to Damory court he meets Shirley Dandridge, an auburn-haired beauty, and decides that he is going to like Virginia immensely. Shirley's mother, Mrs. Dandridge, and Major Bristow exchange reminiscences during which it is revealed that the major, Valiant's father, and a man named Sassoon were rivals for the hand of Mrs. Dandridge in her youth. Sassoon and Valiant fought a duel on her account in which the former was killed. Valiant finds Damory court overgrown with weeds and creepers and decides to rehabilitate the place. Valiant saves Shirley from the bite of a snake, which kills him. Knowing the deadliness of the bite, Shirley sucks the poison from the wound and saves his life. Valiant learns for the first time that his father left Virginia on account of a duel in which Doctor Southall and Major Bristow acted as his father's seconds. Valiant and Shirley become good friends. Mrs. Dandridge tells when she meets Valiant for the first time. Valiant discovers that he has a fortune in old walnut trees. The yearly tournament, a survival of the jousting of feudal times, is held at Damory court. At the last moment Valiant takes the place of one of the knights, who is sick, and enters the lists. He wins and chooses Shirley Dandridge as queen of beauty to the dismay of Katherine Fargo, a former sweetheart, who is visiting in Virginia. At the tournament ball at Damory court Shirley is crowned by Valiant as queen of beauty. Valiant tells Shirley of his love and they become engaged.

CHAPTER XXVI.—Continued.

"Bristow, Shirley's a magnificent girl."

"Finest in seven counties," agreed the major's bass.

"Whom do you reckon she'll choose to marry?"

"Chilly Lusk, of course. The boy's been in love with her since they were kids. And he comes as near being good for her as anybody."

"Hump!" said the other sardonically. "No man I ever saw was half good enough for a good woman. But good women marry just the same. It isn't fair, I used to think it would be, but I've got a pair of eyes in my head, if you haven't. It's young Valiant."

The pearl fan twisted in Katharine's fingers. What she had guessed was an open secret, then!

The major made an exclamation that had the effect of coming after a jaw-dropped silence. "I—I never thought of that!"

The other resumed slowly, somewhat bitterly, it seemed to the girl listening. "If her mother was in love with Sassoon—"

Katharine's heart beat fast and then stood still. Sassoon! That was the name of the man Valiant's father had killed in that old duel of which Judge Chalmers had told! "If her mother"—Shirley Dandridge's mother—"was in love with Sassoon!" Why—"

"Was she?"

The major's query held a sharpness that seemed almost appeal. She was conscious that the other had faced about abruptly.

"I've always believed so, certainly. If she had loved Valiant, would she have thrown him over merely because he broke his promise not to be a party to a quarrel?"

"You think not?" said the major dubiously.

"Not under the circumstances. Valiant was forced into it. No gentleman, that day, could have declined the meeting. He could have explained it to Judith's satisfaction—a woman doesn't need much evidence to justify the man she's in love with. He must have written her—he couldn't have gone away without that—and if she had loved him, she would have called him back."

The major made no answer. Katharine saw a cigar fall unheeded upon the grass, where it lay glowing like a slumberer's eye.

The other had risen now, his stooping figure bulking in the moonlight. His voice sounded harsh and strained. "I loved Beauty Valiant," he said, "and his son is his son to me—but I have to think of Judith, too. She fainted, Bristow, when she saw him—Shirley told me about it. Her mother has made her think it was the scent of the roses! He's his father's living image, and he's brought the past back with him. Every sound of his voice, every sight of his face, will be a separate stab! Oh, his mere presence will be enough for Judith to bear. But with her heart in the grave with Sassoon, what would love between Shirley and young Valiant mean to her? Think of it!"

He broke off, and there was a blank of silence, in which he turned with almost a sigh. Then Katharine saw him reach the bench with a single stride and drop his hand on the bowed shoulder.

"Bristow!" he said bruskly. "You're ill! This confounded philandering at your time of life—"

The major's face looked ashy pale, but he got up with a laugh. "Not I," he said; "I was never better in my life! We've had our mouthful of air. Come on back to the house."

"Not much!" grunted the other. "I'm going where we both ought to have been hours ago." He threw away his cigar and stalked down the path into the darkness.

The major stood looking after him till he had disappeared, then suddenly dropped on the bench and covered his face. Something like a groan burst from him.

"My God!" he said, and his voice came to Katharine with a quaver of age and suffering—very different from the jovial accents of the ballroom—"if I were only sure it was Sassoon!"

Presently he rose, and went slowly toward the lighted doorway.

CHAPTER XXVII.

The Ambush.

Not long after, from the musicians' bower the sound of "Home, Sweet Home," drifted over the poignant rosescent, and presently the driveway resounded to rolling wheels and the voices of negro drivers, and the house-entrance jostled with groups, muffled in loose carriage-wraps, silken cloaks and light overcoats, calling tired but laughing farewells.

Katharine, on the step, found herself looking into Valiant's eyes. "How can I tell you how much I have enjoyed it all?" she said. "I've stayed till the very last minute—which is something for one's fourth season! And now, goodby, for we are off tomorrow for Hot Springs."

Her father had long ago betaken himself homeward, and the big three-seated surrey—holding "six comf'table and nine fumiliah," in the phrase of Lige the coachman—had returned for the rest: Judge Chalmers, the two younger girls and Shirley. Katharine greeted the latter with a charming smile. What more natural than that she should find herself straightway on the rear seat with royalty? The two girls safely disposed in the middle, the judge climbed up beside the driver, who cracked his whip and they were off.

The way was not long, and Katharine had need of dispatch if that revengeful weapon were to be used which fate had put into her hands. She wasted little time.

"It seems so strange," she said, "to find our host in such surroundings! I can scarcely believe him the same John Valiant I've danced with a hundred times in New York. He's been here such a short while and yet he couldn't possibly be more at home if he'd lived in Virginia always. And you all treat him as if he were quite one of yourselves."

Shirley smiled enchantingly. "Why, yes," she said, "maybe it seems odd to outsiders. But, you see, with us a Valiant is always a Valiant. No matter where he has lived, he's the son or the father and the master of Damory court."

"That's the wonderful part of it. It's so—so English, somehow."

"Is it?" said Shirley. "I never thought of it. But perhaps it seems so. We have the old houses and the old names and think of them, no doubt, in the same way."

"What a sad life his father had!" pursued Katharine dreamily. "You know all about the duel, of course?"

Shirley shrank imperceptibly now. The subject touched Valiant so closely it seemed almost as if it belonged to him and to her alone—not a thing to be flippantly touched on. "Yes," she said somewhat slowly, "every one here knows of it."

"No doubt it has been almost forgotten," the other continued, "but John's coming must naturally have revamped the old story. What was it about—the quarrel? A love-affair?"

"It's so long ago," murmured Shirley. "I suppose some one could tell if they would."

"Major Bristow, perhaps," conjectured Katharine thoughtfully.

"He was one of the seconds," admitted Shirley unhappily. "But by common consent that side of it wasn't talked of at the time. Men in Virginia have old-fashioned ideas about women."

"Ah, it's the duel of them!" pursued Katharine. "I can imagine the man who knew about that dreadful affair, in their southern chivalry, drawing a cordon of silence about the name of that girl with her broken heart. For if she loved one of the two, it must have been Sassoon—not Valiant, else he would have stayed. How terrible to see one's lover killed in such a way—to see one's lover killed by such a hand! It was quickly ended for him, but the poor woman was left to bear it all the years. I fancy she would never wholly get over it, never be able to forget him, though she tried."

Shirley made some reply that was lost in the whirring wheels. The other's words seemed almost an echo of what she herself had been thinking.

"Maybe she married after a while, too. A woman must make a life for herself, you know. If she lives here, it will be sad for her, this opening of the old wound by John's coming. And looking so like his father—"

Katharine paused. There was a kind of exhilaration in this subtle baiting.

Shirley stirred uneasily, and in the glimpsing light her face looked troubled. Katharine's voice had touched pathos, and in spite of her distaste of the subject, Shirley had been entering into the feeling of that supposititious woman.

The judge, on the front seat, was telling a low-toned story over his shoulder for the delectation of Nancy and Betty, but Shirley was not listening. Her whole mind was full of what Katharine had been saying. She was picturing to herself this woman, her secret hidden all these years, hearing of John Valiant's coming to Damory court, learning of this likeness, shrinking from sight of it, dreading the painful memory it must thrust upon her.

The Year Was That of the Duel: the Date Was the Day Following the Jessamine Anniversary.

"Suppose"—Katharine's voice was dreamy—"that she and John met suddenly, without warning. What would she do? Would she say anything? Perhaps she would faint. . . ."

Shirley started violently. Her hands, as they drew her cloak uncertainly about her, began to tremble, as if with cold. Something fell from them to the bottom of the surrey.

Through her chiffon veil Katharine noted this with a slow smile. It had been easier than she had thought. She said no more, and the carriage rolled on, to the accompaniment of giggles over the judge's peroration. As it neared the Rosewood lane she leaned toward Shirley.

"You have dropped your fan," said she "—and your gloves, too. . . . I might have reached them for you. Why, we are there already. How short the drive has seemed!"

"Don't drive up the lane, Lige," said Shirley, and her voice seemed sharp and strange even to herself. "The wheels would wake mother." Katharine bade her goodby with careful sweetness, as the judge bundled her down in his strong friendly arms.

"No," she told him, "don't come with me. It's not a bit necessary. Emmaline will be waiting for me."

He climbed into her vacant place as the girls called their good nights. "We'll all sleep late enough in the morning, I reckon," he said with a laugh, "but it's been a great success!"

* * * * * * * *

Emmaline was crouched in a chair in the hall, a rug thrown over her knees, in open-mouthed slumber. She started up at the touch of Shirley's hand, yawning widely.

"I 'clare to goodness," she muttered, "I was jes' fixin' t' go t' sleep!"

"I—I'm so tired, Emmaline. Take the crown. Its heavy."

The negro woman untangled the glittering points from the meshing hair with careful fingers. "Po' li'l chickydee-dee!" she said lovingly. "Reck'n she flop all th' feddahs outer her wings. Gimme that o' th crown—I like her lam' it out th' winder! Come on, now; we go upstairs soft so's not ter 'sturb Mis' Judith."

In the silvery-blue bedroom she deftly unfastened the hooks of the heavy satin gown and coaxed her mistress to lie on the sofa while she unpinned the masses of waving hair till they lay in a rich surge over the cushion. Then she brought a brush and crooning down beside her, began with long gentle strokes to smooth out the silken threads, talking to her the while in a soft, crooning incantation.

Under these painstakings Shirley lay languid and speechless, her eyes closed. The fear that had oppressed her heart by turns, engulfed by the greater grief, its poignancy dulled by the very weight of its own horror, had passed into the background of consciousness. Only the sense of physical comfort remained. Her hands were hot and her eyelids burned. Finally she roused herself.

"Thank you, Emmaline," she said in a tired voice, "good night now; I'm going to sleep, and you must go to bed, too."

But alone in the warm wan dark, Shirley lay staring open-eyed at the ceiling. Slowly the terror was seizing upon her, the dread, noiseless and intangible, folding her in the shadow of its numbing wings. Was her mother the one over whom that old duel had been fought? She remembered the cape jessamines. Was the date of that duel—of the death of Sassoon—the anniversary her mother kept?

She sat up in bed, trembling. Then she rose, and opening the door with caution, crept down the stair, sliding her hot hand before her along the cool polished banister. As she passed through the lower hall, a hound on the porch, scenting her, stirred, thumped his tail on the flooring, and whined. Groping her way to the dining-room, she lighted a candle and passed through a corridor into a low-ceilinged chamber employed as a general receptacle—a glorified garret, as Mrs. Dandridge dubbed it.

It showed a strange assemblage! A row of chests, stored with winter clothing, gave forth a clean pungent smell of cedar, and at one side stood an antique spinet and a worn set of horsehair furniture.

Shirley had turned her miserable eyes on a book-shelf along one wall. The volumes it contained had been her father's, and among them stood a row of tomes taller than their fellows—the bound numbers of a county newspaper, beginning before the war. The back of each was stamped with the year. She was deciphering these faded imprints. "Thirty years ago," she whispered; "yes, here it is."

She set down the candle and dragged out one of the huge leather-backs. Staggering under the weight, she rested its edge on the table and began feverishly to turn the pages, her eye on the date line. She stopped presently with a quick breath—she had reached May 15th. The year was that of the duel: the date was the day following the jessamine anniversary. Fearfully her eye overran the columns.

Then suddenly she put her open hand on the page as though to blot out the words, every trace of color stricken from cheek and brow. But the line seemed to glow up through the very flesh: "Died, May 14th; Edward Sassoon, in his twenty-sixth year."

The book slipped to the floor with a crash that echoed through the room. It was true, then! It was Sassoon's death that her mother mourned. The man in whose arms she had stood such a little while ago by the old dial of Damory Court was the son of the man who had killed him!

"Oh, God," she whispered, "just when I was so happy! Oh, mother, mother! You loved him, and your heart broke when he died. It was Valiant who broke it—Valiant—Valiant. His father!"

She slipped down upon the bare floor and crouched there shuddering and agonized, her disheveled hair wet with tears. Was her love to be but the thing of an hour, a single clasp—and then, forever, nothing? His father's deed was not his fault. Yet how could she love a man whose every feature brought a pang to that mother she loved more than herself? So, over and over, the wheel of her thought turned in the same desolate groove, and over and over the paroxysms of grief and longing submerged her.

Noiselessly as she had descended, she crept again up the stair. As she passed her mother's door, she paused a moment, and laying her arms out across it, pressed her lips to the dark grain of the wood.

CHAPTER XXVIII.

The Awakening.

The sun had passed the meridian next day when Valiant awoke, from a sleep as deep as Abou ben Adhem's, yet one crowded with flying tiptoe dreams. The one great fact of Shirley's love had lain at the core of all these honied images, and his mind was full of it as his eyes opened, wide all at once, to the new day.

He looked at his watch and rolled from the bed with a laugh. "Past twelve!" he exclaimed. "Good heavens! What about all the work I had laid out for today?"

Presently he was splashing in the lake, shooting under his curved hand unerring jets of water at Chum, who danced about the rim barking, now venturing to wet a valorous paw, now scrambling up the bank to escape the watery javelins.

Valiant came up the terraces with his blood bounding to a new rapture. Crossing the garden, he ran quickly to the little close which held the sundial and pulled a single great passion-flower. He stood a moment holding it to his face, his nostrils catching its faint elusive perfume. Only last night, under the moon, he had stood there with Shirley in his arms. A gush of the unbelievable sweetness of that moment poured over him. His face softened.

Standing with his sandaled feet deep in the white blossoms, the sun on his damp hair and the loose robe clinging to his moist limbs, he gave himself to a sudden day-dream. A wonderful waking dream of joy overflooding years of ambitionless ease; of the Damory Court that should be in days to come.

* * * * * * *

When he came from the little close there was a new mystery in the sunshine, a fresh and joyous meaning in the intense blue overarching of the imponderable sky. Every bird-note held its own love-secret. A wood-thrush sang it from a silver birch beside the summer-house, and a bob-white whistled it in the little valley beyond. Even the long trip-hammer of a far-away woodpecker beat a radiant tattoo.

He paused to greet the flaming peacock that sent out a curdling screech, in which the tentative potterack! potterack! softly. "Go on," he invited. "Explode all you want to, old Fire-Cracker. Hang your purple-and-gold pessimism! You only make the birds sound sweeter. Perhaps that's what you're for—who knows?"

He tried to work, but work was not for that marvelous afternoon. He wandered about the gardens, planning this or that addition: a little longer sweep to the pansy-bed—a clump of bull-rushes at the farther end of the lake. He peered into the stable: a saddle horse stood there now, but there should be more steeds stamping in those stalls one day, good horse-flesh bought with sound walnut timber from the hillside. How he and Shirley would go galloping over those gleaming roads, in that roseate future when she belonged to him!

Uncle Jefferson, from the door of the kitchens, watched him swinging about in the sunshine, whistling the "Indian Serenade."

To Remove Spots From Varnish.

One of the best substances to use in removing spots from varnished surfaces is butter. The stronger the butter,

STILL GROW ANCIENT GRAIN

Staff of Life Made Use of by Cave Dwellers Is Cultivated Today in Switzerland.

How old is bread? Disgruntled boarders may have theories upon the age of the particular bread served to them, but that is beside the question.

So long as records of civilized man go back bread has been the staff of life. It is somewhere in the history of prehistoric man that man first learned to grind his grain, make dough and bake it on hot stones.

In the time of neolithic man, when the branch of humanity for defense drove piles in the edges of Swiss lakes and built huts on their tops, lived with wife and children, and probably cultivated wheat and barley, tilled the soil, reaped rye and other grains. Curiously enough, the remains of neolithic villages have not contained any implements of husbandry. The flint sickles, the stone hoes, the grinding stones, the pottery jars, the bone needles, the spindle whorls, the weaving combs, the bronze knives, the bronze axes, the bronze swords, the bronze spears, the bronze daggers, the bronze arrowheads, the bronze fishhooks, the bronze chisels, the bronze awls, the bronze bracelets, the bronze rings, the bronze pins, the bronze buckles, the bronze ornaments, the bronze beads, the bronze pendants, the bronze amulets, the bronze figurines, the bronze statuettes, the bronze reliefs, the bronze inscriptions, the bronze coins, the bronze medals, the bronze seals, the bronze stamps, the bronze dies, the bronze molds, the bronze crucibles, the bronze furnaces, the bronze bellows, the bronze tongs, the bronze anvils, the bronze hammers, the bronze files, the bronze saws, the bronze drills, the bronze lathes, the bronze wheels, the bronze axles, the bronze springs, the bronze gears, the bronze pulleys, the bronze belts, the bronze chains, the bronze hooks, the bronze eyes, the bronze rings, the bronze links, the bronze bolts, the bronze nuts, the bronze screws, the bronze nails, the bronze rivets, the bronze washers, the bronze gaskets, the bronze packing, the bronze valves, the bronze cocks, the bronze faucets, the bronze pipes, the bronze tubes, the bronze fittings, the bronze joints, the bronze unions, the bronze elbows, the bronze tees, the bronze crosses, the bronze reducers, the bronze nipples, the bronze couplings, the bronze flanges

CATTLE TICK MUST GO.

Special Agent in Charge of Tick Eradication Work in Mississippi, Alabama and Tennessee Discusses Plans—Urges Co-operation of All Organizations.

By DR. J. A. KIERNAN, Bureau of Animal Industry, Nashville, Tenn.

The further south we move the greater percentage of infested herds we find. The best method of tick eradication now is the arsenical solution in the dipping vat.

Today, in any territory in Tennessee, Alabama, or Mississippi, in which tick eradication is being prosecuted, the owners of cattle bring them to the nearest dipping vat on the appointed day, regularly every two weeks, and plunge them into the arsenical solution. After a few times he doesn't even need to prod them, to get them to go through, merely opens the gate, as they have experienced the benefits of the refreshing bath, and take to it with eagerness and apparent delight. The only thing to do is for the people of the south to get together and work in harmony, if they are to accomplish the best results.

Rewards of Inventors.

It is not always the greatest invention that brings the largest financial rewards. Roller skates are said to have brought their inventor $3,000,000 while nearly half a million was realised by the man who first devised boot laces. The inventor of the safety pin who took the idea from a reproduction of a Pompeiian fresco, says Les Nouvelles, made $10,000,000. On the other hand, Charles Bourseul, who discovered and described the principle of the telephone in 1855, died poor Michaux, the inventor of the bicycle ended his days in the utmost penury, and Frederic Sauvage, who is credited with the invention of the screw propeller, was imprisoned and died bankrupt and insane.

Alabama's Iron Ore Deposits.

The boom which followed the discovery of the extensive deposits of iron ore in the vicinity of Birmingham Alabama, in 1880, was without precedent in the industrial history of the United States, and the rush to Birmingham was paralleled only by the stampedes which followed such discoveries as the Comstock lode in Nevada and the Alaska gold fields. The iron ores of Alabama, while inferior in quality to those of Lake Superior have the advantage of being near deposits of good coking coal and of the limestone requisite for fluxing, so that Birmingham, the Pittsburgh of the south, can manufacture pig iron cheaper than any other district of the world.

YOUNG COTTON AND CORN SHOULD BE HARROWED

Office of information, U S. Dept. of Agriculture, Washington D.C.

The beneficial effect of a well prepared seed bed and the use of good seed may be wholly or partially offset by improper or insufficient cultivation, is the advice of crop specialists of the Department of Agriculture.

Proper cultivation is an important factor in crop production. Cultivation should begin immediately after planting by running once or twice across the rows with a weeder or section harrow. After the plants come up at least two additional cultivations should be given with either the weeder or harrow in the case of either corn or cotton, before the regular cultivators are used. Run diagonally across the rows with either of these implements, using the section harrow with the teeth slanted backward with an angle of 45 degrees and repeat a week later at right angles with the first cultivation.

The use of the weeder or section harrow is strongly advised for the early cultivation of corn, cotton and many other crops. It is best to use the weeder in very loose sandy soils, while the section harrow is preferable on clay or buckshot soils. This early cultivation with the weeder or harrow destroys all young weeds and grass and leaves the soil in fine condition and the cotton ready for chopping or thinning. The use of the section harrow for the early cultivation of corn and cotton in the South is comparatively recent but is rapidly becoming general. One of the great advantages of its use, in addition to the excellent work done, is the extra amount of land that can be cultivated in a given time.

QUEEN MARY'S GEMS

Monarch Seldom Wears the Superb Crown Jewels.

Keeps Keys of Strong Rooms at Buckingham Palace and of Safes at Other Places—All Are Fully Insured.

London.—On more than one occasion Queen Mary has been heard to confess that she shares Andrew Carnegie's opinion that women are not at their best when they load themselves with jewels. Her majesty, as a rule, wears comparatively few ornaments, although when occasion demands she can rival any queen in Europe in the splendor of her gems, not even excepting the czarina or the queen of Spain.

It was computed when she was married that gems to the value of considerably over £100,000 were presented to her majesty, and these, of course, remain her personal property. Furthermore, King George has never permitted one of Queen Mary's birthdays to pass since their marriage 20 years ago without adding to her collection of jewels.

Considerable additions have also been made of late years to her majesty's jewels by Indian potentates. During the visit of the king and queen to India several rulers of leading Indian states were permitted to present to the queen jewels—principally pearls—of a value that it is not easy to assess. Diamonds are her majesty's favorite gems, and she cares little for colored stones, although she has some exquisite emerald and ruby ornaments.

It was characteristic of the business-like ways of her majesty that when, upon her marriage, she came into possession of the nucleus of her present wonderful collection of jewelry she took the eminently sensible precaution of having it valued for its intrinsic worth, and as soon as this valuation was complete the collection was insured for the amount. Since that time other policies have been taken out upon any additional jewels, including the crown jewels that have passed into her keeping, so that at the present day, if the whole collection or any part of it were lost or destroyed, a sum sufficient to replace it would to a very large degree be forthcoming.

The whole of her majesty's jewels are, as a rule, kept at Buckingham palace in strong rooms specially designed to the order of the late King Edward shortly after he came to the throne. Each of the shelves is lined with white velvet and everything is so arranged that whole sets of jewels, orders, etc., can be kept together, making it a matter of very little difficulty to obtain precisely the jewels that the queen requires at the shortest notice.

Smaller safes, all of them of considerable size, have lately been placed at Windsor castle, Balmoral, and York cottage for the safe keeping of any jewels her majesty requires when traveling about. The keys remain in the queen's possession and are only handed to the lady in waiting on duty when required.

The king, by the way, possesses comparatively little jewelry and wears next to none. He possesses some magnificent scarf pins and rings, mainly of diamonds and pink pearls, and it would be difficult to say within a dozen or so how many watches his majesty owns. He has also some jeweled walking sticks, but the stick he favors is, as a rule, a strong plain one, very simply mounted, and would probably be bought for a guinea or so in any West end establishment.

MAKES THE OYSTERS WORK

Japanese Scientist's Discovery Results in an Annual Crop of Pearls.

London.—The manner in which the Japanese have developed the discovery of Dr. Mikimoto, a well-known scientist, that pearl oysters could be made by artificial means to produce their gems, is described in The Graphic.

The new industry has already attained such proportions that valuable crops of pearls are regularly harvested and placed upon the market. They are in every sense of the word true pearls, as beautiful as those obtained in the ordinary way.

One strange feature of the industry is that the work of gathering the pearls is done by women divers.

MAN'S GLASS EYE BLOWS UP

Artificial Optic Explodes When in Its Socket and Tears Owner's Face.

Austin, Tex.—Arthur F. Nichols was the victim of the most peculiar accident on record. His left eye exploded. It was a glass eye and the explosion occurred while he was sitting at the supper table.

Slivers of glass were imbedded in his face, and he was taken to an oculist, who removed several pieces. Nichols' other eye also is injured, he being totally blind. He carries insurance amounting to $10,000, and his family will be provided for.

SAPPHO WAS GREATEST POET

So Said Swinburne in a Glowing Appreciation of the Greek Poetess.

London.—A hitherto unpublished appreciation by Swinburne of the Greek poetess Sappho appears in the Saturday Review. The appreciation, which is glowing in praise and apparently dates back to the middle period of Swinburne's life, concludes thus:

"Judging even from the mutilated fragments that have fallen within our reach from the broken altar of her sacrifice of song, I have always agreed with all Grecian tradition in thinking Sappho, beyond all question and comparison, the very greatest poet that ever lived. Aeschylus is the greatest poet who ever was, also a prophet. Shakespeare is the greatest dramatist who ever was, also a poet. But Sappho was simply nothing less, as she certainly was nothing more than the greatest poet who ever was at all."

TIDE UNCOVERS AGATE BEDS

Ten-Mile Stretch of Oregon Beach Becomes Hunting Ground for the Miners.

Newport, Ore.—Not for several years have there been so many agate beds uncovered along the beach here as there have been this winter, and some valuable stones are being found by the hundreds of searchers. Among the successful searchers are A. W. Peters and R. F. Furbish of Lockport, N. Y.

The prevailing southeast winds and the high tides have uncovered the beach between Nye creek and Castle Rock, a locality which usually is covered with sand at this time of the year.

Agate bearing sand and gravel is exposed most of the way for ten miles north.

Diagnosis by Electricity.

For the benefit of the nervous cases that come to the doctor, it has been asserted by Scripture that it is just as necessary to know how emotional they are as it is to know how high the temperature is in a case of fever. Moreover, in many cases it is necessary to find out what experiences in the past or present life of the patient produce emotions. For this purpose the patient sits at ease with hands on the electrodes, which may be so concealed in the arms of his chair that he is unaware that the most intimate processes of his soul are being registered as various words are spoken on various topics of conversation are discussed, the galvanometer showing when a sensitive subject has been touched.—Fred W. Eastman, in Harper's Magazine.

What Would Have Happened?

If steam had not been discovered and made to do the will of man?

If wild water-horses had not been harnessed with electric light and power wires?

If gasolene had not been made to form explosive sprays to drive automobiles?

If ether waves had not been utilized to carry wireless messages?

Nothing would have happened. Civilization would have remained stationary, or if it moved at all the movement would have been a snail's pace.

Instead of which millions of dollars of development has resulted. Human intercourse has been productive of happiness. Imagination has been aroused and ambition stirred to action. There is no truth in "it can't be done."

Men who have accomplished things have encountered many obstacles. They have fought down doubt, scorn, distrust, opposition. But the will to do, and the inspiration of right has carried them forward to success.

The L. & N. has accomplished much in the interest of the general public good, and will accomplish much more. Many people realize that its efforts are beneficial, just as people who used to laugh and sneer at "horseless carriages" now pay large sums for automobiles; just as people who thought the Wright Brothers were crazy now place much faith in flying machines; just as people who once scorned wireless now honor it for saving thousands of lives at sea.

We do not seek your co-operation in upbuilding and enriching the country because that is the course of least resistance. We seek it because it is the surest, the quickest way to prosperity for both you and us. In seeking it we ask you to think seriously on what would have happened if the L. & N. had not carried forward its work of development in the face of all opposition.

Having thought of that, picture to your mind's eye what will happen in the future if that work continues and is carried to success.

And it will be. We ask you to join with us and the thousands of progressive citizens who share in it.

After deliberating for three hours, a verdict of not guilty was returned in the case of Carter; the charge against Mrs. Walker was continued by consent.

RURAL LIFE IN CHINA

I have just returned from my first country trip in China. It was my pleasure to travel with Bro. H. F. Buchner, of Canton, and Bro. W. H. Tipton, of WuChew. I did not make this trip because of the good I could do the people, but because of the good they could do me. It was to see, hear and study them and their language that I went. My impressions were varied. I was almost overcome by the vastness of the task before us and the fewness of the workers, and then my heart was made to rejoice by seeing the power of the Gospel in China.

The territory covered by the South China Mission is immense. This trip was up the West river into Kwong Sai Province. From WuChew, the main station of that province, we went three hundred miles up the river. All along the way were cities, smaller towns and villages by the thousands. I spent some time sitting out on top of the motor boat on which we traveled, looking at the cities and villages we passed, gazing at the beautiful hills and valleys, and thinking of the progress of the kingdom. As I sat there thinking, these words of the Psalmist came to me: "Every beast of the forest is mine, and the cattle on a thousand hills." Then I prayed for the time to come when the Chinese of a thousand cities and villages might in their hearts belong to our Lord.

A large part of Kwong Sai is yet untouched by the Gospel. There is great need of more men and women to man the stations we already have, and a large number of new stations ought to be established.

But to some extent the depression of these appalling needs was alleviated when we reached Shek T'ong which is practically a Christian village. This mud-house village has about four hundred inhabitants. About thirty-two years ago a Chinese preacher visited there, talked the Gospel to one of the men and left a book for him to read. In a few weeks he believed and accepted Christ as his personal Savior but kept it a secret for a time. Shortly afterward he went with the preacher who had given him the Gospel to Canton 350 miles away to be baptised, though he did not tell his people the purpose of his trip. When he returned they found out what he had done. At once they had an indignation meeting and gave him a severe beating. This one beating was not enough for so great a crime, so they continued to persecute him for several days. It was a joy to see this old soldier of the Cross on the very spot and hear his graphic description of his persecution. But he was faithful to his Master and soon they began to inquire among themselves what it was that could make him hold out against such persecution. It was not long till they realized that it was a power they had never known before and they wanted to learn about it. The result was that soon one by one they began to give their hearts to the Lord of all the earth.

At present one third of the people of this village belong to the church, another third or more are interested in Christianity and are largely dominated by its principles, while there are a few who still practice a little idol worship at certain seasons, but are friendly to Christianity. They have a large church building which will seat about three hundred people, built partly of bamboo and partly of sun-dried brick. It cost about $700 (gold) of which $400 was donated by the natives and $300 by the missionaries. They realized the need of having a church and salary last year for that purpose. It cost more than they had anticipated and some of them gave another month's salary. Even tho' there may have been some Chinese who are Christians for the loaves and fishes, to mind this is positive proof that there is one group of them who are in the church to honor and glorify their Lord.

We were at this place on Sunday. Brother Tipton preached, then they celebrated the Lord's Supper and had a business meeting. The building, the services and the general spirit of the people were not unlike the best type of the country church at home. The Christian atmosphere to be felt in the village which I have felt no where else in China. The membership of the church is two or three hundred. Some of them coming from other villages.

Besides the church they have a Boys' Boarding school with an attendance of about fifty students. It is owned and operated entirely by the Chinese and is a monument to the power of the Gospel in China and to their ability to advance in Christian culture.

It was a great spiritual uplift to be present at this service and to see how the Gospel has transformed this heathen village into a Christian community. What God has done for Shek T'ong He will do for all the villages of China when the Gospel is presented to and gets a hold upon the people. I pray that I may live to see many such villages in China, and that any who may chance to read these words may be encouraged and inspired to give more money so that more workers may come to this great field which is ripe unto the harvest.

"TEDDY OF THE FORKED TONGUE"

The prospective early arrival of Mr Roosevelt has inspired Col. Henry Watterson to one of his most remarkable efforts of recent years, an editorial in the Courier-Journal on "The Return of the Native". This return, he concludes, will be very different in its possibilities for peril to the country from the return after the African expedition.

Mr Watterson's analysis of Mr. Roosevelt's character and career is formulated in terms of historical paralels. He holds that the ex-president has a genius for politics such as Bonaparte had for war, and like him, was raised by a succession of miracles to the chief power. "But men of this sort," declares the editor, "seem fated to go wrong at the critical moment. They never know they have enough

The gambler's spirit leads them on and on and over the precipice which bounds ambition unrestrained by conscience, wisdom and self-control."

Mr. Watterson holds that but for Mr. Roosevelt's own blundering he would surely have been the G. O. P. nominee in 1912 and the present occupant of the White House. But his prestige as a winner is gone now, the novelty of the show has vanished, the tinsel has yielded to the weather, the greenness of the wax figures is questioned far and wide. "In a word, the real significance of Mr. Roosevelt's persistent candidacy is at length thoroughly understood." Only on the assumption that the American people want a Dane that the people are fond of Dutch treat-by, that the [illegible] chapter [illegible] finds [illegible] ed to Mr. Roosevelt's hopes for re-election in 1916. So Mr. Watterson affirms in his most picturesque diction.

The editorial closes with a striking burst of emotion worth more than one perusal:

"The end of the republic is not yet. Impiety we behold on every hand; ingratitude and folly; women quarreling with nature for not making them men; men quarreling with freedom for not leveling conditions; the visionary seeking to abolish disease and sin by act of congress, the demagogues flattering these delusions; but the hand of God is not ready to descend to blight the land and blast the people.

"Not yet, not yet. Maybe it will be His will to lead them through kindly light from the darkness of the hour to higher and better things. Who shall say? Anyhow, He has lifted all present menace of the Deluge. Once more he has saved the people in spite of themselves. The return of the native may have ornithological, even geographical, significance, but not political importance. The Man-on-Horseback can only prance in the circus ring. Caesar never again; just plain Teddy of the Tiger Heart and Forked Tongue, wanting an office, and wanting it bad, like the rest of those who have been here today and gone tomorrow, as presently he shall be!"

Mr. Watterson believes that accusation can no longer be disarmed with epithets; that the lion's skin of pretence is worn to a frazzle, But if it should appear otherwise, if the issue of 1912 must be fought over again in 1916, "all patriotic men will," as he says, "welcome the contest," and will have few misgivings about the outcome.—Montgomery Journal.

CLANTON CITIZENS URGE IMMEDIATE ACTION ON HIGH SCHOOL

A delegation of about thirty representative business men of Clanton went to Montgomery Monday to confer with the State High School Commission in regard to taking immediate steps for the location of the County High School for Chilton county. After the conference, which was held in the Governor's office, the visitors were promised that the Commission would come to Clanton on Friday next, May 29, to look over the situation and inspect the different sites that have been suggested for the school.

A meeting was held at the court house Tuesday night and arrangements made for the reception of the Commission.

SILLIMAN SAFE IN MEXICO CITY

OFFICIALS AT WASHINGTON ARE MUCH RELIEVED WHEN HE WAS HEARD FROM

REBELS ENTER SATILLO

Leaders of Constitutionalists Are Divided to Representation at Peace Conference.

Washington.—The Mexican negotiations at Niagara Falls received the earnest attention of administration officials. Several exchanges occurred between the American delegates and officials here and the situation was reviewed at the cabinet meeting, after which further advices went forward to the American delegates.

Coincident with these exchanges, there were frequent expressions of the view in administration quarters that the Constitutionalist element should be brought into the mediation proceedings. It has become evident that this question of Constitutionalist participation has brought about divided counsels among the Constitutionalists. Some desire participation at least to the extent of having a representative at Niagara Falls to give information, as it has been stated they will. Others still maintain that their best course is to withhold entirely from the proceedings.

Whether this division will upset plans for sending a spokesman to the mediators or will give way before the strong desire of the administration to have the Constitutionalists represented is not clear. It was said the matter had not been passed on finally by General Carranza.

Silliman Is Safe.

One of the most threatening complications to mediation was removed when definite word reached the state department that Vice Consul John R. Silliman, arrested at Saltillo and long sought for, had arrived at Mexico City, accompanied by the British vice consul at Saltillo, Mr. MacMillan.

While, however, Silliman himself is safe, there remain several grave features connected with his arrest. Unofficial reports have indicated that he was placed under arrest while acting as a United States consul, was imprisoned, tried as a spy and condemned to death. Also that the United States consulate was entered and the official archives taken. These indignities, if officially verified, remain to be atoned for in the ultimate settlement.

Rebels Enter Saltillo.

General Carranza notified Constitutionalist headquarters here that the Constitutionalist armies had entered Saltillo, evacuated by the federal garrison.

Mellen Defended Morgan.

Washington.—A dramatic climax marked the close of the sensational testimony of Charles S. Mellen, former president of the New Haven railroad, before the interstate commerce commission when, with evidence of deep emotion, Mr. Mellen declared the late J. Pierpont Morgan was cognizant of the Grand Trunk negotiations, on which he (Mellen) was criminally indicted for violation of the Sherman anti-trust act, and that he "took the indictment that belonged to him (Morgan)," believing that it would have killed the aged financier if he had been indicted. Mr. Mellen spoke with intense feeling as he recited his efforts to shield the elder Morgan.

Becker Found Guilty.

New York.—Twelve men decided for the second time that Charles Becker was the arch-conspirator responsible for the Rosenthal murder, which, nearly two years ago, awoke New York to a realization of corruption in the police department and opened a new era of police reform. Becker, once a police lieutenant, was found guilty of murder in the first degree. Only a pardon or interference again by the court of appeals can save him from following to the electric chair the four gunmen who shot Herman Rosenthal, the gambler, early on the morning of July 16, 1912. The jury decided that the gunmen were Becker's agents.

Fruit Crop Promising.

Washington.—General prospects for a large yield of fruits of all kinds, with the possible exception of peaches, have not been equaled at any time within the past decade, save in 1912 according to the report of the United States chamber of commerce's committee on statistics and standards on the condition of fruit as of May 2 last. The report dealt with all fruits of commercial importance, including apples, peaches, pears, plums and prunes, grapes, oranges, lemons, grapefruit and strawberries.

General Sickles' Will.

New York.—The will of the late Maj. Gen. Daniel E. Sickles, which was read at the Sickles residence, named as his heirs three of his grandchildren, Daniel E. Sickles, 10-year-old son of Stanton Sickles; Christopher Cracken-thorpe, 13 years old, and Ida Blanche Cracken-thorpe, 11, children of Mrs. Ida Sickles Cracken-thorpe, whose husband is connected with the British consular service. A legacy of $5,000 was left to Gen. Horatio King and smaller legacies to servants.

MAJOR WILLIAM E. COLE

Maj. William E. Cole, U. S. A., of the coast artillery corps, is to command the Atlantic fortifications of the Panama Canal Zone. He left New York a few days ago for Cristobal, where he will establish his headquarters.

CHARLES MELLEN TESTIFIES

TELLS COMMISSION HOW THE MILLIONS OF THE NEW HAVEN WERE WASTED.

President of Road Said He Followed Instructions of Late Pierpont Morgan.

Washington.—A story of the late J. P. Morgan's absolute domination in affairs of the New Haven railroad, of the spending of millions in awed and ignorant silence at the command of the all-powerful financial ruler, was told to the interstate commerce commission by Charles S. Mellen, former president of the New Haven. It was the most extraordinary chapter yet unfolded in the commission's inquiry into the alleged exploitation of the great New England railroad and disappearance of fortunes from its treasury through acquisition at extravagant prices of subsidiary properties.

Members of the commission, counsel and interested spectators fairly hung on every word of Mr. Mellen as his story developed dramatically under the examination by Chief Counsel Folk. Everybody listened with absorbed attention and at times evident amazement, as he related how he had stood in awe of Mr. Morgan, because of his comprehensive grasp and perfect prescience of financial matters; how he had consulted with Theodore Roosevelt, then president of the United States, regarding the purchase of the Boston and Maine railroad; how he had prevented the late E. H. Harriman from acquiring the Boston and Maine by getting it himself for the New Haven; and how he had dealt with the late Police Inspector Thomas F. Byrnes of New York, to obtain the Westchester stock held by persons whom he assumed to be connected with Tammany Hall.

To Consider New College.

Oklahoma City, Okla.—Eight members of the clergy and eight laymen were named by the general conference of the Methodist Episcopal church, South, as a commission of sixteen to re-convey to the eight original patronizing conferences whatever rights the church has to the control of Vanderbilt university and to consider the advisability of establishing another university as the representative educational institution of the church.

Moose Captures City.

Sault Ste. Marie, Mich.—Steamers are moving slowly on account of heavy smoke which hang over Lake Superior and St. Mary's river from forest fires in the upper peninsula. An immense moose, which was driven from its Canadian home by forest fires, was seen by watchmen at the St. Mary's river. It practically took possession of the city. The moose began to browse in the government park when newsboys gave chase.

Cotton Seed Rules Changed.

New Orleans.—Cold pressed flake product, manufactured by the cold pressed process, is designed as cotton flake in contradistinction to decorticated cake, made by the hydraulic process, under a change in the rules affecting cotton seed products adopted here by the annual convention of the Cotton Seed Crushers' Association. The convention devoted the day to discussion of matters relating to the cotton seed industry, and the delegates attended a dinner and dance.

Reserve Bank Organized.

Atlanta.—Atlanta's reserve bank and district has been technically organized. The certificate organization was signed by Al. C. Clewis, president, and J. [illegible], cashier, of the Exchange National bank of Tallapoosa, Ga., on its way to Washington. Mr. Clewis and Mr. Griffin are two of the best known bankers of Florida. Both are former Georgians. Mr. Griffin was born in Decatur county and Mr. Clewis in Dodge county.

MEXICANS PROTEST THE LAND QUESTION

DO NOT WANT LAND QUESTION INCLUDED IN PEACE TREATY, U. S. DELEGATES INSIST.

REBELS STILL UNINVITED

Unless They Suspend Hostilities They Will Not Be Invited to Participate in Conference.

Niagara Falls, Ontario.—The observance of the Sabbath at Niagara Falls challenged criticism from the most punctilious. There were no conferences or even "conversations" until almost midnight, when the American delegates met the mediators for a short talk. Mediators, Mexican and American, attended church services and walked in the parks, or spent the hours in their rooms. Sunday is at all times a holy day in Canada, and this seemed particularly quiet.

Land Question Protested.

It may be said that the urgent demand from the American side that a definite plan for the settlement of the land question be incorporated in the settlement here is not acceptable to either the mediators or the Mexican delegates. If it is insisted upon, it will certainly disrupt the mediation, it is said. A serious effort is being made to define the scope of the negotions so as to render the land problem less exigent. Jose Requena, who ran for the vice presidency on the ticket with Gen. Felix Diaz in the last presidential election in Mexico which was declared void, arrived here from New York. He was acccompanied by Cecilio Ocon, another close friend of Felix Diaz. They said their mission was not political, and that they merely were stopping off here on personal business; but Mr. Requena immediately went into conference with Senor Elguero, one of the Mexican delegates. Hhey are registered at the hotel where the mediators and the Mexican delegation are living. Senor Requina said he hoped mediation would be successful in solving Mexico's internal and international difficulties, but declined to discuss his conference with the Mexican delegates.

Must Quit Fighting.

At present unless the Constitutionalists are willing to suspend hostilities and enter unconditionally into mediation they will be given no further opportunity to do so. The plans of the mediators look to a settlement of the difficulties between the Huerta government and the United States before submitting the program adopted here to the Constitutionalists. The mediators consider that the internal and international phases of the Mexican problem are inseparable. They believe the United States will find sufficient reparation for the offenses of the Huerta government, such as the arrest of the bluejackets at Tampico, in the establishment of an entirely new government in Mexico.

U. S. Aviator Fired On.

Vera Cruz.—Navy hydroaeroplanes were fired on by Mexican outposts, just beyond the American lines. A dozen shots were sent after the airmen, who were high in the air. The bullets failed to reach their marks.

State of Vera Cruz Entered.

Washington.—The Spanish ambassador informed the state department that he had received a messsage from the foreign office in Mexico City announcing that a Constitutionalist force of 3,000 men had entered the state of Vera Cruz and explaining that the movement of federal troops in that neighborhood was against the Constitutionalists and not against the American garrison at Vera Cruz. The ambassador said the Huerta government wanted to guard against having the activity of its army mistaken for a violation of the armistice agreement.

More Witnesses Called.

Washington.—Three directors of the New York, New Haven and Hartford railroad, in addition to those already summoned, have been served with notices to testify before the interstate commerce commission, which will resume its investigation into affairs of the New Haven. Their names, announced are DeVer H. Warner, Lawrence Minot and J. E. Elton.

Funeral of Japan's Empress.

Tokio.—A million torches and lanterns illuminated Tokio when the body of the Empress Dowager Haruko was borne through the streets in a beautiful funeral car drawn by white oxen. There had been no pageant of such solemn grandeur here since the funeral of Emperor Matsuhito, a year and a half ago. Practically the entire American colony viewed the procession from various points of vantage. It is a rule that no Japanese subjects may look down upon a royal personage from elevated points.

Quiet Prevails in Albania.

Durazzo, Albania.—Prince William of Albania, formerly Prince William of Wied, upon whom the ruleship of Albania was conferred by the powers last February, again is in the palace of Durazzo, guarded by Italian sharpies. Outside the city, insurgent chieftains, by word of mouth, declare they will not recognize the prince's authority, but will [illegible]

AUGUSTIN RODRIGUEZ

Senor Augustin Rodriguez is one of the Mexican delegates sent by Huerta to the meetings of the A. B. C. mediators at Niagara Falls, Ont.

MEXICAN AFFAIRS CHANGE

HUERTA EMPHATICALLY DENIES HE IS WILLING TO RESIGN PRESIDENCY.

DELEGATES ARE OPTIMISTIC

Rebels Capture Paredon—Win Battle at Zertuche—Federal General Ozorno Is Executed.

Mexico City.—Provisional President Huerta, in the course of an interview, said: "The Mexican peace delegates have no instructions to offer my resignation at the conference at Niagara Falls." The president spoke with energy, standing erect, and emphasized his words with a characteristic gesture. Prior to this the acting minister of foreign affairs, Esteva Ruiz, had declared that the Mexican representatives had been given "ample powers" by the government to deal with everything that may be discussed at the peace conference with the object of solving the international difficulty.

Peace Delegates Optimistic.

Niagara Falls, Ontario.—Stimulus was given to the report that by self-elimination General Huerta would made it possible for the mediation conference here to bring about peace for Mexico. It was announced in a dispatch received from Mexico City by the Associated Press that the provisional president had authorized his representatives to present his resignation if such a step became necessary to adjustment of the trouble with the United States. Later, however, it was stated that there had been an error of transmission and that General Huerta had said that his delegates have no instructions to offer his resignation.

Natives Attack Schooner.

Tampa, Fla.—Relating to a story of how his sponging schooner, the Amalia, had been dynamited, causing the death of one member of his crew, the tearing of the American flag from the masthead of the schooner and the throwing of all of the twenty-odd men into the water infested by sharks, by a band of enraged natives of Key West, Capt. Harry Bell arrived here. He came to seek redress at the hands of the United States court.

Agree on French Treaty.

Washington.—Secretary Bryan and Ambassador Jusserand virtually reached an agreement on terms of a peace treaty which shortly will be signed by the United States and France. The convention will provide that questions which cannot be settled by diplomacy shall be submitted to an international commission. The proposed treaty will follow in essentials the one already signed.

Fed erals Restore Railroad.

Vera Cruz.—Apparently convinced that the United Statese will adhere rigidly to the armistice agreement, officials of the Huerta government are preparing to replace the track along the line of the Mexican railway, torn up by Gen. Gustavo Maas.

Methodist Conference.

Oklahoma City, Okla.—Upon reassembling the pending question before the conference of the Methodist Episcopal church, South, was the discussion of the report of the committee on episcopacy. This matter was under consideration when the conference adjourned. Limitation of the tenure of office of presiding elders and recommendations for the retirement of Bishop A. W. Wilson, of Baltimore, the senior bishop of the church, on account of age, were included in a report of the committee on episcopacy.

Battleship to the Rescue.

Galveston, Texas.—The Norwegian steamship Atlantis, which left Galveston, May 17, for Tampico, with ninety-eight passengers, is aground 140 miles north of Tampico, and tugs have been ordered to her rescue. All the passengers have been taken off the Atlantis. Half a dozen vessels, including the battleship Connecticut, are standing by to assist the Atlantis in case she floats.

SEED TEST APPARATUS

GERMINATION OF GRASS AND OTHER SMALL SEEDS.

Excellent Results May Be Obtained by Use of Plain, Ordinary Jelly Tumbler—Water Is Secured by Using Candle Wick.

(By H. GARMAN.)

For germinating blue-grass and numerous other small seeds, excellent results may be obtained by an ordinary plain glass jelly tumbler, on the top of which is placed a candle-drip glass. This in turn is covered with a disk of blue blotting paper bearing the seeds, and this again covered with a plain three-inch watch glass. Water in the tumbler is brought up to the blotting paper, on which the seeds are placed, by a piece of candle wick, the two extremities of which are passed through the round opening in the bottom of the candle glass and spread out on its upper surface beneath the blotting paper. By filling the tumbler two-thirds full of water when starting the test, no further attention is required, beyond counting and removing the germinating seeds, until the end of the test. Twenty-eight of these tumblers with their complements of seeds may be placed side by side in a wooden tray and placed in a warm place.

The advantages of this method of handling the seeds are the following: (1) The whole tray may be carried about conveniently without slopping the water over its edges, as is likely to be the case when water for all the tests is contained in a metal tray. (2) Each test is completely independent, and can be removed to a table or desk at any time for inspection, without dragging the candle wick out of the water. (3) The glassware may be sterilized in an autoclav, in case molds have appeared and seem likely to make trouble. (4) The watch glasses are sufficiently low to permit one to see just what a lot of seeds are doing, may be easily removed and returned, and give no trouble by drawing up an excess of moisture.

THINNING OUT VEGETABLES

Serious Error Made by Many Farmers in Leaving Plants Too Thick—Plan for Beets.

There is a tendency for some gardeners to leave the plants of carrots, onions, and similar vegetables too thick, or to defer the thinning too long, with the intention of making use of the thinnings. Usually this is a serious error, except in the case of beets, which can be used quite young for greens. The crowded seedlings do not reach edible size as soon as they would if not crowded; and the removal of part of the crowded plants when they are wanted for the table is likely to seriously disturb and impair the growth of those which remain. A better plan is to make at least a preliminary thinning as early as possible, leaving the plants perhaps twice as thick as they are eventually to stand; and then to pull out every other plant after they reach edible size. This method of thinning is especially adapted to beets, carrots, lettuce and onions. The other root crops, like parsnips and salsify, should be thinned to the full distance at the first thinning.

Setting of Fruit.

A rain during the blooming season may decrease the setting of fruit in several ways: by preventing the pollen from reaching the stigma, both because it is too wet to fly and because pollen-carrying insects are absent; by destroying the vitality of the pollen; by injuring the stigma; by preventing fertilization or germination of the pollen because of low temperature.

Neglected Implements.

Do not forget that the implements and machines on the farm represent an investment, and that when exposed to the weather they deteriorate rapidly, thus making the upkeep and original cost a heavier charge against the equipment.

Raising Hogs.

[illegible] should attempt to raise hogs without adequate fencing of yards and pastures. An animal of any kind, but especially a hog, can make himself an intolerable nuisance if not confined within proper bounds.

Flooding and Cramping!

STELLA-VITAE STOPPED IT!

This has a world of meaning to every woman who suffers as Mrs. J. S. Blair, of Enterprise, Okla., suffered and there are many thousands such.

Mrs. Blair tells the story of her suffering and cure much better than we can tell it. We quote her own words:

"I had been flooding, cramping and vomiting for five months and taking medicine from as good a doctor as the country affords, but he did me no good. I got tired of doctor's medicine and sent to the drug store for a woman's medicine and the druggist sent me STELLA-VITAE.

"One bottle stopped everything and I felt like a different woman. I have used six bottles already and will continue to use and praise STELLA-VITAE whenever I need a woman's medicine."

What STELLA-VITAE did for Mrs. Blair it will do for you. We guarantee the first bottle to benefit you. Your money back if it don't. You cannot afford to not try it—when you have all to gain and not a penny to lose.

Go to your dealer today and begin trying STELLA-VITAE, trying to become well. We lose the price if you are not benefited. In many years of guaranteeing STELLA-VITAE less than one bottle out of every thousand has failed to benefit.

Your chances of being benefited are a thousand to one!

The Mexican Student was watching his first northern football game. It held his interest firmly. His face grew flushed, his arms were flung out, he shouted hoarsely.

"Do you call this a game?" he asked of the man at his right.

"Sure," was the reply, "what would you call it?"

"In my country," said the stranger from across the border, "we would call it a seven-day pitched battle!"

Queen Poor Conversationalist.

Queen Mary is a poor conversationalist. On some one being brought up to her it is said she will begin to talk with remarkable felicity, setting the other at ease and delighting him. Then, all of a sudden, she suddenly ceases, an acute silence supervenes and the other does not know whether to break the pause or slip away. The fact is the queen talks well by dint of concentration; this does not always last until the end of the conversation and once the thread is broken she grows abstracted, thinking of something else.

WASHINGTON GOSSIP

"It Ain't a Menagerie; Pull Down the Fence!"

WASHINGTON.—From an obscure corner of the congressional directory and a not overly well-known portion of the state of Indiana, steps into the limelight, one Henry A. Barnhart, member of congress from the Thirteenth district of the Hoosier state, and leader of a constituency of 258,674 souls.

From May 1, 1914, until time shall be no more, the Indiana congressman will be canonized on the pages of fame as the man who discovered that wild animals no longer roam the granolithic sidewalks of the District of Columbia, and the man who accordingly introduced a resolution in congress asking that Secretary Lane of the interior department pull down the high picket fence that surrounds his bailiwick. With a flowing wealth of legislative parlance, including sonorous and euphonic phrases, the "gentleman from Indiana" introduced his resolution in the house the other day.

It seems that at some time or other, the picket fence surrounding the Department of the Interior building, on the block bounded by Seventh, Ninth, F and G streets northwest, has held the attention of the Indiana congressman.

Lifting one hand majestically toward the skylight, Mr. Barnhart turned to the house, which waited with bated breath.

"Mr. Speaker," he announced, "this is my resolution:

"Whereas, wild animals no longer infest the business district of the national capital and horses, cattle and hogs are no longer permitted to roam at large therein, and,

"Whereas, ours is a nation of civilized people without need of restraint by barrier of high fences; therefore, be it

"Resolved, by the senate and house of representatives of the United States of America, in congress assembled, that the secretary of the interior be, and hereby is, authorized to remove the iron fences now surrounding the buildings occupied by the department of the interior and the general land office."

Tests Show the Value of Fresh Air Schools

THAT school children who are taught in fresh-air classrooms advance more rapidly in their studies and make greater improvement in weight and strength than children in regular classrooms is a conclusion demonstrated by Frank H. Mann of New York before the sociological section of the National Association for the Study and Prevention of Tuberculosis. The speaker reported on a series of experiments carried on jointly by the New York committee on the prevention of tuberculosis and the board of education, in which three groups of children were studied to note the effect of fresh air upon them.

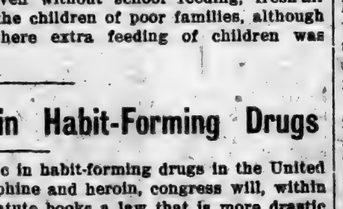
In one group the children were placed in fresh-air classes and were fed during school hours with milk and crackers morning and afternoon; in the second group the children were left in the ordinary classroom under regular conditions. Every effort was made to eliminate or equalize in the comparison such variable factors as age, home conditions, physical condition, school conditions, nativity, etc. The two groups of children in the fresh-air classes were all undernourished and anemic at admission.

The results of this experiment, extending from September to June, showed that all of the poorly nourished and anemic children in the fresh-air classes gained in weight, red corpuscles in the blood, general nutrition and physical tone. The gains were made for the most part independently of the home environment and of the financial conditions of the children's family, suggesting that the association between poverty and malnutrition in school children is not so close as has been commonly assumed, and that cases of extreme poverty with lack of necessary food at home are not nearly so prevalent as has been frequently stated.

It was also demonstrated that, even without school feeding, fresh-air classes can be run with advantage to the children of poor families, although the greatest benefit was obtained where extra feeding of children was employed.

Effort to Stop Traffic in Habit-Forming Drugs

IN A desperate effort to stop the traffic in habit-forming drugs in the United States, such as opium, cocaine, morphine and heroin, congress will, within the next few weeks, place upon the statute books a law that is more drastic than anything ever before attempted along this line. This law, the consideration of which by the senate committee on finance has been delayed for many months, will require that every person who imports, manufactures, sells or gives away opium, morphine, coca leaves, cocaine or any of their derivatives or preparations shall register his name with the collector of internal revenue of the district.



Further, he shall not sell this opium, cocaine, heroin or morphine except in pursuance of a written order on a form to be issued in blank for that purpose by the commissioner of internal revenue of the United States treasury department. This order shall be kept on file for a period of two years by the dealer so that it may be accessible for inspection by federal and state officials. The purchaser of these drugs must keep a duplicate of the form for similar inspection.

It other words, if a citizen is addicted to the use of opium or cocaine, and purchases either of these drugs, he must be on public record as a drug fiend and the dealer on record as a person who is willing to sell to the unfortunates. The law will make certain exceptions in the use of these drugs for purely medicinal purposes when procured on a written prescription from a physician.

"Business" Is Now Dead for Capital's Beggars

"PANHANDLERS" who hang out under the trees along Pennsylvania avenue a few blocks from the treasury have come to the conclusion that "business" here is "dead." The "first aid" ticket of the Associated Charities is blamed by the beggars. The nickels and dimes obtained from citizens of prosperous appearance during the old rich years have gone. Instead the "panhandler" now is given a "first aid" ticket.

When somebody devised the ticket plan, packages of the tickets, done up like mileage books, were issued to the business and professional men of Washington.

The "first aid" ticket is the printed application of a citizen for help on behalf of some individual who is supposed to need it. So far the plan has worked well, hence the complaint of the beggars that "business" is poor.

There was a time in Washington when an alert panhandler could get $4 to $6 on any pleasant summer evening—all in money, mostly nickels and dimes. But now times have changed. Within the past few weeks Washington has been flooded with "first aid" tickets and the time panhandler, instead of shelling out his nickel or his dime, tears off a "first aid" ticket and goes his way rejoicing.

The officials of the Associated Charities are pleased with the plan. They say that a man really needing help will come to them, and while he receives aid his case will be subject to the investigation of the charity workers. If such a man is a professional he wants cash and cash only and he knows where to get it.

FAILS TO SECURE RECOGNITION

Lady's Own Friends Assert Could Not Recognize Her When Brought Face to Face.

Arritts, Va.—Mrs. D. J. Bowen, of this town, makes the following statement: "For 20 years I suffered with womanly troubles, and although I tried different treatments, I did not get any relief.

I was unable to look after any of my work, and my friends thought I could not get well.

Finally, I began to take Cardui, the woman's tonic, and I hadn't taken one-third of the first bottle, before I could notice its good effects.

Now I can do all my work, feel like I'm not more than 16 years old, but am really 49. My own friends say I look so well, they don't recognize me when we meet in the road.

My daughter is using Cardui, and she says it is a fine medicine. I also have a number of lady friends taking it, since they found out how it helped me.

Whenever I feel a little fatigued after a day's extra hard work, I just take a dose of Cardui and am all right.

I can't say too much for Cardui."

Thousands of women who now suffer from womanly troubles, could be relieved and benefited, by following Mrs. Bowen's example.

Are you of this number?

If so, try Cardui today. It cannot harm you, and is almost sure to do you good.

MIGHT BE THE DESIRED ONE

Masher Not Entirely Out of It, If He Would Accept the Situation as It Was.

He was one of those insufferable young pests who patronize restaurants trying to flirt with stenographers and telephone girls who drop in about noon for lunch. Approaching a young woman who was sitting alone, he lifted his hat and said suavely:

"I beg your pardon, miss."

"Well?" interrogated the girl calmly.

"Why, er—you see, it is this way. I made an engagement with a young lady whom I have never seen to meet me here. Now, are you waiting for me?"

The girl smiled queerly.

"I might be waiting for you," she said:

"Ah! Indeed," responded the masher, delightedly.

"Yes. You see, I ordered lobster and it hasn't come yet."

DISFIGURED WITH PIMPLES

R. F. D. No. 2, Box 46, Matthews, Ga.—"For three years or more I was troubled with pimples and blackheads. At first my face would itch and burn and then the pimples would break out. They looked almost as if I had measles, causing great disfigurement. They would make my face very red and sore. Then they festered and came to a head and large boils would come on my chin and nose.

"I also had dandruff which caused my scalp to itch and burn. It itched and burned so that I had to scratch it until it was irritated. The dandruff scaled off and showed plainly in my hair. It also caused my hair to break off and become very thin. I used several remedies which did not cure and gave but little relief. After I received a free sample of Cuticura Soap and Ointment I began using them according to directions. I secured two cakes of Cuticura Soap and two boxes of Cuticura Ointment, which cured me perfectly." (Signed) Miss Willie M. Walker, July 31, 1912.

Novelist's Romance.

Mr. S. R. Crockett, the Scottish novelist, whose death is announced, was fond of relating among his intimates how he met his best of wives. It was his day of early struggle. He had written for a London daily review of one of George Milner's books. Pleased with the review, which was unsigned, Mr. Milner communicated with the writer of it and invited him eventually to visit his home in Manchester. In time the invitation was accepted. The future novelist of fame fell in love with Miss Milner, and a marriage of perfect happiness was the result.

GOOD FOR POLAR EXPLORERS

Frenchman's Invention of Much Benefit to Those Who Track Waste Places of the Earth.

Count Bertrand de Lesseps, son of the famous Frenchman of Suez canal fame, has constructed an air-propelled machine which is capable of attaining a speed of from fifteen to sixty miles an hour over the snow, according to the condition of the frozen roads. The shoe-shaped chassis is attached to broad, flat metal runners, and vibration is reduced to a minimum by the addition of strong springs. The propeller behind the pilot if well guarded by a metal screen as a protection against any one approaching it closely. When snow falls wheels are placed on the propecting pins, which lift the ski from the ground, and the car will then attain a speed of nearly one hundred miles an hour. Some such machine as this is to be taken into the Antarctic regions by Shackleton with his forthcoming expedition. Abroad this form of amusement is called aeroskiing.

RESINOL WILL SURELY STOP THAT ITCHING

Resinol is also a perfect household remedy wherever a soothing, healing application is needed. Limit of Courtesy.

Japan's new prime minister, Count Okuma, has a wooden leg. It replaces a limb which was blown off by the bomb of a political assassin. In connection with that outrage, a story is told which goes far to support the claim that is made for Okuma that he is the best-mannered man in Japan. After the explosion, which had killed his servants and horses, besides shattering his leg, he was lying in his office in an agony of pain, yet he was able to say smilingly to a foreign statesman who was taking leave of him, "Excuse me, sir, for my impoliteness in not seeing you to the door."—Pall Mall Gazette.

Sizing Up Louis.

There recently came to a fashionable shoe shop in Chicago a daughter of a man whose wealth has been acquired within very recent years. The young woman was disposed to patronize the clerk, and rejected a number of "classy" slippers he produced for her approval. Finally she said.

"I think, perhaps, I shall take these two pairs. But Louis XV heels are too high for me. Give me a size lower or, stay—perhaps Louis XIII will be high enough."—Harper's.

These days be dry and dusty. How about "snaking" our water wagon from its winter quarters, getting three or four pair of mules and try sprinkling the streets?

In another place in this issue will be found a notice of the Alabama Good Roads Association, calling upon the people of Alabama to observe August 14-15 as Good Roads Days. This is certainly a movement in which each and every citizen should be deeply interested—that of better improved highways, and it is to be hoped that all that can will procure a pick and shovel and spend these days working the roads.

June the twelfth will be a red-letter day for Clanton and Chilton county—the day of the big barbecue. Arrangements are now being perfected to entertain the the vast throng, as it is expected several thousand people will come from all parts of the county, and a large number are expected from Birmingham and Montgomery. Already the Business Mens League of Montgomery have arranged for fifty automobiles to bring the crowds from Montgomery, and about forty cars will come from Birmingham.

The Colonel is back from South America with the story that he has discovered a new river, and is laying his stakes to discover a near route by which he may reach the White House. Teddy is great when it comes to getting free advertising and notoriety. In our opinion he is the greatest four-flusher this country has ever known, but he will not have a ghost of a show to ever occupy the White House again. Woodrow Wilson has made good, the people have the greatest confidence in him, and they are not going to turn him down for a straddler of Roosevelt's calibre, you can bet your boots on that.

CLANTON'S CLAIM FOR HIGH SCHOOL

Clanton, Ala., May 27, 1914

To the Honorable Emmet O'Neal, Governor, and to the other Members of the State High School Commission, Montgomery, Alabama.

Gentlemen:—

We, the citizens of Clanton, in the county of Chilton and State of Alabama, respectfully request that your Board locate the County High School for Chilton county in Clanton, and beg leave to submit the following advantages of Clanton, over any other place in the county, to-wit:

1. Clanton is within one and one-half miles of the geographical center of Chilton county, midway between Jemison and Verbena, Maplesville on the west and Coosa river on the east.

2. Clanton is our county site, and being as above stated, situated in the center of the county, naturally everything is gravitating toward, and settling in and around Clanton, and we now have within a radius of two miles of the court house, six hundred children.

3. The schedule on the railroads, as they are now standing, affords ample accommodation for pupils at any point in the county, north and south to attend this school, and spend the night at home if located at Clanton, but the schedule would not accommodate the pupils wishing to attend by rail, if the school is located at any other point in the county.

4. We have in Clanton electric lights, and are now installing a complete system of waterworks and sewerage, which removes all local causes for sickness in our town. We are about seven hundred feet above sea level, and have the finest of water.

5. We have in Clanton three beautiful sites to offer, each one of which will be a suitable place for the location of this school. One of the east side of town, one on the west side, and one situated on the north side, highly elevated, and within five minutes walk of our depot.

6. We have two newspapers, two banks, two drug stores, two hardware establishments, two automobile garages, two livery stables and twenty-six stores. We have built several new dwellings in and around Clanton during the past six months, and have now under construction eight more, within the city limits, and contracts have been let for three new two-story brick buildings and a $20,000.00 hotel.

7. We have ample accommodation for all boarding pupils and board can be had at a reasonable rate.

8. We have two active churches, Baptist and Methodist, Sunday school and preaching every Sunday.

9. We have now in hand the following funds: Donated by the county for the erection of the school at any point in the county, Four thousand dollars ($4,000.00). Donated by the Town of Clanton, for Clanton, Four Thousand Dollars ($4,000.00). Secured by subscription, and practically by Clanton and community, Ten Thousand ($10,000.00). Total $18,000.

10. We attach hereto a statement of the $10,000.00 raised by subscription, and passed on by our bankers, as being worth one hundred per cent on the dollar.

11. We promise your Honorable Board to build and equip at once a modern building, together with a five-acre lot, on which you decide. A building which will not only be a pride to you and to us, but to the County of Chilton and to the State of Alabama, in all to cost not less than $18,000.00.

12. Clanton is the center of our local telephone system, with sixty-five lines leading out in every direction. We also have eight rural mail routes leading out from Clanton.

13. And last, we have the children ready and waiting for this school all over the county. We are citizens of Chilton county and the State of Alabama. We feel that we are as much entitled to the State's appropriation as other Counties enjoying this fund. If you will locate the school in Clanton, we will build it at once. We want the appropriation for the incoming year. We will have the buildings ready if you will locate it in Clanton, and DO IT NOW, as we sincerely hope and believe you will do, as this is, and will be in touch with all the people in the county, more than at any other point, and for all time to come.

Won't you give us this school, and won't you do it NOW? We believe you WILL, and we are,

Yours very truly,

C. Reese Mullins, Ch'm'n.;
A. C. Smith,
J. J. Pickens.

INCOME TAX A REAL THING

Notaries and Stationers Have Profited Largely as a Result of New Legislation.

If you converse with a notary you are likely to discover that the income tax is the best thing that has ever been saddled on this country. These officials would relish the idea of having the public make monthly returns, for it would mean a golden harvest for them.

Now that the date for filing the income tax blanks has expired the notaries have time to settle back, catch their breath and count the sums accruing from their labors. Just for witnessing the sworn declaration of the person making out an income tax return the notary collected the sum of 25 cents. A quarter of a dollar is not much, but when you have collected enough in one day to make it necessary to take the quarters home in a satchel, then they are worth going after. And many notaries were noticed carrying satchels back and forth every day while business was good.

The notaries were not alone in the field in commending the income tax. A visit to any stationery store will prove that stationers look upon the income tax as a blessing. It means business for them. Thousands of people are daily purchasing small note books in which to note their income, even though it is taxable at its source next year. Some stationers have regular income books in their windows and they are selling well.

ROLL-TOP DESK IS BARRED

In the Interest of Efficiency Eastern Railroad Equips Its Offices With Modern Furnishings.

This is an age of efficiency, and in the successful stores, offices, and corporations one sees many things that make for more efficient work on the part of every one from the big boss down to the janitor.

Nowhere perhaps is efficiency more rigidly demanded than on most of the railroads. An order just issued by an Eastern railroad is illustrative of the point. This order forbids the use of roll-top desks by any of the employes—all offices from the president's down and all those along the system have been equipped with flat-top desks.

This is so the men will not cram pigeonholes full of papers and pile work and papers on their desks, close them up and go home. The man with a flat-top desk will clear it off before leaving, in fact it's mandatory in this case, and he steps up to his desk the next morning, not having to fuss and fume over a pile of unsorted papers, but ready to dig right in on the day's job. There's nothing left undone from yesterday.

An Extraordinary Dwelling.

A remarkable dwelling-place is situated at Blendon, Kent, England. Standing in the corner of an agricultural field of many acres, it was formerly a chapel, probably the private chapel of the owner of a large estate in the immediate neighborhood. It has been many times restored, great care being taken to keep it true to its original form, the interior, especially the roof and spire, being formed of wrought oak beams. Strangers to the neighborhood, who are ignorant of its history, when out for a stroll on Sunday, often attempt to enter the building, under the impression that they may attend a service there, and are astonished to find that it is in reality in use as a dwelling-house. The exact history of the building is lost, and antiquarians from all parts of the world are continually calling to inspect what is to them a complete mystery. Many explanations are offered by the oldest inhabitants of the neighborhood, and strange tales are told concerning it.

American Caviar Popular.

The use of the roe salmon and other American fish for the making of caviar is growing rapidly, and as a result what at one time was a serious waste has been turned into an excellent and valuable food. The principal difference between this caviar and the Russian caviar is that the Russian article is made principally out of sturgeon roe, while American caviar is made from salmon roe, white fish roe, and the roe of other fish that are handled on a large commercial scale as well as from sturgeon roe.

This caviar is made in the same manner as the Russian caviar. The roe is pressed through screens, which allow the eggs to pass, but hold back all the membrane and the egg sacks. These eggs are then packed in a large quantity of salt, which draws some of the water and other substance from them.

Wide Proviso.

A successful agricultural show is carried on each year in a certain village in the south of Ireland. Among the many competitions for the encouragement of thrift and cleanliness is one for the best turned out donkey and cart. The prize for this goes usually to the local doctor or the local solicitor. After one year's show the farmers and smallholders pro-

New Danger.

A Cornell man has injected serum into a goat and made the said goat yield twice her usual output of milk, with a cream that was five times richer than before the treatment.

While thoroughly appreciating the importance of this discovery, and while hesitating in even the slightest way to diminish the glory to its inventor, we deem it our duty to point out its dangers.

If we are going to have our productivity increased by an appropriate serum, where is this thing going to stop?

Under the new regime, every author will be able to write twice as many books as before, every orator speak twice as long and every doctor invent twice as many new diseases. Heaven preserve us!—Life.

Great Painting Damaged.

The hall in the Rijks museum, in Amsterdam, which contains Rembrandt's "The Night Watch," painted in 1642, was specially built to hold the picture, that the lighting might be as perfect as possible. The picture is always lighted; the hall always dark. Originally the picture was arranged badly as to light and space. When in 1715 it was transferred from the Doelen to the town hall, it was made to fit into its new position by having strips cut off the canvas on either side and off the top, which destroyed the balance.

Telephones in Constantinople.

Constantinople will shortly be "on the telephone." As the service is in the hands of a private company, and not as here a department of the post-office, we may unreservedly congratulate that ancient city on its new acquisition, remarks the London Globe. It is curious to read that several Turkish girls will be found among the operators. This is a new and highly significant departure, and is said to have the full approval of the government.

TRIBUTE OF RESPECT

TO THE MEMORY OF HON. TIPTON MULLINS, ADOPTED BY CHILTON COUNTY BAR.

It is with profound sorrow that we are called to chronicle and commemorate the death of a professional brother. Tipton Mullins has answered the last summons and has passed into that inconceivable solemity that lies farther beyond. By this sad event we are once more reminded that in the midst of life we are in death, and once again we are admonished to pause and reflect upon whom we are and whither we are going.

Tipton Mullins was born in Chilton county on the 14th day of June, 1866, and was admitted to the bar in 1899. He immediately located at Clanton and began the practice of his profession, and by his studious habits and zealous efforts forged rapidly to the front and for several years preceding his demise, was the leader of this bar. While devoted to his profession he found delight in serving his county and state in many ways. He was for years Chairman of the Democratic Executive Committee of Chilton County and was a member of the State Democratic Executive Committee for an equal number of years. He never sought political preferment but was, upon all public questions, accurately informed and his counsel and judgment was constantly sought and applied.

1. Resolved, that in the death of Tipton Mullins, the Bar of the State and its citizens have sustained a heavy loss.

2. Resolved, that in our intercourse with Tipton Mullins, we always recognized him the able lawyer, the upright citizen, the courteous citizen and the conscientious Christian and were inspired with the greatest respect and esteem for him and his character, and we will ever cheerish his memory with affectionate regard.

3. Resolved, that we sympathize sincerely with the members of his family in their great bereavement.

4. Resolved, that these resolutions be presented to the Circuit Court of Chilton county and that they be spread upon the minutes of said Court and upon the minutes of the Chancery and Probate Courts of Chilton county, that a copy of these resolutions be furnished to the widow of the deceased and to Alabama Bar Association.

NO PRESSING NEED FOR EXTRA SESSION

IF CALLED PRINCIPAL BUSINESS WOULD BE CONSIDERATION OF REFORMS.

STATE CAPITAL HAPPENINGS

Doings In and Around the State House Chronicled for Our Readers.

—Montgomery.

Alabama law-makers may meet in extraordinary session before the end of the present administration. Should there be a special session of the legislature, the principal business before that body would be the consideration of State-wide and local reforms. The passage of only such measures as would accrue to the best interests of the people in general.

But the Governor of Alabama has not yet decided to call a special session of the legislature. He declared that his mind was not made up on the subject; moreover, that he saw no immediate necessity for issuing a call for a special session.

"A special session of the legislature may only be called to meet an extraordinary occasion," he said. "The Constitution of the State is explicit on the subject of special sessions of the legislature, and unless an extraordinary occasion arises, I see no reason why I should call the State's lawmakers together."

The Governor admitted that the most pressing need for a special legislative session was the necessity of giving relief to Jefferson county from the iniquitous fee system. He declared that he did not consider any reform more pressing than the enactment of an anti-fee measure for Jefferson county, and gave assurance that should he call a special session he would incorporate a suggestion for such a reform in his call. The Governor continues:

"I have been urged by many prominent citizens of Birmingham and Jefferson county to call a special session of the legislature in order that an anti-fee system might be established in that county. There is no question but that Jefferson county needs this relief, and should I call a special session I should recommend the inauguration of that important reform in my message. The majority of the people of Jefferson county have already declared that they prefer the anti-fee system in that county, and since Jefferson is by far the greatest sufferer in the State as a result of that old antiquated and iniquitous plan, I should like to furnish the relief it desires."

Should the Governor call an extraordinary session of the legislature, he would probably advocate many other important reforms, chief of which would be the enactment of measures looking to many judicial changes in the State. The Governor has evinced remarkable interest in all phases of judicial reform since he assumed the office of chief executive of the State, and it was through his influence and offices that the State-wide movement looking to the reform of the judiciary was begun several years ago.

Tax Commission Convenes June 22.

Intangible assessments of public service corporations of Alabama will be considered at a meeting of the State tax commission on June 22. Notice of the meeting has been sent out to the various public service corporations of the State, and they will be given an opportunity to appear before the tax commission at that time and make any protest relative to the assessments which were fixed by the board last year.

It is probable that many of the corporations of the State will accept the commission's assessments, in which event no changes will be made. However, there is likely to be some objection on the part of certain corporations to their assessments, and the commission will give them a hearing at the June meeting. Under the law, intangible assessments, after having been fixed by the commission, must stand for two years.

Ganey and Crumpton Retire.

James S. Ganey, president of the Fourth District Agricultural school, Sylacauga, and W. B. Crumpton, Jr., president of the Ninth District Agricultural school, Blountsville, will sever their connections with these institutions with the close of the present scholastic year and their successors were elected at the annual meeting of the boards of trustees of the nine district agricultural schools which was held in the office of Governor O'Neal.

Prof. Ganey next year will take a chair at the Alabama School for the Deaf and Dumb at Talladega. Prof. Crumpton will move to North Carolina.

The following presidents of the remaining seven schools were re-elected: First district, R. L. Reaves, Jackson; Second district, J. T. McRee, Evergreen; Third district, C. E. Cleveland, Abbeville; Fifth district, S. M. Crowell, Wetumpka; Sixth district, E. O. Sargent, Hamilton; Seventh district, S. L. Gipson, Albertville; Eighth district, J. M. Attaway, Athens.

Henderson's Majority 10,250.

Charles Henderson's majority over B. B. Comer in the race for Governor in the second primary held May 11 was 10,258, according to official returns compiled by Tyler Goodwyn chairman of the State Democratic Executive Committee, and made public Comer carried thirty-five counties and Henderson carried thirty-two. Comer failed to carry a county by a majority larger than 500 while Henderson carried five counties by majorities ranging from five hundred to eight hundred. Approximately 128,000 votes were polled.

Official returns show that J. A. Wade of Alexander City defeated Dr A. A. Persons of Bessemer for commissioner of agriculture by the small majority of 871 votes. This race was so close that it required the official count to determine the winner. Wade received 57,555 votes and Persons 56,584.

W. R. Chapman of Dothan defeated J. A. Carnley of Elba for Chancellor of the Southeastern division by 472 votes. This includes the corrected returns from Dale county, which have been filed with Chairman Goodwyn.

In the "run-off" for member of the State Democratic executive committee from the Eighth district A. G. Paterson of New Decatur defeated Judge J. B. Talley of Scottsboro by 482. Dave Goodlett of Jacksonville defeated J. A. Haynes of Columbiana for a place on the State committee from the Fourth district by a majority of 188 votes.

B. P. Crum of Montgomery, R. G. Arrington of Montgomery and W. H. Stoddard of Luverne won out for places on the State committee from the Second district. H. G. Benners, F. A. Gamble and J. W. Cook were named on the committee from the Sixth district and R. A. Mitchell and W. T. McCord won out in the Seventh district.

Thomas of Rivers county, who won out in the democratic primary.

PROGRESS MADE IN ROAD BUILDING

EXTENSIVE CONSTRUCTION HAS BEEN GOING ON FOR SEVERAL YEARS.

MUCHWORK NOW UNDER WAY

Several Counties Have Recently Made Bond Issues for Improvements of Roads.

Birmingham. — One of the many striking evidences of progress in many parts of Alabama is the extensive construction of good public highways which has been going on for years, and especially during the last year or two, and it is predicted that this year an encouraging record will be made in road building for the State at large. Several counties have made bond issues of late for road construction, and others are seriously considering the proposition. In nearly all the counties where elections were held to pass on bond issues for this purpose the majorities in favor of the move were large.

Many of the counties of Alabama have gone ahead building modern public highways to be paid direct out of their treasuries. Extensive work in this direction has been done or is now under way in Shelby, Madison, Marshall, Blount, Cullman, Walker, Elmore, Tuscaloosa, Perry, Dallas, Chambers, Marion and other counties. Practically all of the counties in the State either have or are waking up to the importance and practical value of constructing good roads. Where this has been undertaken in a large way already good returns are being enjoyed not only in economy of time and wear and tear on teams reaching markets, but in the enhancement of land values, improvements in educational and social conditions and otherwise.

It is stated that as a rule those counties which have accomplished most in road building are the most prosperous commercially as well as agriculturally. Road building in a practical way, it is claimed, is largely the secret of the prosperity in Dallas, Cullman, Walker and other counties which have gone about it in a business-like way.

Birmingham. — As a result of a conference held in Birmingham between Lee Cowart, State immigration commissioner, and Frank G. "At the present time," said Mr. Cowart, "I have secured $30,000 for this purpose, and about to close contracts which will add another $40,000. I believe that the sum in the end will be $100,000. We will have an Alabama building, and all the products of this great State will be put on exhibition.

PEACE DELEGATES GETTING TOGETHER

MEDIATORS ARE COMING INTO CLOSER ACCORD ON THE LAND PROBLEM.

NEW LAW HELPS SITUATION

Mexican Chamber Passes Measure Creating New Tax of Land Holdings.

Niagara Falls, Ont. — The opposing delegates at the Mexican peace conference, clearly are coming into closer accord on the vexed land problem. The mediators were able to take a notably forward step. Delegates representing both sides have ground, one from the view that the problem was for internal solution and not the subject of mediation, the other that the thing must be settled here and now in conformity with the views of the Washington government. For several days the diplomatic tribunal despaired of finding a common meeting place, but finally both sides have come to see that if the mediation is to be a success this question must be viewed in a spirit of conciliation.

The strong declaration of President Wilson on the subject published in an interview as the mediation conference was about to assemble, aroused a good deal of feeling and for two or three days threatened a disastrous outcome of the whole effort at peace. The Mexican delegates firmly declared that it was untrue that the fuedal system of Mexico was the single, or indeed the chief cause of the recurring revolutions. They said that personal ambition had played a much more important part. They insisted that in the existing condition of Mexico it was idle to talk of a wholesale subdivision of estates for the benefit of an ignorant and improvident class lacking both energy and thrift to profit by such a humanitarian scheme.

Finally they held that the whole land question lay without the field of mediation and belonged to the legislative body of Mexico alone to deal with. And they asked, even if they should engage to adopt some form of reformatory plan what assurance is it possible to give that the plan will be faithfully and persistently carried out by a constitutional government such as is contemplated?

The delegates representing the United States held firmly to their ground. The grave situation in Mexico City demanded prompt action. As a preliminary step, and as an earnest of their purpose to do whatever was in their power, last Thursday the Mexican Chamber of Deputies precipitately passed a law which the Mexican delegates announced in the following terms:

"This law creates a new tax of land holdings and it is not intended to increase the government's revenue. Its purpose is to favor the small land owner. Taxes in Mexico go to the various State treasuries and the federal government collects 30 per cent. from above from the State for the federal treasury.

"The new law is framed to relieve the small land owner from the burden of this extra 30 per cent. and to distribute the same amongst the large landed proprietors thereby improving the situation of the former and giving the latter an inducement to break up large estates."

O'NEAL CALLS SPECIAL ELECTION

Vacancy Caused by Resignation of Congressman Clayton to be Filled

Montgomery, Ala. — The Governor of Alabama has called a special election in the Third Congressional district for June 29 to fill the vacancy caused by the resignation of Representative Henry D. Clayton, who was sworn in as United States judge for the Northern and Middle district of Alabama, to succeed the late Judge Thomas G. Jones. The call for the special election was issued immediately upon the receipt of Mr. Clayton's resignation as Congressman from the Third district.

Mr. Clayton was sworn into his new office with simple but impressive ceremonies. The oath of office was administered by Col. Harvey E. Jones, clerk of the court, in the presence of a large number of representative members of the bar of Montgomery.

The new judge was welcomed on behalf of the bar association by Maj. William A. Gunter, one of the most distinguished lawyers in Alabama, who made an appropraite address.

Judge Clayton responded with a brief talk, in which he expressed his extreme appreciation of the cordial reception tendered him by the members of the local bar.

The VALIANTS of VIRGINIA

By HALLIE ERMINIE RIVES

ILLUSTRATIONS by LAUREN STOUT

COPYRIGHT BY BOBBS-MERRILL COMPANY

SYNOPSIS.

Dabney Valiant, a rich society favorite, suddenly discovers that the Valiant corporation, which his father founded and which was the principal source of his wealth, had failed. He voluntarily turns over his private fortune to the receiver for the corporation. His entire remaining possessions consist of an old motor car, a white bull dog and Damory court, a negro estate in Virginia. On the way to Damory court he meets Shirley Dandridge, an auburn-haired beauty, and decides that he is going to like Virginia immensely. Shirley's mother, Mrs. Dandridge, and Major Bristow exchange reminiscences during which it is revealed that the major, Valiant's father, and a man named Sassoon were rivals for the hand of Mrs. Dandridge in her youth. Sassoon and Valiant fought a duel on her account in which the former was killed. Valiant finds Damory court overgrown with weeds and creepers and decides to rehabilitate the place. Valiant saves Shirley from the bite of a snake, which kills him. Knowing the deadliness of the poison, Shirley sucks the poison from the wound and saves his life. Valiant learns for the first time that his father left Virginia on account of a duel in which Doctor Southall and Major Bristow acted as the latter's seconds. Valiant and Shirley become good friends. Mrs. Dandridge admits when she meets Valiant for the first time. Valiant discovers that he has a fortune in old walnut trees. The yearly tournament, a survival of the jousting of feudal times, is held at Damory court. At the last moment Valiant takes the place of one of the knights, who is sick, and enters the lists. He wins and chooses Shirley Dandridge as queen of beauty to the dismay of Katherine Fargo, a former sweetheart, who is visiting in Virginia. The tournament ball at Damory court draws the elite of the countryside. Shirley is crowned by Valiant as queen of beauty. Valiant tells Shirley of his love and they become engaged. Katherine Fargo, determining not to give up Valiant without a struggle, points out to Shirley how terrible it would be for the woman who caused the duel to meet Valiant, who looks so much like his father.

CHAPTER XXVIII.—Continued.

"Young mars' feel 'way up in de woods dis day," he said to Aunt Daphne. "He wake up ez glad ez ef he done 'fessed 'ligion las' night. Well, all de folkses cert'n'y 'joyed deyselves. Ol' Mistah Fargo done eat 'bout forty uh dem jumbles. Ah heah 'im talkin' ter Mars' John. 'Reck'n yo' nuss' hab er crackahjack cook down yeah,' he say. Hyuh, hyuh!"

"G'way wid yo' blackyardin'!—" chuckled Aunt Daphne, delighted. "Don' 'speed ter come eroun' honey-caffuddlin' me!"

"Dat's whut he say," insisted Uncle Jefferson; "he did fo' er fac'!"

She drew her hands from the suds and looked at him anxiously. "Jeff'son, yo' reck'n Mars' John gwineter fotch dat Yankee 'ooman heah ter Dam'ry Ev'ot, ter be ouah mistis?"

"Humph!" scoffed her spouse. "Dat highfalutin' gal whut done swaller de ramrod! No suh-ree-bob-tail! De yiddah yo' gits, de mo' foolishah yo' 'stations is! Don' yo' tek no mo' trouble on yo' back den yo' kin keek off'n yo' heels! She ain' gwineter run dis place, er ol' Devil-John tuhn oyah in he grave!"

Sunset found Valiant sitting in the music-room before the old square piano. In the shadowy chamber the keys of mother-of-pearl gleamed with dull colors under his fingers. He struck at first only broken chords, that became finally the haunting barcarole of "Tales of Hoffmann." It was the air that had drifted across the garden when he had stood with Shirley by the sun-dial, in the moment of their first kiss. Over and over he played it, improvising dreamy variations, till the tender melody seemed the dear ghost of that embrace. At length he went into the library and in the crimsoning light sat down at the desk, and began to write:

"Dear Bluebird of Mine:

"I can't wait any longer to talk to you. Less than a day has passed since we were together, but it might have been eons, if one measured time by heart-beats. What have you been doing and thinking, I wonder? I have spent those eons in the garden, just wandering about, dreaming over those wonderful, wonderful moments by the sun-dial. Ah, dear little wild heart born of the flowers, with the soul of a bird (yet you are woman, too!) that old dial is marking happy hours now for me!

"How have I deserved this thing that has come to me?—sad bungler that I have been! Sometimes it seems too good and sweet, and I am suddenly desperately afraid I shall wake to find myself facing another dull morning in that old, useless, empty life of mine. I am very humble, dear, before your love.

"Shall I tell you when it began with me? Not last night—nor the day we planted the ramblers. (Do you know, when your little muddy boot went trampling down the earth about their roots, I wanted to stoop down and kiss it? So dear everything about you was!) Not that evening at Rosewood, with the arbor fragrance about us. (I think I shall always picture you with roses all about you. Red roses the color of your lips!) No, it was not then that it began—nor that dreadful hour when you fought with me to save my life—nor the morning you sat your horse in the box-rows in that yew-green habit that made your hair look like molten copper. No, it began the first afternoon, when I sat in my motor with your rose in my hand! It has never left me since, by day or by night. And yet there are people in this age of airships and honking highways and typewriters who think love-at-first-sight is as out-of-date as our little grandmothers' hoops rusting in the garret. Ah, sweetheart, I, for one, know better!

"Suppose I had not come to Virginia—and known you! My heart jumps when I think of it. It makes one believe in fate. Here at the Court I found an old leaf-calendar—it sits at my elbow now, just as I came on it. The date it shows is May 14th, and its motto is: 'Every man carries his fate upon a riband about his neck.' I like that.

"That first Sunday at St. Andrew's, I thought of a day—may it be soon!—when you and I might stand before that altar, with your people (my people, too, now) around us, and I shall hear you say: 'I, Shirley, take thee, John—' And to think it is really to come true! Do you remember the text the minister preached from? It was 'But all men perceive that they have riches, and that their faces shine as the faces of angels.' I think I shall go about henceforth with my face shining, so that all men will see that I have riches—your love for me, dear.

"I am so happy I can hardly see the words—or perhaps it is that the sun has set. I am sending this over by Uncle Jefferson. Send me back just a word by him, sweetheart, to say I may come to you tonight. And add the three short words I am so thirsty to hear over and over—one verb between two pronouns—so that I can kiss them all at once!"

He raised his head, a little flushed and with eyes brilliant, lighted a candle, sealed the letter with the ring he wore and dispatched it.

Thereafter he sat looking into the growing dusk, watching the pale lamps of the constellations deepen to green gilt against the lapis-lazuli of the sky, and listening to the insect noises dulling into the woven chorus of evening. Uncle Jefferson was long in returning, and he grew impatient finally and began to prowl through the dusty corridors like a leopard, then to the front porch and finally to the driveway, listening at every turn for the familiar slouching step.

When at length the old negro appeared, Valiant took the note he brought, his heart beating rapidly, and carried it hastily in to the candlelight. He did not open it at once, but sat for a full minute pressing it between his palms as though to extract from the delicate paper the beloved thrill of her touch. His hand shook slightly as he drew the folded leaves from the envelope. How would it begin? "My Knight of the Crimson Rose?" or "Dear Gardener?" (She had called him Gardener the day they had set out the roses) or perhaps even "Sweetheart?". It would not be long, only a mere "Yes" or "Come to me," perhaps; yet even the shortest missive had its beginning and its ending.

He opened and read.

For an instant he stared unbelievingly. Then the paper crackled to a ball in his clutched hand, and he made a hoarse sound which was half cry, then sat perfectly still, his whole face shuddering. What he crushed in his hand was no note of tender love-phrases; it was an abrupt dismissal. The staggering contretemps struck the color from his face and left every nerve raw and quivering. To be "nothing to her, as she could be nothing to him?" He felt a ghastly inclination to laugh. Nothing to her!

Presently, his brows frowning heavily, he spread out the crumpled paper and reread it with bitter slowness, weighing each phrase. "Something which she had learned since she last saw him, which lay between them." She had not known it, then, last night, when they had kissed beside the sun-dial! She had loved him then! What could there be that thrust them irrevocably apart?

Without stopping to think of the darkness or that the friendly doors of the edifice would be closed, he caught up his hat and went swiftly down the drive to the road, along which he plunged breathlessly. The blue star-spangled sky was now streaked with clouds like trailed orchids, and the shadows on the uneven ground under his hurried feet made him giddy. Through the din and hurly-burly of his thoughts he was conscious of lights moving, shapes, voices, the sweet breath of roses, and above all the heartening whiff of honeysuckle. He was striding thought that Shirley was suffering, too. It seemed incredible that he should now be raging along a country road at nightfall to find something that so horribly hurt them both.

It was almost dark—save for the starlight—when he saw the shadow of the square ivy-grown spire rearing stark from its huddle of foliage against the blurred background. He pushed open the gate and went slowly up the worn path toward the great iron-bound and hooded door. Under the larches on either hand the outlines of the gravestones loomed pallidly, and from the bell tower came the faint inquiring cry of a small owl. Valiant stood looking about him. What could he learn here? He read no answer to the riddle. A little to one side of the path something showed snow-like on the ground, and he went toward it. Nearer, he saw that it was a mass of flowers, staring up whitely from the semi-obscurity from within an iron railing. He bent over, suddenly noting the scent; it was cape jessamine.

With the curious sensation of almost prescience plucking at him, he took a box of vestas from his pocket and struck one. It flared up illuminating a flat granite slab in which was cut a name and inscription:

EDWARD SASSOON.
"Forgive us our trespasses."

The silence seemed to crash to earth like a great looking-glass and shiver into a million pieces. The wax dropped from his fingers and in the supervening darkness a numb fright gripped him by the throat. Shirley had laid these there, on the grave of the man his father had killed—the cape jessamines she had wanted that day, for her mother! He understood.

* * * * * * * *

It came to him at last that there was a chill mist groping among the trees and that he was very cold.

He went back along the Red Road stumblingly. Was this to be the end of the dream, which he had fancied would last forever? Could it be that she was not for him? Was it no hoary lie that the sins of the fathers were visited upon the third and fourth generation?

When he re-entered the library the candle was guttering in the burned wings of a night-moth. The place looked all at once gaunt and desolate and despoiled. What could Virginia, what could Damory Court, be to him without her? The wrinkled note lay on the desk and he bent suddenly with a sharp catching breath and kissed it. There welled over him a wave of rebellious longing. The candle spread to a hazy yellow blur. The walls fell away. He stood under the moonlight, with his arms about her, his lips on hers and his heart beating to the sound of the violins behind them.

He laughed—a harsh wild laugh that rang through the gloomy room. Then he threw himself on the couch and buried his face in his hands. He was still lying there when the misty rain-wet dawn came through the shutters.

CHAPTER XXIX.

The Coming of Greef King.

It was Sunday afternoon, and under the hemlocks, Rickey Snyder had gathered her minions—a dozen children from the near-by houses with the usual sprinkling of little blacks from the kitchens. There were parents, of course, to whom this mingling of color and degree was a matter of conventional prohibition, but since the advent of Rickey, in whose soul lay a Napoleonic instinct of leadership, this was more honored in the breach than in the observance.

"My! Ain't it scrumptious here now!" said Cozy Cabell, hanging yellow lady-slippers over her ears. "I wish we could play here always."

"Mr. Valiant will let us," said Rickey. "I asked him."

"Oh, he will," responded Cozy sleepily, "but he'll probably go and marry somebody who'll be mean about it."

"Everybody couldn't be as mean as you," said Rickey, who prided herself on her superior enlightenment. "Greenie, you him. (Greenville Female Seminary Simms, if you slap that little nigger again, I'll slap you!)"

Greenie rolled over on the grass and tittered. "Miss Mattie Sue didn'," she said. "Ah heah huh say de yuddah day et wuz er moughty good feelin' ter go ter baid Mistis en git up Marstah!"

"Well," said Cozy, tossing her head till the flower earrings danced, "I'm going to get married if the man hasn't got anything but a character and a red mustache. Married women don't have to prove they could have got a husband if they had wanted to."

"Let's play something," proposed Rosebud Meredith, on whom the discussion palled. "Let's play King, King Katiko."

"It's Sunday!"—this from her smaller and more righteous sister. "We're forbidden to play anything but Bible games on Sunday, and if Rosebud does, I'll tell."

"Jay-bird tattle-tale!" sang Rosebud derisively. "Don't care if you do!"

"Well," decreed Rickey. "We'll play Sunday school then. It would take a saint to object to that. I'm superintendent and this stump's my desk. All you children sit down under that tree."

They ranged themselves in two rows, the white children, in clean Sabbath pinafores and go-to-meeting knickerbockers, in front and the colored ones, in ginghams and cotton-prints, in the rear—the habitual expression of a differing social station. "Oh!" shrieked Miss Cabell, "and I'll be Mrs. Merryweather Mason and teach the infants' class."

"There isn't any infant class," said Rickey. "How could there be when there aren't any infants? The lesson is over and I've just rung the bell for silence. Children, this is Missionary Sunday, and I'm glad to see so many happy faces here today. Cozy," she said relenting, "you can be the organist if you want to."

"I won't," said Cozy sullenly. "If I can't be table-cloth I won't be dish-rag."

"All right, you needn't," retorted Rickey freezingly. "Sit up, Greenie. People don't lie on their backs in Sunday-school."

Greenie yawned dismally, and righted herself with injured slowness. "Ah diffuses ter 'cep' yo' insult, Rickey Snydah," she said. "Ah'd ruthah lose mah 'ligion dan mah lar'ness. En Ah 'spises yo' spissable dissisition!"

"Let us all rise," continued Rickey, unmoved, "and sing 'Kingdom Coming.'" And she struck up lustily, beating time on the stump with a stick, and the rows of children joined in with unction, the colored contingent coming out strong on the chorus:

De yerf shall be full ob de wunduhful story
As watahs dat covah de sea!

The clear voices in the quiet air startled the fluttering birds and sent a squirrel to the tip-top of an oak, from which he looked down, flirting his brush. They roused a man, too, who had lain in a sodden sleep under a bush at a little distance. He was ragged and soiled and his heavy brutal face, covered with a dark stubble of some days' growth, had an ugly scar slanting back from cheek to hair. Without getting up, he rolled over to command a better view, and set his eyes, blinking from their slumber, on the children.

"We will now take up the collection," said Rickey. ("You can do it, June. Use a flat piece of bark.) Remember that what we give today is for the poor heathen in—in Alabama."

The bark-slab made its rounds, receiving leaves, acorns, and an occasional pin. Midway, however, there arose a shrill shriek from the bearer and the collection was scattered broadcast. "Rosebud Meredith," said Rickey witheringly, "it would serve you right for putting that toad in the plate if your hand would get all over warts! I'm sure I hope it will." She rescued the fallen piece of bark and announced: "The collection this afternoon has amounted to a hundred dollars and seven cents. And now, children, we will skip the catechism and I will tell you a story."

Her auditors hunched themselves nearer, a double row of attentive white and black faces, as Rickey with a preliminary bass cough, began in a drawling tone whose mimicry called forth giggles of ecstasy.

"There were once two little sisters who went to Sunday-school and loved their teacher ve-e-ery much. They were always good and attentive—not like that little nigger over there! The one with his thumb in his mouth! One was little Mary and the other was little Susy. They had a mighty rich uncle who lived in Richmond, and once he came to see them and gave them each a dollar. And they were ve-e-ery glad. It wasn't a mean old paper dollar, all dirt and creases; nor a battered whitey silver dollar; but it was a bright round gold dollar, right out of the mint. Little Mary and little Susy could hardly sleep that night for thinking of what they could buy with those gold dollars.

"Early next morning they went down-town, hand in hand, to the store, and little Susy bought a bag of goober-peas, and sticks and sticks of striped candy, and a limber jack, and a gold ring, and a wax doll with a silk dress on that could open and shut its eyes—"

"Huh!" said the captious Cozy. "You can't buy a wax doll for a dollar. My littlest, littlest one cost three, and she didn't have a stitch to her back!"

"Shut up!" said Rickey briefly. "Dolls were cheaper then." She looked at the row of little negroes, goggle-eyed at the vision of such largess. "What do you think little Mary did with her gold dollar? She loved dolls and candy, too, but she had heard about the poo-oo-r heathen. There was a tear in her eye, but she took the dollar home, and next day when she went to Sunday-school, she dropped it in the missionary-box.

"Little children, what do you reckon became of that dollar? It bought a big satchelful of tracts for a missionary. He had been a poor man with six children and a wife with a bone-felon on her right hand—not a child old enough to wash dishes and all of them young enough to fall in the fire—so he had to go and be a missionary. He was going to Alabam—to a cannibal island, and he took the tracts and sailed away in a ship that landed him on the shore. And when the heathen cannibals saw him they were ve-e-ery glad, for there hadn't been any shipwrecked sailors for a long time, and they were ve-e-ery hungry. So they tied up the missionary and gathered a lot of wood to make a fire and cook him.

"But is had rained and rained and rained for so long that the wood was all wet, and it wouldn't burn, and they all cried because they were so hungry. And then they happened to find the satchelful of tracts, and the tracts were ve-e-ery dry. They took them and stuck them under the wet wood, and the tracts burned and the wood caught fire and they cooked the missionary and ate him.

"Now, little children, which do you think did the most good with her dollar—little Susy or little Mary?"

The front row sniggered, and a sigh came from the colored ranks. "Dem ar' can'bals," gasped a dusky infant breathlessly. "—dey done eat up all dat candy and dem goober-peas, too?"

QUESTION RIGHT TO SWORD

Historic Relic Now in Possession of University of Pennsylvania Has Evoked Discussion.

The gold sword that Louis XVI presented to John Paul Jones in recognition of the fight he made with the Bon Homme Richard against the Serapis has been presented to the University of Pennsylvania by Edward C. Dale, son of the late Richard C. Dale, a former president of the Society of Cincinnati. The sword has been in the possession of the Dale family for more than a century.

This is the sword which Charles Henry Hart, "dead historian," declares only should be in the possession of Admiral Dewey. It had been generally accepted that the sword passed by will of Commodore Jones to Commodore Dale, a nephew of Richard C. Dale. Mr. [illegible] fighter. Later the sword was sent to Robert Morris.

According to Mr. Hart Mr. Morris later presented the sword to Commodore John Barry, senior officer of the American navy in 1795, but that the presentation was only a life legacy, and that it should have been handed down to Barry's successor as senior officer, eventually reaching the possession of Admiral Dewey.—Philadelphia Press.

Bird Man Has Arrived.

On the day after Christmas a Russian aviator at St. Petersburg flew a new machine of his own making for hours, carrying ten passengers in addition to a heavy load of ballast. This establishes the aeroplane as a sure adjunct of modern transportation, for-getting passengers and freight. A few days before this news was heard of the successful use of the same principle in an automobile which made another journey of 1,000 miles.

Declares Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound Saved Her Life and Sanity.

Shamrock, Mo.—"I feel it my duty to tell the public the condition of my health before using your medicine. I had falling, inflammation and congestion, female weakness, pains in both sides, backaches and bearing down pains, was short of memory, nervous, impatient, passed sleepless nights, and had neither strength nor energy. There was always a fear and dread in my mind, I had cold, nervous, weak spells, hot flashes over my body. I had a place in my right side that was so sore that I could hardly bear the weight of my clothes. I tried medicines and doctors, but they did me little good, and I never expected to get out again. I got Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and Blood Purifier, and I certainly would have been in grave or in an asylum if your medicines had not saved me. But now I can work all day, sleep well at night, eat anything I want, have no hot flashes or weak, nervous spells. All pains, aches, fears and dreads are gone, my house, children and husband are no longer neglected, as I am almost entirely free of the bad symptoms I had before taking your remedies, and all is pleasure and happiness in my home."—Mrs. JOSIE HAM, R. Gave Hecklers a Chance.

At one time the Republicans of Chicago were out and were fighting Democracy on industrial conditions and the putative helplessness of a situation which did not let the Republicans in. A parade was started off and was well on its way—nearly to the file closers—when a ward boss saw that two lighted transparencies lacked carriers. He looked around hurriedly and noticed that one of his retainers was idle. "Here," he yelled, "shoulder this and get in line." The shanghaied recruit was a gambler who busied himself in ward politics on occasions, but for the most stuck to his trade when trade was possible. As he hoisted the lighted legend, "Open up the mills and factories," there was a chorus of derisive yells from the sidewalk: "Never mind the mills. Open up the poker games."

Shakespeare and Bacon.

It has not been proven that Bacon wrote the plays known as Shakespeare's. The various attempts at such task have all turned out to be melancholy failures. It has been shown that there are many difficulties in the way of believing that the historical Shakespeare wrote the immortal dramas, but it has not been shown that anybody else wrote them. The Stratford man is still in possession of the glory of their authorship, and if he is not entitled to the honor it is impossible to say who is.

Continuous Problem.

"We sent Glayds Ann to cooking school to get her mind off her piano playing," said Mr. Cumrox.

"Did the plan succeed?"

"Yes. Now we're trying to persuade her to study political economy so as to get her mind off the cooking."—Washington Star.

DID THE WORK
Grew Strong on Right Food.

You can't grow strong by merely existing. You must have food—the kind you can digest and assimilate.

Unless the food you eat is digested it adds to the burden the digestive organs have naturally to carry. This often means a nervous breakdown.

"About a year ago," writes a Mass. lady, "I had quite a serious nervous breakdown caused, as I believed, by overwork and worry. I also suffered untold misery from dyspepsia.

"First I gave up my position, then I tried to find a remedy for my troubles, something that would make me well and strong, something to rest my tired stomach and build up my worn-out nerves and brain.

"I tried one kind of medicine after another, but nothing seemed to help me.

"Finally a friend suggested change of food and recommended Grape-Nuts. With little or no faith in it, I tried a package. That was eight months ago and I have never been without it since.

"Grape-Nuts did the work. It helped me grow strong and well. Grape-Nuts put new life into me, built up my whole system and made another woman of me, too!"

The Onward March

Progress is an irresistible force.

Men of imagination, of ambition, of aggressiveness have populated the world since the beginning of history.

Each succeeding generation was conspicuous for its accomplishments, and left inspiration for succeeding generations.

The present generation is living in the age of what would have been impossibilities, miracles, a century ago.

And yet much, very much more than has been accomplished, remains to be accomplished.

It will be accomplished, because progress is an irresistible force, ever on the onward march.

Material accomplishment is not the only accomplishment. Men's minds are undergoing development. Less prejudice, less superstition, less hatred exists than ever in the world's history.

The L. & N. speaks of these things because it is trying to accomplish things. It has met, and is constantly meeting with, opposition. Much of that opposition is honest opposition. Men desirous of accomplishing the same results oppose us because they differ with our methods.

To such men, honest men, we say that ours is a big system. Our standard of excellence in freight and passenger service must be maintained. That in itself is a big task.

But we are not content to stop there. We want low grades, shorter routes, even better facilities, a better development of our territory.

We want these things which will be of most benefit to the community at large because we have dreams of the future. We know the territory is wonderfully productive of everything desired by man, and we want it to produce.

These things, the carrying out of our plans, cost money. We must earn money.

The L. & N. solicits your good will, your freight and passenger patronage, your co-operation in its effort to keep abreast with the onward march of progress.

Quite a bunch of the boys went to Selma Friday to witness the initiation of the 200 class of W. O. W., which was enjoyed by all. There was one thing noticeable that speaks well for prohibition, Camp No. 3 of Selma, did not treat to anything but ice water. We do not believe this would have been the case during the reign of open saloon. This was appreciated and spoken of among the visitors All of the Head Camp Officers were present and the Uniform Rank of Camp No. 2, Montgomery, did the work.

VOL 5. CLANTON, ALA., THURSDAY JUNE 4, 1914 NO. 8

Everything In Readiness For Big Barbecue

Big Celebration at Clanton on June 12th Will Be Largely Attended By People From All Over Alabama.

All arrangements have been made and everything is in readiness for the Big Barbecue to be given by the Birmingham-Montgomery Highway Association, at Clanton on Friday, June 12.

This will be, without doubt, one of the greatest events that has ever taken place in Chilton county, the memory of which will linger for many years to come in the minds of all who attend.

Those having the arrangement of the barbecue in charge, state that the celebration will cost easily one thousand dollars. A brass band is to be secured and nothing is to be left undone to make the day one of pleasure and merriment for all.

Mr. W. S. Keller, State Highway Engineer, and President of the Birmingham-Montgomery Highway, was in Clanton Saturday last for a short while, making a trip over the route of the new highway from Montgomery to Birmingham, and was much gratified at the interest manifested in the barbecue by the people of Clanton, and was also greatly elated at the progress being made on the highway all along the route.

This highway when completed will be of great benefit to people all along the route, as it will put the farmer in closer touch with the larger towns, thereby having easy access to market for all the products of the farm.

The Good Roads Committee of the Montgomery Business Men's League is taking a lively interest in the barbecue, and are adding new entries every day for the automobile tour to Clanton on the 12th. It is already an assured fact that not less than fifty cars will be here from Montgomery. The Birmingham Chamber of Commerce is also getting busy, and they say that it will take forty or fifty cars to accommodate the crowds from Birmingham.

Aside from the large number of good roads enthusiasts from all parts of the State, there will be great throngs here from all intermediate points along the route.

Mayor E. A. Matthews, who is in charge of the arrangements for the barbecue, states that several prominent citizens have signified their intention of attending, including Governor-elect and Mrs. Charles Henderson, John Craft, President of the State Highway Commission, and one of greatest good roads advocates in the country, W. S. Keller, State Highway Engineer, and Mrs. Keller, Bruce Kennedy of Montgomery, Thos. Hopkins, Cashier of the First National Bank of Birmingham, members of the Boards of Revenue from Montgomery and Jefferson counties and numerous other notables.

Clanton will be decorated in gala attire for the festivities, and the day will be given over to good roads and a good time.

Everybody is cordially invited and expected to come, participate in the pleasures of the day, and bring well-filled baskets to comfort the inner man.

FIRE IN NEW JOHNSON BUILDING

A serious conflagration was narrowly averted early Friday morning last, when a blaze in the new two-story Johnson building nearing completion on Main street was discovered. The discovery was made by Mr. Harry Roper, about three o'clock in the morning, while Clanton's populace was in slumberland. Mr. Roper was acting as Night Marshal in the place of his brother. Mr. O. O. Roper, and had it not been for his prompt attention to duty and alertness it is possible that the entire block on which the building is located would have been consumed by the flames.

Mr. Roper, on seeing smoke coming from the roof, rushed to the building, and, realizing the seriousness of the situation, fired several shots from his revolver, and in a short time quite a crowd had gathered upon the scene, and efforts were at once made to extinguish the flames. The doors to the building being locked, an entrance was effected by breaking a plate glass window in the rear of the building. On entering, it was discovered that the fire was burning around a hole about thirty feet from the rear of the building which had been left for a passage-way, and was gaining much headway. The crowd of fighters worked faithfully, however, and with buckets of water, the flames were soon extinguished, with but little damage being done. It is not known how the building caught on fire; some holding to the belief that it was caused from combustion, and others are of the opinion that it was the work of an incendiary.

Mr. Roper is to be congratulated by the citizens for his strict attention to duty, for if he had not been "on the job," this fire would no doubt have resulted seriously.

ETOWAH WILL VOTE ON $300,000 GOOD ROADS BOND ISSUE

Gadsden, Ala., May 30, 1914.

Resolutions calling upon the county commissioners to call an election at an early date on the question of issuing $300,000 in good roads bonds was passed at a mass convention of Etowah farmers and business men this morning at the courthouse. Dr. C. L. Guice acted as chairman. A committee, consisting of O. R. Hood, R. E. Downs and J. A. McCluney was named to organize the beats of the county for a campaign. John Craft, president of the Alabama Good Roads Association, delivered an address. Short speeches were given by Col. R. B. Kyle, J. A. McCluney, J. A. Smith, Commissioner-elect Cornelius, R. A. HIGH SCHOOL COMMISSION VISITS CLANTON

Hon. C. Brooks Smith, State Auditor, and Hon. Wm. F. Feagan, State Superintendent of Education, members of the State High School Commission, at the solicitation of a large number of Clanton citizens, came to Chilton county last Friday to inspect the different sites offered for the location of the County High School.

The Board arrived in Clanton on the 10:26 train, and were met at the station by a large crowd of Clantonians, including many school children, and were driven in automobiles for an inspection of the three sites offered for the school—the Dr. Hayes site on the west side, the P. D. Wilson site on the north side, and the Gowan site on the east side.

After the inspection; a meeting was held at the Court House, at which Clanton's claims were presented in strong terms, and the Commission was assured that the $18,000.00 was in hand with which to purchase the site and erect the buildings.

While members of the Board did not express themselves, it is believed they were very much impressed with what Clanton has to offer, and it is confidentially believed that the school will be located here.

The Commission was driven to Jemison for dinner, and an investigation of Jemison's claims was made in the afternoon.

It is expected that a decision will be made by the Board Friday or Saturday of this week as to where the school will be located.

MONTHLY REPORT OF COUNTY NURSE

Miss Harlan, the County Nurse, has submitted her report to the Chilton County Health Committee for the month ending May 31st.

For the two months of April and May the report is as follows:

SAME OLD MOSES HAS ANOTHER SAY

Editor Press:—A friend called my attention to another slanderous false article in the Union-Banner, signed "A Voter." I am like the fellow the mule kicked, I would give him h—l, but I just consider the source it came from. Of course he is like a cat fish—all mouth and no brains, and I shall not combat with a man that hides behind a bush. I now wash my hands of any such dirty politics as he has raised. I only want to say this to the conservative voters: that if a man writes a letter that tends to enlighten the uneducated people, same cannot will or can write a strife-raising article to raise all the prejudice he can in order to hold the uneducated back instead of trying to enlighten them, and hide himself under a fictitious name.

Now, "A Voter," you seem to think I can be [illegible] you take it.

Now, this is the last article the people will see from me in answer to anything else that the strife-raising dirty coward should say about me. If he wants to keep up strife and his gang want to act the dunky and ride the false political prophets into Jerusalem on their backs, it is alright with me.

So I now ask the people to excuse me for entering into a combat with such a dirty politician. I repeat that I shall not reply to anything else he should say; so he can howl as much as he pleases, the people will bury "A Voter" and his kind November 3.

SAME OLD MOSES.

THE WORLD'S GREATEST SUNDAY SCHOOL CONVENTION

WILL MEET IN CHICAGO JUNE 23-30, 1914.

The Fourteenth International Sunday School Convention, which meets in Chicago June 23-30, is the largest Sunday School Convention in the world, even outranking in point of numbers the World's Convention. Fully forty-four hundred delegates are expected. Ten simultaneous sessions will be held in different parts of the city. The devotional hour will be in charge of Dr. F. B. Meyer, of London, England. The singing will be led by Prof. E. O. Excell, of Chicago, who is well known to Sunday School Convention goers throughout North America. Special conferences will be held on each of thirty departments and phases of modern Sunday School work.

Each state is entitled to a limited number of delegates. Only registered delegates will be admitted to the Convention hall. Fifty-five regular delegates have already been elected from Alabama, and there are only a few vacancies left. Anyone wishing to attend the Convention as a delegate from Alabama, should immediately notify the General Secretary of the Alabama Sunday School Association, Leon C. Palmer, 525-527, Bell Bldg., Montgomery, Alabama, in order that his or her name may be placed before the State Executive Committee for election without delay.

The Alabama delegation, together with the Florida delegation, has chartered a special train which will start from the Terminal station, Birmingham, over the Illinois Central Railroad, at 1:00 p.m. Monday, June 22. Only the Sunday School delegates will be on this train. The round trip fare from Birmingham to Chicago and return is $23.45. Information regarding railroad fares from other points will be furnished by General Secretary Palmer, on request.

LEON C. PALMER.

HIS OPINION

The controversy now going on between "A Voter" and "The Same Old Moses" does not amount to anything, so far as the success of either the democratic or progressive party is concerned. At least it seems that way to this writer. So far as the campaign is concerned it matters little, as it is a matter of fact well known to all who know anything of the political history of the county that the democratic majority will be overwhelming, and [illegible] to any opposition.

When [illegible]

Probate Judge

or p[illegible] servitude. So you see it is a matter of compulsion on the part of the president—it is not his will, but that of the law. I might add for "A Voter's" special benefit that the republican party wrote the 14th and 15th Amendments to the Constitution, and it was done over the protest of "A Voter's" father no doubt, for I am sure he was a Confederate soldier.

Gentlemen, drop the subject; it only continues strife, and is not necessary for the success of either party. Can't you find something else to talk about?

I notice that cotton, under these bad, bad Democratic times, has reached the low level of 14 cents.

Yours for the right thing for all the people in Chilton county,

A COUNTY DEMOCRAT.

CARD OF THANKS

We wish to express our thankfulness and appreciation for the many kindnesses shown to us during the illness and death of our dear mother, Mrs. Mary Jane Nix.

Mr. and Mrs J. T. Nix,
Mr. and Mrs. Lee Palmer,
Mr. and Mrs. Durwood Jones,

Mr. Charley Nix.

IN MEMORY

On Wednesday afternoon, May 27, the death angel visited the home of Mrs. Mary Jane Nix and bore her soul to realms above. She was the widow of Mr. James Nix, who died the 6th of August, 1912. She was pure, refined, unassuming, gentle and patient; she was all a woman could be; one of the most noble women we ever knew; words are inadequate to paint the picture of her noble life. "She hath done what she could;" "but yesterday she lived and moved and loved, today she slumbers 'neath the sod, awaiting the dawning of the resurrection morn."

She leaves three sons and two daughters, a host of relatives and friends to mourn her loss.

Dear weeping ones, we have nothing of this world's consolation to offer you; we do not feel that we could speak any word that would ease your aching hearts or fill the vacancy of this dear one; we can only deeply, sincerely and most affectionately sympathise with you in your bereavement, for we know she is resting with the angels.

MRS. LYON'S ACHES AND PAINS

Have All Gone Since Taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Terre Hill, Pa.—"Kindly permit me to give you my testimonial in favor of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. When I first began taking it I was suffering from female troubles for some time and had almost all kinds of aches—pains in lower part of back and in sides, and pressing down pains. I could not sleep and had no appetite. Since I have taken Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound the aches and pains are all gone and I feel like a new woman. I cannot praise your medicine too highly."—Mrs. AUGUSTUS LYON, Terre Hill, Pa.

It is true that nature and a woman's work has produced the grandest remedy for woman's ills that the world has ever known. From the roots and herbs of the field, Lydia E. Pinkham, forty years ago, gave to womankind a remedy for their peculiar ills which has proved more efficacious than any other combination of drugs ever compounded, and today Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound is recognized from coast to coast as the standard remedy for woman's ills.

In the Pinkham Laboratory at Lynn, Mass., are files containing hundreds of thousands of letters from women seeking health—many of them openly state over their own signatures that they have regained their health by taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound; and in some cases that it has saved them from surgical operations.

UNIVERSITY HAS GOOD YEAR.

Catalogue Just Issued Shows Progress Along All Lines.

University.—The general catalogue number of the University of Alabama bulletin has just come from the press and is being widely distributed in Alabama and other southern states. The catalogue shows that the session of 1913-14 which is just now drawing to a close has been the most successful in the history of the university.

The catalogue shows progress along all lines. There has been during the past year a large increase in the student body and a commensurate increase in the faculty and in the material equipment of the institution.

LACK OF MOISTURE HURTS CROP

According to Weather Bureau Rain Is Needed Over Cotton Belt.

Rain is greatly needed in Alabama, according to the summary which states that cool nights and dry weather have retarded the growth in this State and replanting is necessary.

The corn and oats of Alabama are in generally good condition, but need rain, and all truck is greatly needing rain. All crops are well cultivated and are being kept clean as the result of weather favorable to cultivation.

Mr. Speight is secretary of the judiciary committee of the House of Representatives. He has been with Congressman Clayton at Washington since he was 14 years old, and asked for the short term in order that he might round out his public career before beginning the practice of law in Alabama. He is about 26 years old.

CHANCELLOR ESPY GIVES UP OFFICE

SUBMITS RESIGNATION TO GOVERNOR BELIEVED W. R. CHAPMAN WILL BE APPOINTED.

STATE CAPITAL HAPPENINGS

Doings in and Around the State House Chronicled for Our Readers.

Montgomery.

Chancellor Thomas M. Espy of the Southeastern Chancery Division, resigned. His resignation was sent to Governor O'Neal and was announced by the Governor. It is probable that W. R. Chapman of Dothan, Democratic nominee for Chancellor, will be appointed as Chancellor Espy's successor.

No reason for Mr. Espy's resignation was made public, but it is understood that he has been in bad health recently and desires to get a rest from his official labors. Mr. Espy is from Dothan and prior to his appointment as Chancellor practiced law in that city. He was named as successor to Chancellor Lucien D. Gardner, who was appointed as Associate Justice of the Supreme Court to succeed Justice Anderson, when the latter was elevated to the position of Chief Justice, when Justice Dowdell resigned.

Governor O'Neal declared that he has not yet selected a successor to Mr. Espy, but it is likely that he will announce the appointment of Mr. Chapman this week. In the recent Democratic primary Mr. Chapman won out over J. A. Carnley of Elba, by the narrow margin of about 500 votes.

Whoever receives the appointment of Chancellor will serve until the next term begins some time next spring. This will be about eight months service. The Chancellor of the Southeastern Division receives a salary of $3,200 annually.

New Study Courses Completed.

New courses of study for the nine agricultural schools of the State were worked out by a special commission appointed for this purpose at the recent meeting of the State Agricultural School Boards. The new courses were completed and have been forwarded to text book publishing companies in order that the book companies may submit lists of their books to the State Superintendent of Education before June 15.

On June 15 a commission will meet to select uniform text books for the nine agricultural schools. The courses of study at all the schools will be the same under the new ruling.

Members of the commission who met were were Prof. J. F. Duggar and J. B. Hobdy, Auburn; J. S. Thomas, University; J. T. McKee, Evergreen; H. O. Sargent, Hamilton, and W. F. Feagin, State Superintendent of Education.

Allgood Demonstration Agent.

M. F. Allgood, recently nominated as Democratic candidate for State Auditor, was appointed farm demonstration agent for Limestone county. The appointment was made by Capt. R. F. Kolb, Commissioner of Agriculture. Mr. Allgood will serve as demonstration agent until his term as State Auditor begins next year.

In the recent primary Mr. Allgood defeated Judge W. F. Wilkinson, of Prattville. He is from Blount County but this makes no difference as far as the job of demonstration agent is concerned, as a man can be of one county and serve as the agent in any other county.

Illegal Collections Charged.

Charging John Lewis, Sheriff of Marshall County, with illegally collecting money on account of feed bills and fees from the State, Attorney General Brickell entered suit against the official and his bondsmen for $1,700 for breach of bond. T. L. Farrow, W. G. Henry, S. C. Copehart, M. M. Baker and H. D. Walls are named defendants with the sheriff.

Troy Seeks Rehearing of Case.

Daniel Troy, special counsel for the State, has filed an application for a rehearing in "the special counsel fee case," recently decided by the Supreme Court. In its decision the Supreme Court held that the law permitting the Governor to employ special counsel in certain litigation was unconstitutional.

About $40,000 in special counsel fees is involved in the case. Mr. Troy filed his application and expects a ruling on the case before the Summer adjournment of the court.

To Appeal Tax Cases.

The State Tax Commission will appeal to the Supreme Court from the decision rendered recently by the Bibb Circuit Court in the case wherein the Tax Commission sought to collect taxes by the leasehold interests of coal companies in Bibb County coal lands.

Practice Diversification.

Fifty farmers in sixteen automobiles made a tour of Sumter and Pickens counties for the purpose of inspecting agricultural conditions since the coming of the boll weevil to that territory and are optimistic over these conditions, according to a report filed yesterday with Capt. R. F. Kolb, Commissioner of Agriculture, by W. H. Storey, farm demonstration agent of Pickens county.

Mr. Storey made the trip with the farmers and in his report he declares that there is much more attention being paid by farmers to stock raising than has been paid in the past.

Following is the report of Mr. Storey:

"In response to your request, I submit the following report relative to the boll weevil condition at this time. I heard no reports o fthe appearance of the weevils in the fields. It is very probable, however, that they are now living on the buds of the earliest cotton. In a trip of more than 50 miles in sections of Sumter and Pickens counties in Alabama and Noxubee and Lowndes County, Mississippi, it was very noticeable that the area planted to cotton had been prepared well and this will tend to hasten the maturity of the crop.

"A considerable acreage has been planted to oats and the crop promises to be good. The corn acreage is large and the condition of the crop is promising. The alfalfa is good and one cutting has been saved. The weather has been fine and the hay harvested is of good quality and will command a fair price. There is an increasing interest in live stock. This section is naturally a stock and hay section. Mr. N. A. Negley, Bureau of Animal Industry, U. S. Department of Agriculture, made the trip and recommended the introduction of more pure bred sires and the raising of more live stock. There is some interest int he building of silos.

"One car of hogs was shipped from Cochrane last year and a fair profit realized. About 300 hogs were inoculated at Cochrane by Mr. F. D. Stevens, Mr. E. W. Baldwin, Mr. H. Hanson and myself, April 21-24. The percentage of deaths was low and the results promise to be satisfactory. We hope to be able to control the cholera by serum treatment and expect several cars of hogs to be shipped this year.

"About fifty farmers in sixteen automobiles made the trip. These farmers were well pleased and others who were unable to make the trip at this time wish to make a similar trip. After a date has been selected I shall be glad to notify you and have you present to give instructions to the farmers and stock raisers."

Many Seek Minor Legislative Jobs.

Active fights over minor legislative positions in the legislature of 1915 have already started, it is shown by letters and messages received by various members of the next legislature. One of the hardest fights will be that for clerk of the House which will be waged by W. F. Herbert, Demopolis, and John Adams, of Ozark. Mr. Herbert was clerk of the House in 1911 and assistant clerk in 1907. Mr. Adams was assistant clerk in 1911 and is now going after the clerkship.

For assistant clerk in 1915 there is only one outspoken candidate, this being Walter F. Miller, of Tuscumbia, editor of the Colbert County Reporter. Several others have declared their intention of offering for this position, but no one except Mr. Miller has made and active effort to obtain it.

J. A. Kyle, of Scottsboro, who has served as secretary of the Senate since the Legislature of 1903, is a candidate again for that position.

Other positions to be filled are those of Engrossing Clerk, Enrolling Clerk and Reading Clerk of each branch of the Legislature. Two doorkeepers and several assistant doorkeepers are to be named as well as a horde of committee clerks.

Clanton and Jemison Want School.

The state high school commission made a visit to Clanton and Jemison for the purpose of inspecting sites offered by those places for the Chilton county high school. The new county high school will open next session, and the work of constructing the building will begin just as soon as the site has been selected.

Both Clanton and Jemison are making urgent application for the high school, and both places have sent delegations to Montgomery to represent their interests.

Business for Bar Association.

When the State Bar Association meets here in annual session July 10 and 11 there will come up for consideration a large number of important recommendations affecting the legal profession of the State. It is reported that Chief Justice John C. Anderson of the supreme court will present to the association a number of important recommendations affecting judicial procedure in the State, though the subject matter of the recommendation has not yet been made public.

Regulars Ordered to Encampment.

Major General Scully has been advised by the Department of the East that a company of the Twenty-ninth Infantry of regulars, stationed at Governors Island, have been ordered to Montgomery for the maneuvers of the Alabama brigade of militia the latter part of July. General Scully expects more regulars to be ordered here. The Business Men's League is all inviting them to an effort to have one for entertainment coincide with the encampment of the Imperial Scully.

CONFIDENCE GAINING STRENGTH

Continuous Warm Weather Has Beneficial Effect on Commercial Lines.

New York. — Dun's review of trade says:

A period of continuous warm weather has had a beneficial effect upon practically all commercial lines and is tending to offset the earlier handicap of a backward spring.

The movement of seasonable goods, both at wholesale and retail, shows encouraging increase and most reports indicate that confidence is gaining strength. Low merchandise stocks at distributing centers, cheap money and the favorable crop outlook are chief factors operating to create more cheerful sentiment regarding the future.

As yet the usual statistical comparisons do not deflect the current business improvement, gross earnings of railroads making returns for three weeks of May 7.4 per cent. less than last year, while bank clearings this week were 5.8 per cent. smaller.

Failures this week numbered 332 in the United States, against 223 last year and 32 in Canada, compared with 34.

INCREASE APPROPRIATION.

Senate Committee Completes Work on Rivers and Harbors Bill.

Washington. — Work on the rivers and harbors bill was completed by the Senate commerce committee and the measure will be reported this week, carrying appropriations aggregating $53,500,000. This is an increase of about $10,000,000 over the total of the House bill and of $1,094,000 over last year's total.

The Senate committee cut out several small amounts in the House bill and reduced others, but added many new ones. The new appropriations proposed include $50,000 for the intercoastal waterway between Pensacola and Mobile; $100,000 intercoastal waterway from Mississippi river to Bayou Teche; $125,000, Red River; $400,000 San Juan harbor, Porto Rico.

The committee increased the following House items: Black Warrior river (Alabama), to $350,000; Ouichita river, Arkansas, to $664,000; Chesapeake and Delaware canal, to $2,235,000; Tennessee river to $936,000; Mississippi river to $8,000,000; Delaware river to $2,000,000.

NEWS BREVITIES.

New Orleans. — The navy tug Patuxent arrived at quarantine from Vera Cruz with 31 American refugees from Mexico aboard.

Jackson, Miss. — Louella Stevens, arrested in connection with the sudden death here of Leslie Humphries, chief of police of Jackson, was released later in the day and her father, H. C. Stevens, placed in jail as a material witness. He was detained only a few hours.

RINGWORM ITCHED TERRIBLY

1545 Aisquith St., Baltimore, Md.—"My children were afflicted with what they called ringworm of the scalp contracted from a house-cat they were playing with. The ringworm formed on their scalps about the size of a silver dollar and their hair fell out, leaving a round scale or crust on their scalps. Their hair fell out in round spots. There was terrible itching, and they scratched till the blood came. They were very fretful and could not sleep at night, and they were very cross.

"They were treated for several months with no improvement whatsoever. I was told they would never have any hair and would always be bald. Then I began using Cuticura Soap in connection with Cuticura Ointment and the first week I could see the wonderful remedies were doing all they were claimed to do and in six weeks' time they were entirely cured. They all have a beautiful growth of hair." (Signed) Mrs. Sadie Pollock, Jan. 1, 1913.

"Pop," said Inquisitive Ignatz, "how fast can a horse go?"

FORCED TO EAT CRUSHED ICE

And Was Not Even Allowed Privilege of Sitting Up, but Finally Wins Out.

Kaplan, La.—Mrs. Casamear Burkhart, of this town, gives out following for publication: "I feel that I owe my life to Cardui, the woman's tonic. I was married last April, and was in fairly good health. Shortly after marriage my health began to fail, and for three long months I was threatened with serious sickness.

I passed most of my time in bed, with a nurse at my bedside. At last, I was told an operation was necessary. I was so weak I could retain nothing on my stomach but crushed ice, and was not even allowed to sit up in bed.

A friend of mine advised me to use Cardui, the woman's tonic, and they got a bottle for me, as a last resort.

After taking Cardui for one week, I was able to be up in my room. After continual use for two months, I was in perfect health, and could do all of my work without tiring.

I take an occasional dose of Cardui and Black-Draught now, to keep my system in good condition.

Several of my friends are using Cardui with good results. I am never without it in the house."

There's a bottle of Cardui waiting for you at your nearest druggists. Get it and begin taking today. You will never regret it.—Adv.

Doves on Gun of Death Ship.

While the Montana was steaming slowly northward through the fog a white dove, the omen of peace, blown apparently from the Virginia shore, alighted on a ten-inch gun on the deck of the cruiser. More than 100 bluejackets on the Montana, their terms having expired, are glad to be home. A little yellow swallow, blown to sea near Cuba, remained on one of the cruisers all the way to Vera Cruz and is still on the deck of the warship.—New York Correspondence Philadelphia Times.

Entered at the Post Office at Clanton, Ala., as second-class mail matter under act of Congress, March 3rd, 1879.

The weather man says that last Saturday was the hottest day for May that has been recorded in Alabama for forty years. He also states that last month was the dryest May on record. The weather is too warm for us to look up data on this subject, and so far as we are concerned his claims may go undisputed.

While the fire in the Johnson building last Friday night was extinguished with but little damage being done, it demonstrates the great need of means to cope with this great destroyer, fire. With the advent of water works, it is to be hoped our people will bestir themselves and organize a volunteer fire department. Clanton has had experience with serious conflagrations in the past, and with a well-organized hook and ladder company and a few feet of hose a repitition of these disastrous fires would be greatly minimized.

Much progress is being made in road building all over the country. Lowndes county has recently voted a bond issue to improve her highways. At Gadsden last Saturday ringing resolutions were adopted at a mass meeting, calling upon the Commissioners' Court to order an election to vote on a bond issue for $300,000 to build roads. The spirit of road improvement by the issuance of bonds is becoming more popular day by day; the people are being awakened as never before to the great need of better highways as a means of bettering their condition and they are coming to realize that to float bonds is the only feasible plan by which these much desired highways can be obtained.

There are few counties in Alabama more favorably blessed with material to construct roads. We have an abundance of rock and gravel, and our highways could be built at half the cost of a great many other counties not so well favored.

We believe that the people of Chilton are open to conviction on this subject; that when they see the fruits of the Birmingham-Montgomery Highway, they will fully realize the great importance of better highways and that a bond issue is the proper way to get them.

COUNTY COURT

There was not much doing at the June term of County Court on Monday. Judge Deason dispatched the business of the Court in short order, the docket being finished before the noon hour. The following cases were tried:

Savannah Brown, violating prohibition law; fine $50 and costs; defendant appeals, bond fixed at $300.

Will Davis, violating prohibition law; fine $100 and costs.

WALT MASON ON FLIES

The early fly's the one to swat. It comes before the weather is hot, and sits around and files its legs, and lays at least ten million eggs, and every egg will bring a fly to drive us crazy by and by. Oh, every fly that skips our swatters will have five million sons and daughters, and countless first and second cousins, and aunts and uncles, scores of dozens, and fifty-seven billion nieces; so knock the blamed thing all to pieces. And every niece and every aunt,—unless we swat them so they can't—will lay enough dodgasted eggs to fill up ten five-gallon kegs, and all these eggs, ere summer hies, will bring forth twenty trillion flies. And thus it goes, an endless chain, so all our swatting is in vain, unless we do that swatting soon, in Maytime and in early June. So men and brothers, let us rise, gird up our loins and swat the flies! And sisters, leave your cozy bowers, where you have wasted golden hours; with ardor in your souls and eyes, roll up your sleeves and swat the flies.

LONG RECORD OF ANARCHY

History of the Island of Haiti One Continuous Recital of Revolt and Assassination.

The republic of Haiti, the western end of the island Columbus called "Little Spain," was the earliest example of a nominal constitutional government carried on by black men.

Columbus found 2,000,000 friendly Indians on the island. Slavery killed them off and negroes from Africa multiplied in their stead. Of these, 1,500,000 descendants now live in Haiti. Nearly all are pure black; the mulattoes diminish in number. The whites were massacred or driven away in the revolutionary wars.

The present republic had belonged to France a century when the French revolution began. Slavery was then abolished, a black rebellion took place, and the British invaded the island; but Toussaint l'Ouverture, a black George Washington, drove them out and set up a constitution. Napoleon sent his brother-in-law, Gen. Leclerc (pretty Polly Bonaparte's husband), to subdue the blacks. He made peace with Toussaint, seized him treacherously, and sent him to Paris. But the same year, 1803, that Toussaint died in prison there the French fled from the island. Its people were thus the first to get the better of Napoleon, four years before the reverses in Spain, nine years before Moscow. Leclerc had died in 1802.

The Spanish portion of the island broke loose from Spain and was joined to Haiti, but was separated in 1844 as the republic of Santo Domingo.

This is the record of the Haitian chief executives: Dessalines, governor for life, assassinated, 1806; Henri Christophe, king, suicide, 1820; Boyer, president, expelled, 1843; Soulouque, "Emperor Faustin I," exiled, 1858; Geffard, president, exiled, 1867; Salnave, shot, 1869; Nissage-Saget, exiled, 1870; Dominique, exiled, 1871.

"Are you strong?" he demanded sternly.

For answer the young man picked up a heavy oak chair with two fingers.

"Ah!" said the magnate. "And they is your heart?"

Immediately after the marriage the happy couple left for Mississippi, to be gone a week, after which they will return to Plantersville to visit his parents and sister, Mrs. C. C. Gay, after which they will return to Mississippi or Georgia to make their future home. Their many friends wish for them a long, happy and prosperous life, and just cloud enough to make a golden sun set.

Iowa Man Stuck With Pitchfork.

A farmer living in the northern part of Iowa stuck himself in the leg with a pitchfork. The wound would not heal and he had a running-sore for two years. He tried all the common salves and liniments and sometimes the sore would heal, but it always broke open again. Finally he healed it up to stay healed with Allan's Ulcerine Salve.

This salve is one of the oldest remedies in America and since 1869 it has been known as the only salve powerful enough to cure chronic ulcers and old sores of long standing.

Allan's Ulcerine Salve acts by drawing out the poisons and healing the sore from the bottom up. It is so powerful that it heals new cuts and sores in one third the time that common salves and liniments take. And it heals burns and scalds without a scar. Sold by Upchurch Drug Co., and other leading druggists.

Can't Keep It Secret.

The splendid work of Chamberlain's Tablets is daily becoming more widely known. No such grand remedy for stomach and liver troubles has ever been known. For sale by Alred Drug Co.

Take Plenty of Time to Eat.

There is a saying that "rapid eating is slow suicide." If you have formed the habit of eating too rapidly you are most likely suffering from indigestion or constipation, which will result seriously eventually unless corrected. Digestion begins in the mouth. Food should be thoroughly masticated and insalivated. Then when you have a fulness of the stomach or feel dull and torpid after eating, take one of Chamberlain's tablets. Many severe cases of stomach trouble have been cured by the use of these tablets. They are easy to take and most agreeable in effect. Sold by Alred Drug Co.

LOST OCEAN LINER EMPRESS OF IRELAND

964 PERISH IN SEA DISASTER

Great Liner Goes to Bottom at Mouth of St. Lawrence River Following a Collision With a Collier.

Rimouski, Que., May 31.—Nine hundred and sixty-four persons lost their lives Friday morning when the great Canadian Pacific twin screw liner Empress of Ireland was rammed amidships in a thick fog off Father Point in the St. Lawrence and sunk by the Norwegian collier Storstad.

Four hundred and three survivors were picked up from floating wreckage and two lifeboats.

And only 12 of the saved are women.

Gathered piecemeal from survivors the horror of this wreck grows with the telling.

Waters Quickly Engulf Ship.

The doomed ones had little time even to pray. They were engulfed by the onrushing waters that swallowed the big ship inside of nineteen minutes from the time she was struck.

The wireless operators on the Empress, sticking to their posts to the last, had time only to send a few "S. O. S." calls for help when the rising waters silenced their instruments. That silence told the rescuers miles away more potently than a bugle that doom had overtaken the ship.

Only six hours before this fateful collision the passengers sang as a good-night hymn "God Be With You Till We Meet Again," played by the Salvation Army band on board.

The members of that band and most of the 165 Salvationists were among the lost.

Survivors Tell of Fog.

It was foggy, according to survivors, when the Empress of Ireland, a steel-hulled, steel-bulkheaded ship of more than eight thousand tons, left Montreal at 4:30 Thursday afternoon in command of H. G. Kendall of the Royal Naval Reserve, one of the most skilled of transatlantic navigators.

Forest fires also obscured the atmosphere and the big ship, in charge of a pilot, proceeded slowly on her way to sea. At midnight the pilot side left near Father Point, shouting a merry "Bon Voyage" as he went down their ladder to his waiting boat.

The darkness at this time was intense and the ship under the slowest speed possible with steerageway held her course. Her decks were deserted. The passengers had all sought their berths with no thought of impending death.

Out of the darkness, on the port side, soon after 2:30 in the morning there loomed the little Norwegian collier, not half the size of the Empress, but fated to be her destroyer.

Not until the collier was almost abeam of the big liner was the danger known on either ship. The fog had blotted out the lights as well as the port and starboard lights of both ships.

Quick orders trumpted on both vessels were heard. But they came all too late.

Strikes Ship Amidship.

The steel-pointed prow of the Storstad struck the liner amidships and then forged aft, ripping and tearing its way through the Empress of Ireland.

Clear to the stern of the Empress of Ireland was this great steel shaving cut from her side, from the top of the hull far below the water line. Into that rent the water poured with the force of a Niagara.

The bow of the Storstad smashed its way through berths on that side of the ship, killing passengers sleeping in their berths and grinding bodies to pieces.

Reaching the stern of the big liner, the Storstad staggered off in the darkness, her bow crumpled by the impact. Her commander was ready a few minutes later, when he found his ship would float, to aid the crippled and sinking Empress, but he was too late to save the majority of those on board.

Carried to Bottom.

The Empress of Ireland recoiled almost on her starboard beam ends from the blow of the collier and passengers were flung from their berths against the walls of their staterooms.

Many were stunned and before they had time to recover were carried to the bottom with the ship.

The vast torrents pouring into the great gash on the port side, aft, filled the corridors and flooded every stateroom abaft the midship section inside of four minutes.

There was never a chance for the helpless ones in the after cabins and staterooms of the liner. With her port side laid open for half its length from the midship section to the stern, a seive had more chance to float than the Empress of Ireland, and the trapped passengers in that after section were doomed from the moment the Storstad struck.

Reeling from the blow the ship began to settle almost immediately as the water rushed into the big rent.

From the forward cabins, however, men and women in night attire stumbled along the corridors and up the companion way to the promenade deck —the deck below, the one on which the boats rested.

Swarm to Deck.

Up they swarmed on deck in their night clothing to find the ship heeling away to port and the deck slanting at a degree that made it almost impossible to stand even clinging to railings.

Men and women, shrieking, praying, crying for aid that was fated to arrive too late, fell over one another in that last struggle for life on board the doomed Empress of Ireland.

Frenzied mothers leaped overboard with their babies in their arms. Others knelt on deck and tried to pray in the few moment left to them. Some were flung overboard by the heeling of the sinking ship and some broke their legs or arms in trying to reach the lifeboats.

Above the din of the struggle on the great promenade deck could be heard Captain Kendall shouting commands for the launching of the lifeboats. Several were launched in the 19 minutes that the ship floated.

There was no time to observe the rule "Women first" in this disaster, for those nearest the boats scrambled to places in them.

But even as they were being launched, while the wireless still was calling "S. O. S." there came a terrific explosion that almost rent the ship in twain.

It was the explosion of the boilers struck by the cold water. A geyser of water shot upward from the midship section, mingled with fragments of wreckage, that showered down upon the passengers still clinging to the rails forward and upon those struggling in the water.

The explosion destroyed the last hope of the ship's floating until succor could arrive, for the shock had smashed the forward steel bulkhead walls that had up to then shut out the torrents invading the after part. The water rushed forward and the Empress of Ireland went swiftly to her doom, carrying down with her hundreds of passengers who stood on her slanting deck, their arms stretched upward and their last cries choked in the engulfing waters.

One of the survivors, relating that last tragic scene on the decks of the liner, said:

"I was asleep like most of the passengers when the collision came. There was a sickening crunching of wood and steel and then a grinding, ripping sound as the Storstad smashed her way along the port side of our ship.

"I knew that we had been struck and I rushed to the staterooms of some friends and shouted to them to get up, as the ship was sinking. Stateroom doors flew open all along the corridor and men and women began to rush for the grand companion forward. Those aft must have been drowned in their berths.

Darkness Is Intense.

"On deck officers of the ship, partially dressed, were rushing about urging passengers to be calm. Sailors under orders were trying to launch the lifeboats.

"The darkness was intense and a few minutes after I reached the deck the electric lights went out. At that time there were still hundreds of passengers below trying to grope their way through the darkened corridors to the companionway and reach the deck. Most of them went down with the ship, for the corridors below filled right after the explosion of the boilers.

"I leaped overboard in despair just before the ship went down and managed to find a bit of wreckage to which I clung."

Intense darkness covered the waters when the Empress of Ireland made that final plunge, but the fog lifted a few minutes later and then came the first faint streaks of dawn.

It lighted waters strewed with wreckage and struggling passengers, who strove to keep afloat.

The crippled Storstad, which had wrought this tragedy of the waters, had lifeboats out picking up as many survivors as possible.

The gray dawn revealed the government steamers Lady Evelyn and Eureka near the scene of the disaster and hastening to aid.

Some of those in the water tried to swim to the Eureka as she neared the point where the Empress had gone down. One woman, wearing only an undervest, swam to the Lady Evelyn and was helped on board, but died of exhaustion soon afterwards.

The work of rescue still was going on when the sun arose in a cloudless sky.

Men and women were singing hymns and bits of broken psalms. Many of the survivors were injured. Some had broken legs, others fractured arms and still others had been injured internally in their wild rush to get away from the sinking ship.

Women clinging to the keel of little boats, while [illegible] tried to keep them [illegible] age, were picked up by the lifeboats and carried on board the rescuing vessels.

Captain Kendall, dazed and unable to give any coherent account of the loss of his ship, was found clinging to a broken spar.

J. W. Langley, rancher, of Canford, B. C., went down with the ship, but held his breath, and, coming to the surface, found a piece of wreckage and clung to it until picked up.

One of the survivors, in explaining the quickness with which the Empress of Ireland went down, said:

"The collier, being only something over 3,000 tons, did not reach up even to the upper or topmost deck of our hull. Her bow cut under the upper deck and took a peeling off the side of our ship that allowed the water to rush into the lower decks. Then the liner heeled over, and even those in the superstructure deck rooms had no chance to save themselves. Hundreds of them must have been dumped out of their berths and slammed against the walls with stunning force."

Scenes on Shore.

Father Point, Que., May 29.—"The Empress of Ireland passed and landed her pilot here at 1:30 this morning," said an official of the Canadian Pacific. "There was a haze at the time. At 1:50 a. m. I was awakened by an "S. O. S." ring on my door bell and, rushing down, was informed by a Marconi operator that the Empress of Ireland was sinking, having been struck by some vessel. In undress I started to help. No other signal could be got from the doomed vessel. She had no time to give another, as she sank ten minutes after being struck.

"Mr. Whiteside, manager of the Marconi station, rendered effective service by notifying the government steamer Eureka, at Father Point wharf, and the Lady Evelyn at Ramouski wharf.

Help Rushed to Scene.

"Capt. J. B. Belanger of the Eureka immediately rushed to the scene and Captain Pouliot, with the Lady Evelyn, followed later, his ship being three miles farther away.

"Meanwhile daylight broke and scanning the horizon with a telescope I saw the two government steamers, nine lifeboats and a collier in the vicinity, going here and there. Later the Eureka arrived at Father Point wharf with 32 survivors and several poor drowned bodies, also several of the survivors who had been wounded.

Agent in Narrow Escape.

"The scene on the Eureka was most distressing, the survivors walking around their dead shipmates, stretched out in their last sleep. The Eureka was sent to Remouski wharf with all on board, and the Canadian Pacific agent, Mr. Webber, who was here, having just got off the ill-fated vessel with the pilot, engaged all the cabs he could find and telephoned for all possible medical assistance. As the company's agent here, I advised all the survivors that their cables and telegrams to their families would be paid by the Canadian Pacific railroad.

"The Lady Evelyn passed into Remouski wharf about 4 a. m. with some more survivors and bodies. Among the survivors was Captain Kendall, commander of the ill-fated ship, who was picked up by a lifeboat from the wreckage after the ship had gone down.

Survivors Almost Naked.

"Most of the survivors were almost naked in the cold morning, with the temperature at 35 degrees and white frost on the ground.

"At 6:10 the Norwegian collier Storstad, coal laden, from Sydney, N. S., for Montreal, came along slowly. When her bow had been smashed in it became known that she was the vessel that had struck the Empress of Ireland the fatal blow. The Storstad was too much damaged to allow her to proceed to Quebec under her own steam, but before proceeding she landed a few survivors and some dead bodies, which were taken off by the steamer Eureka and Lady Evelyn and landed on the Remouski wharf."

Sing "God Be With You," on Ship

Montreal, Que., May 30.—When the liner Empress of Ireland steamed away from here Thursday, she carried 165 members of the Salvation Army from the United States and Canada, bound for the world convention in London. To the accompaniment of the army band, they were singing, "God Be With You Till We Meet Again."

This prelude to the accident in the St. Lawrence made the disaster a near parallel to the sinking of the Titanic, whose passengers sang, "Nearer, My God, to Thee," as the White Star liner went down.

Irving, Actor and Author.

New York, May 31.—Laurence S. D. Irving, drowned on steamship Empress of Ireland, is an actor, author and manager. He received his education at Marlborough college, College Rollin, Paris, and spent three years in Russia studying for foreign office. His plays are widely known. In 1908 and 1909 he presented sketches of his own authorship in England and America. On May 3, 1910, Mr. Irving addressed the Equal Suffrage league at New York.

Scenes at Liverpool.

Liverpool, May 30.—Pathetic scenes were enacted at the office of the Canadian Pacific railway in this city Friday. Crowds of weeping men and women besieged the doors of the offices and stood outside the Empress of Ireland, the latest victim of the Atlantic, where confirmation of the disaster was received. Many of the crowd had relatives on board the ship, and their anxiety was painful to witness. Many of the women were in tears, while others, with blanched faces, stood in groups, [illegible] at the [illegible] to the [illegible]

Prior to April 20, 1914, Sixty-Six Had Been Killed as Direct Result of Strike.

Denver.—Settlement of the Colorado coal strike apparently is no nearer realization than it was weeks ago, according to statements by both union officials and mine operators. Sixty-six persons are known to have been killed, and 48 wounded in the numerous battles and outbreaks since the miners went on strike September 23, 1913. Classified, 18 strikers, 10 miner guards, 19 mine employes, two militiamen, 3 non-combatants, 3 women and 12 children lost their lives. Twenty had been killed prior to April 20, the date of the battle of Ludlow. Forty-six were killed during that fight and the next 10 days, when federal troops stopped the warfare.

The cost of the eight months industrial conflict is various estimated at from $10,000,000 to $12,000,000. The figures include $700,000 the state spent in maintaining state troops in the field until the arrival of the federal forces; an estimated cost of $6,925,000 to the union and a loss of "several millions" claimed by operators. At present 1,717 United States troops are guarding the mine properties.

Figures complied by James Dalrymple, state coal mine inspector, shows that there were employed in the Colorado coal mines for the first three months of 1914, an average of 10,149 miners as compared with 14,035 for the same period in 1913. The total production for the first three months of 1909 was 2,217,675 tons against 3,638,436 tons for the same period a year ago.

From the same source it was learned there were 12,346 men working in the mines last September, when the strike was called, 7,696 in October, the first full month following the strike and 10,146 in March, 1914. Against these figures stand the claims of John R. Lawson, member of the international executive board of the United Mine Workers of America, that approximately 11,000 men quit work in response to the strike call last September and that about 8,500 men still are on strike. He attributes the decrease to men leaving the state, adding that few have gone back to work, their loss being more than offset by those who have joined the strikers."

At headquarters of the operators this statement was given out: "It has been impossible to obtain an accurate census of the men on strike, but fair approximation places the number at 2,000 at this time. Many men counted as strikers never worked in the Colorado mines. Not all who went out last September struck. Estimates made by railroad agents and based on materials sold to miners and their families indicate that this number was between 1,500 and 2,000. The number of mines in operation now is 141 as compared with 148 last September."

The original demands of the United Mine Workers of America may be summarized as follows:

Recognition of the union; a 10 per cent advance in wages; an eight hour day pay for "narrow and dead" workings; check weighman; the right to trade where desired; enforcement of state mining laws and abolishment of the guard system.

"There has been no change in the nature of the demands," since the strike was called," said John R. Lawson, union leader. "I do not know of any prospects of a settlement. The miners never will go back to work without recognition of the union if they follow my advice."

"The right to organize, an eight-hour day, check weighmen, and the right to select trading and boarding places are state laws, but they are not enforced."

Holding that the chief demands of the United Mine Workers, with the exception of union recognition, are guaranteed by statute, the operators maintain their original position, namely: Refusal to treat with representatives of the United Mine Workers of America or recognize the union. They reiterate a willingness to meet employes for the adjustment of grievances.

The VALIANTS of VIRGINIA

By HALLIE ERMINIE RIVES

ILLUSTRATIONS by LAUREN STOUT

COPYRIGHT BY BOBBS-MERRILL COMPANY

SYNOPSIS.

John Valliant, a rich society favorite, suddenly discovers that the Valliant corporation, which his father founded and which was the principal source of his wealth, had failed. He voluntarily turns over his private fortune to the receiver for the corporation. His entire remaining possessions consist of an old motor car, a white bull dog and Damory court, a neglected estate in Virginia. On the way to Damory court he meets Shirley Dandridge, an auburn-haired beauty, and decides that he is going to like Virginia immensely. Shirley's mother, Mrs. Dandridge, and Major Bristow exchange reminiscences during which it is revealed that the major, Valliant's father, and a man named Sassoon were rivals for the hand of Mrs. Dandridge in her youth. Sassoon and Valliant fought a duel on her account in which the former was killed. Valliant finds Damory court overgrown with weeds and creepers and decides to rehabilitate the place. Valliant saves Shirley from the bite of a snake, which bites him. Knowing the deadliness of the bite, Shirley sucks the poison from the wound and saves his life. Valliant learns for the first time that his father left Virginia on account of a duel in which Doctor Southall and Major Bristow acted as his father's seconds. Valliant and Shirley become good friends. Mrs. Dandridge faints when she meets Valliant for the first time. Valliant discovers that he has a fortune in old walnut trees. The yearly tournament, a survival of the jousting of feudal times, is held at Damory court. At the last moment Valliant takes the place of one of the knights, who is sick, and enters the lists. He wins and chooses Shirley Dandridge as queen of beauty to the dismay of Katherine Fargo, a former sweetheart, who is visiting in Virginia. The tournament ball at Damory court draws the elite of the countryside. Shirley is crowned by Valliant as queen of beauty. Valliant tells Shirley of his love and they become engaged. Katherine Fargo, determining not to give up Valliant without a struggle, points out to Shirley how terrible it would be for the woman who caused the duel to meet Valliant, who looks so much like his father. Shirley, uncertain, but feeling that her mother was in love with the victim of Valliant's pistol, breaks the engagement.

CHAPTER XXIX.—Continued.

The inquiry was drowned in a shriek from several children in unison. They scrambled to their feet, casting fearful glances over their shoulders. The man who had been lying behind the bush had risen and was coming toward them at a slouching amble, one foot dragging slightly. His appearance, indeed, was enough to cause panic. With his savage face, set now in a grin, and his tramp-like costume, he looked fierce and animal-like. White and black, the children fled like startled rabbits, older ones dragging younger, without a backward look—all save Rickey, who stood quite still, her widening eyes fixed on him in a kind of blanched fascinated terror.

He came close to her, never taking his eyes from hers, then put his heavy grimy hand under her chin and turned her twitching face upward, chuckling.

"Ain't afeard, d——n me!" he said with admiration. "Wouldn't skedaddle with th' fine folks' white-livered young 'uns! Know who I am, don't ye?"

"Greef King." Rickey's lips rather formed than spoke the name.

"Right. An' I know you, too. Got jes' th' same look ez when ye wuzn't no higher'n my knee. So ye ain't at th' Dome no mo', eh? Purkle an' fine linning an' a eddication. Ho-ho! Goin' ter make ye another ladyess like the sweet ducky-dovey that rescooed ye from th' lovin' embrace o' yer fond step-parient, eh?"

Rickey's small arm went suddenly out and her fingers tore at his shirt-band. "Don't you," she burst in a paroxysm of passion; "don't you even speak her name! If you do, I'll kill you!"

So fierce was her leap that he fell back a step in sheer surprise. Then he laughed loudly. "Why, ye little spittin' wile-cat!" he grinned.

He leaned suddenly, gripped her wrist and covering her mouth tightly with his palm, dragged her behind a clump of dogwood bushes. A heavy step was coming along the wood-path. He held her motionless and breathless in this cruel grip till the pedestrian had passed. It was Major Bristow, his spruce white hat on the back of his head, his unsullied waistcoat dappled with the leaf-shadows. He stepped out briskly toward Damory court, swinging his stick, all unconscious of the fierce scrutiny bent on him from behind the dogwoods.

Greef King did not withdraw his hand till the steps had died in the distance. When he did, he clenched his fist and shook it in the air. "There he goes!" he said with bitter hatred. "Yer noble friend that sent me up for six years t' break my heart on th' rock-pile! Oh, he's a top-notcher, he is! But he's got Greef King to reckon with yit!" He looked at her balefully and shook her.

"Look-a-yere," he said in a hissing voice. "Ye remember me. I'm a bad one ter fool with. Yer maw foun' that out, I reckon. Now ye'll promise me ye'll tell nobody who ye've seen. I'm only a tramp; d'ye hear!" He shook her roughly.

Rickey's fingers and teeth were clenched hard and she said no word. He shook her again viciously, the blood pouring into his scarred face. "Ye snivelin' brat, ye!" he snarled. "I'll show yer!" He began to drag her after him through the bushes. A few yards and they were on the brink of the headlong ugly chasm of Lovers' Leap. She cast one desperate look about her and shut her eyes. Catching her about the waist he leaned over and held her out in mid-air, as if she had been a kitten. "Ye ain't seen me, hev yer? Promise, or over ye go. Ye won't look so pretty when ye're layin' down there on them rocks!"

The child's face was paper-white and she had begun to tremble like a leaf, but her eyes remained closed.

"One—two—" he counted deliberately.

Her eyes opened. She turned one shuddering glance below, then her resolution broke. She clutched his arm and broke into wild supplications. "I promise, I promise!" she cried. "Oh, don't let go! I promise!"

He set her on the solid ground and released her, looking at her with a sneering laugh. "Now we'll see ef ye belong here or up ter Hell's-Half-Acre," he said. "Fine folks keeps their promises, I've heerd tell."

Rickey looked at him a moment shaking; then she burst into a passion of sobs and with her face averted ran from him like a deer through the bushes.

CHAPTER XXX.

In the Rain.

Shirley stood looking out at the rain. It was falling in no steady downpour which held forth promise of ending, but with a gentle constancy that gave the hills a look of sudden discomfort and made disconsolate miry pools by the roadside. The clouds were not too thick, however, to let through a dismal gray brightness that shone on the foliage and touched with glistening lines of high-light the draggled tufts of the soaked blue-grass. Now and then, across the dripping fields, fraying skeins of mist wandered, to lie curdled in the flooded hollows where, here and there, cattle stood lowing at intervals in a mournful key.

The indoors had become impossible to her. She was sick of trying to read, sick of the endless pacings and purposeless invention of needless tasks. She wanted movement, the cobwebby mist about her knees, the wet rain in her face. She ran upstairs and came down clad in a close scarlet jersey, with leather gaiters and a soft hat.

Emmaline saw her thus accoutered with disapproval. "Lawdy-mercy, chile!" she urged; "you ain't goin' out? It's rainin' cats en dawgs!"

"I'm neither sugar nor salt, Emmaline," responded Shirley listlessly, dragging on her rain-coat, "and the walk will do me good."

On the sopping lawn she glanced up at her mother's window. Since the night of the ball her own panging self-consciousness had overlaid the fine and sensitive association between them. She had been full of horrible feeling that her face must betray her and the cause of her loss of spirits be guessed.

Her mother, had, in fact, been troubled by this, but was far from guessing the truth. A somewhat long indisposition had followed her first sight of Valliant, and she had not witnessed the tournament. She had hung upon Shirley's description of it, however, with an excited interest that the other was later to translate in the light of her own discovery. If the thought had flitted to her that fate might hold something deeper than friendship in Shirley's acquaintance with Valliant, it had been of the vaguest. His choice of her as Queen of Beauty had seemed a natural homage to that swift and unflinching act of hers which had saved his life. There was in her mind a more obvious explanation of Shirley's altered demeanor. "Perhaps it's Chilly Lush," she had said to herself. "Have they had a foolish quarrel, I wonder? Ah, well, in her own time she will tell me."

* * * * * * *

There was some relief to Shirley's overcharged feelings in the very discomfort of the drenched weather: the sucking pull of the wet clay on her boots and the flirt of the drops on her cheeks and hair. She thrust her dog-skin gloves into her pocket and held her arms outstretched to let the wild blow through her fingers. The moisture clung in damp wreaths to her hair and rolled in great drops down her coat as she went.

The wildest, most secluded walks had always drawn her most and she had always chosen one of these today. Instinctively, chose one of these today. It was the road whereon squatted Matt Antbody's whitewashed cabin. "Dah's a man gwine look in dem eyes, sho', en gwine make 'em cry en cry." She had forgotten the incident of that day, when he had read her fortune, but now the quavering prophecy came back to her with a shivering sense of reality. "Fo' dah's fish en she ain' afeah'd, en dah's watah en she ain' afeah'd. Et's de thing whut eat de ha'at outen de breas'—dat whut she afeah'd of!" If it were only fire and water that threatened her!

She struck her hands together with an inarticulate cry. She remembered the laugh in Valliant's eyes as they had planted the roses, the characteristic gesture with which he tossed the waving hair from his forehead—how she had named the ducks and the peacock and chosen the spots for his flowers; and she smiled for such memories, even in the stabbing knowledge that these dear trivial things could mean nothing to her in the future. She tried to realize that he was gone from her life, that he was the one man on earth whom to marry would be to strike to the heart her love and loyalty to her mother, and she said this over and over to herself in varying phrases:

"Doesn't That Prove What I Say?" He Said, Bending Toward Her.

"You can't! No matter how much you love him, you can't! His father deliberately ruined your mother's life—your own mother! It's bad enough to love him—you can't help that. But you can help marrying him. You would hate yourself. You can never kiss him again, or feel his arms around you. You can't touch his hand. You mustn't even see him. Not if it breaks your heart—as your mother's heart was broken!"

She had turned into an unbeaten way that ambled from the road through a track of tall oaks and pines, scarce more than a bridle-path, winding aimlessly through bracken-strewn depths so dense that even the wild-roses had not found them. In her childish hurts she had always fled to the companionship of the trees. She had known them every one—the black-gum and pale dogwood and gnarled hickory, the prickly-balled "button-wood," the lowly mulberry and the majestic red oak and walnut. They had seemed friendly and pitying counselors, standing about her with arms intertwined. Now, with the rain weeping in soughing gusts through them, they offered her no comfort. She suddenly threw herself face down on the soaked moss.

"Oh, God!" she cried. "I love him so! And I had only that one evening. It doesn't seem just. If I could only have him, and suffer some other way! He's suffering, too, and it isn't our fault! We neither of us harmed anyone! He isn't responsible for what his father did—why, he hardly knew him! Oh, God, why must it be so hard for us? Millions of other people love each other and nothing separates them like this!"

Shirley's warm breath made a little fog against the star-eyed moss. She was scarcely conscious of her wet and clinging clothing, and the soaked strands of her hair. She was so wrapped in her desolation that she no longer heard the sound of the persevering rain and the wet swishing of the bushes—parting now to a hurried step that fell almost without sound on the spongy forest soil. She started up suddenly to see Valliant before her.

He was in a somewhat battered walking suit of brown khaki, with a leather belt and a felt hat whose brim, stiff with the wet, was curved down visor-wise over his brow. In an instant he had drawn her upright, and they stood, looking at each other, drenched and trembling.

"How can you!" he said with a roughness that squealed akin to anger. "Here in this atrocious weather—like this!" he laid a hand on her arm. "You're wet through!"

"I—I don't mind the rain," she answered, drawing away, shy, feeling with a guilty thrill the unseemliness of his tone, as well as its real concern. "I'm often wet."

His gaze searched her face, feature by feature, noting her pallor, the hollow black shadows beneath her eyes, the caught breath, uneven like a child's from crying. He took her hands in his.

"Shirley," he said, "I know what you intended to tell me by those flowers—I went to St. Andrew's that night, in the dark, after I read your letter. Who told you? Your—mother?"

"No, no!" she cried. "She would never have told me!"

His face lighted. With an irresistible movement he caught her to him. "Shirley!" he cried. "It shan't be! It shan't, I tell you! You can't break our lives in two like this! It's unthinkable."

"No, no!" she said piteously, pushing him from her. "You don't understand. You are a man, and men—can't."

"I do understand," he insisted. "Oh, my darling, my darling! It isn't right for that spectral thing to come between us! Why, it belonged to a past generation! However sad the outcome of that duel, it held no dishonor. I know only too well the ruin it brought my father! It's enough that it wrecked three lives. It shan't rise again, like Banquo's ghost to haunt ours! I know what you think—I would love you the more, if I could love you more, for that sweet loyalty—but it's wrong, dear. It's wrong!"

"It's the only way."

"Listen. Your mother loves you. If she knew you loved me, she would bear anything rather than have you suffer like this. You say she wouldn't have told you herself. Why, if my father—"

She tore her hands from his and faced him with a cry. "Ah, that is it! You knew your father so little. He was never to you what she is to me. Why, I've been all the life she has had. I remember when she mended my dolls, and held me when I had scarlet fever, and sang me the songs the trees sang to themselves at night. I said my prayers at her knee till I was twelve years old. We were never apart a day till I went away to school."

She paused, breathless.

"Doesn't that prove what I say?" he said, bending toward her. "She loves you far better than herself. She wants your happiness."

"Could that mean hers?" she demanded, her bosom heaving. To see us together — always — always! To be reminded in everything—the lines of your face—the tones of your voice, maybe—of that! Oh, you don't know how women feel—how they remember—how they grieve! I've gone over all you can say till my soul cries out, but it can't change it. It can't!

Valliant felt as though he were battering with bruised knuckles at a stone wall. A helpless anger simmered in him. "Suppose," he said bitterly, "that your mother one day, perhaps after long years, learns of your sacrifice. She is likely to guess in the end, I think. Will it add to her pleasure, do you fancy, to discover that out of this conception of filial loyalty—for it's that, I suppose!—you have spoiled your own life?"

She shuddered. "She will never learn," she said brokenly. "Oh, I know she would not have spoken. She would suffer anything for my happiness. But I wouldn't have her bear any more for my sake."

His anger faded suddenly, and when he looked at her again, tears were burning in his eyes.

"Shirley!" he said. "It's my heart, too, that you are binding on the wheel! I love you. I want nothing but you! I'd rather beg my bread from door to door with your hand in mine than sit on a throne without you! What can there be in life for me unless you share it? Think of our love! Think of the fate that brought me here to find you in Virginia! Think of our garden—where I thought we would live and work and dream, till we were old and gray—together, darling! Don't throw our love away like this!"

His entreaties left her only whiter, but unmoved. She shook her head, gazing at him through great clear tears that welled over and rolled down her cheeks.

"I can't fight," she said. "I have no strength left." She put out her hand as she spoke and dropped it with a little limp gesture that had in it tired despair, finality and hopelessness. It caught at his heart more strongly than any words. He felt a warm gush of pity and tenderness.

He took her hand gently without speaking, and pressed it hard against his lips. It seemed to him very small and cold.

They passed together through the wet bracken, his strong arm guiding her over the uneven path, and came to the open in silence.

"Don't come with me," she said then, and without a backward glance, went rapidly from him down the shimmering road.

CHAPTER XXXI.

The Evening of an Old Score.

Rat-tat-tat-tat-tat!—Major Bristow's ivory-headed camphor-wood stick thumped on the great door of Damory court. The sound had a tang of impatience, for he had used the knocker more than once without result. Now he strode to the end of the porch and raised his voice in a stentorian bellow that brought Uncle Jefferson shuffling around the path from the kitchens with all the whites of his eyes showing.

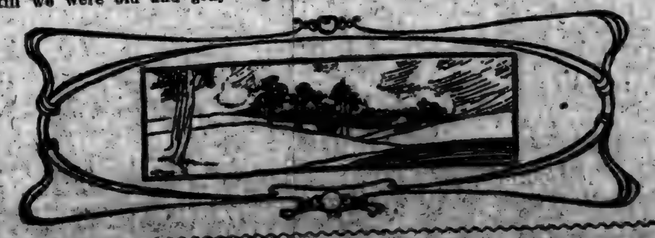
"You dog-gone lazy rascal!" thundered the major. "What do you mean, sah, by keeping a gentleman cooling his heels on the door-step like a tax-collector? Where's your master?"

"Fo' de Lawd, Major, Ah ain' seen Mars' John sence dis mawnin'. Staht out aftah breakfas' en he nevah showed up ergin et all. Yo' reck'n whut de mattah, suh?" he added anxiously. "'Peahs lak sumpin' preyin' on he mind. Don' seem er bit hese't lately."

"H-m-m!" The major looked thoughtful. "Isn't he well?"

"No, suh. Ain' et no mor'n er hummin-buhd dese las' few days. Jes' hangs eroun' lonesome lak. Don' laugh no mo', don' sing no mo'. Ain' play de pianny sence de day aftah de ball. Me en Daph moght'ly pestered 'bout him."

"Pshaw!" said the major. "Touch of spring fever, I reckon. Aunt Daph feeds him too well. Give him less fried chicken and more ash-cake and buttermilk. Make him some juleps."



The old negro shook his head. "Moghty neah use up all dat mint-baid Ah foun'," he said, "but ain' do no good. Majah, Ah's sho' 'feahed sumpin' gwineter happen."

"Nonsense!" the major sniffed. "What fool idea's got under your wool now? Been seeing Mad Anthony again, I'll bet a dollar."

Uncle Jefferson swallowed once or twice with seeming difficulty and turned the gravel with his toe. "Dat's so," he said gloomily. "Ah done see de old man de yuddah day 'bout et. Ant'y, he know! He see trouble er-comin' en trouble er-gwine. Dat same night de hoss-shoe drop offen de stable do', en dis ve'y mawnin' er buhd done fly inter de house. Das' er mighty bad hoodoo, er mighty bad hoodoo!"

"Shucks!" said the major. "You're as loony as old Anthony, with your infernal signs. If your Mars' John's been out all day I reckon he'll turn up before long. I'll wait for him a while." He started in, but paused on the threshold. "Did you say—ah—that mint was all gone, Unc' Jefferson?"

EFFICIENCY IN "NEWS STYLE"

Columns of the Modern Journal Certain, It Is Claimed, the Best of English Phrasing.

It is seldom that a good word is said in academic circles for what is termed "newspaper English," meaning the terse, trenchant style in which the best journalists are in the habit of expressing themselves. The College of Journalism, however, recognizes the value of this style, and Prof. F. W. Beakman, a well-known educationist, says:

"With all its faults I still believe in the news style as the most efficient style of the modern day for presenting information through the written word. It has been hammered out in the heat and stress of newspaper work to meet the demands of the million for something to occupy their attention at breakfast and in the train. Its sentences are short and crisp, and its paragraphs are rarely more than two or three lines in length. It is the style of the telegram, the cable and the wireless. It is the style of the man who has no time to waste on literary frills and furbelows, but who wants all the truth. So-called 'newspaper English' has left its indelible mark on the literature and especially the fiction of our times. The most successful stories are those told in the fewest words. The old-fashioned flowing periods, which produced verbal melody instead of recording facts, have lost their charm for novel readers, whose eager brains are anxious to absorb the tale rather than linger over the writing."

With Lecture in America.

Celestin Dombion, whose books are a desire to prove that the plays attributed to Shakespeare were written by Lord Rutland, will come to this country to lecture on his theory. He is a deputy and professor of literature at Nemours university.

A Century Ago.

One hundred years ago Dr. Thomas Fanshawe Middleton was consecrated first bishop of Calcutta. The consecration took place in London, and soon afterward the new bishop sailed for India. In Calcutta, he laid the foundation for the Bishops' college in 1820, and established a consistory court in that city. While zealously engaged in his duties he was attacked with a fever, of which he died in 1822. For more than a century the efforts to spread the Christian faith in India have continued. Numerically the Christian population in the great eastern empire is still insignificant, amounting to only about one per cent of the population, but it is generally admitted to have an influence out of all proportion to its numbers.

Dr. Eliot on Education.

Dr. Eliot says: "The practise of England and America is literally centuries behind the precept of the best thinkers upon education." Is it not humiliating that an American is forced to make such an admission concerning our most vital American institution?

What can be done? How can this wasteful school system be speedily remedied so that it fills its real function and sends out into the world boys and girls developed according to their individual talents as far as those talents permit? It is a big question, but in my next article, I propose to outline a rational, practical system of public education which will serve those ends.—Pictorial Review.

HER MOTHER-IN-LAW
Proved a Wise, Good Friend.

A young woman out in Ia. found a wise, good friend in her mother-in-law, jokes notwithstanding. She writes:

"I was greatly troubled with my stomach, complexion was blotchy and yellow. After meals I often suffered sharp pains and would have to lie down. My mother often told me it was the coffee I drank at meals. But when I'd quit coffee I'd have a severe headache.

"While visiting my mother-in-law I remarked that she always made such good coffee, and asked her to tell me how. She laughed and told me it was easy to make good 'coffee' when you use Postum.

"I began to use Postum as soon as I got home, and now we have the same good 'coffee' (Postum) every day, and I have no more trouble. Indigestion is a thing of the past, and my complexion has cleared up beautifully.

"My grandmother suffered a great deal with her stomach. Her doctor told her to leave off coffee. She then took tea, but that was just as bad.

"She finally was induced to try Postum which she has used for over a year. She traveled during the winter over the greater part of Iowa, visiting something she had not been able to do for years. She says she owes her present good health to Postum."

Name given by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich. Read "The Road to Wellville," in pkgs.

Postum now comes in two forms:

Regular Postum—must be well boiled. 15c and 25c packages.

Instant Postum—is a soluble powder. A heaping teaspoonful dissolves quickly in a cup of hot water and, with cream and sugar, makes a delicious beverage instantly. 30c and 50c tins.

Both kinds are equally delicious and cost about the same per cup. Postum is the genuine food-drink made by

BRIEF BITS OF WILD LIFE

Pigeon the Victim of Hawk—Young Rabbits in Imminent Danger From Their Many Enemies.

Scene of a little tragedy. On a bit of ground plowed last fall, a sprinkle of small feathers showed where a pigeon had been devoured. That it had been done by a hawk, not a crow, was shown by the few kernels of corn which the crop had contained, lying untouched.

Found a nest containing three young rabbits in the field. The mother, selecting a small hollow, deposits her young therein, first lining it with fur plucked from her own coat, and covering all over with a bunch of the same. So long as the grass, or rather weeds, stood they were well protected, but mower and rake had both passed over, carried away the crop, and done no further harm beyond dragging the fur to one side, thus giving a clew to the nursery. I looked in at them, then introduced a finger. Until this was done they were still as if dead, but soon as the touch of alien flesh was felt they began successively to kick with startling violence. Too young to run (they were about the size of large mice, and probably but a day or two old), this must have been to terrify the intending captor. The coat was thick and rather darker than the adult's; ears, paws and tail yellow and bare; the eyes closed, like those of young kittens. Covering them up, I departed, but when last seen they were trying to kick off the blankets. Their fate seemed very uncertain. Such choice morsels for dog, crow or hawk can hardly escape. Seemingly they would have been safer in the thicket close by, but I suppose maternal instinct may be trusted.—From a Farmer's Note Book," by C. B. D. Phelps.

NOT FAVORITE OF FORTUNE

One-Time Owner of Prodigiously Valuable Oil Land Surely Has a Kick Coming.

"That good luck and bad luck go hand in hand in the oil business is demonstrated in the case of Fred Boston, who is now tending bar in a Joplin, Mo., saloon at a salary of $10 a week," said J. S. Cook, an Oklahoma oil operator, at the Shoreham, according to the Washington Post.

"When the Indian Territory Oil company, which had a blanket lease on the Osage nation lands, was forced by financial necessity to sublet part of its holdings," continued Mr. Cook, "Boston was given a sublease on a section abutting on the Arkansas river, near Cleveland, Okla. He was unable to develop his lease, and sold a half interest in his deal to H. V. Foster, president of the Indian Territory company, who always held out a helping hand to the little fellows. But bad days came to the parent company, and neither Boston nor Foster could develop the 640 acre tract, and, as a last resort, the lease was sold to the Gipsy Oil company.

"This company began to drill in the spring of 1913, and late last summer a gusher was struck. 'Producers' followed one another, and what is now known as the Boston pool became the wonder of the oil world. The lease which Boston parted from for a paltry few hundred dollars cannot now be estimated in value, and the value of one hour's production exceeds Boston's salary for an entire year."

Curious Custom.

The custom known as "Whappitty Scorie" was celebrated by the youth of Lanark, Scotland, recently, when the bell in the town's steeple rang out for the first time at 6 o'clock after a five months' silence. From March 1 to September 30 of each year the bell rings for some minutes at 6 p. m., but during the remainder of the year it remains silent. On the occasion of the ringing of the bell for the first time the young people gather at the cross, each carrying a stringed cap in his hand. When the bell tolls the boys run in procession round the parish church. They do this three times and then a rush is made for New Lanark, for the purpose of meeting the boys of that village to engage in combat, the weapons used being the stringed caps.

The Luxury of Sugar.

Sugar was considered an article of luxury in Europe until tea and coffee became usual articles of diet. Sugar was then used to sweeten these beverages, and so gradually came to have a prominent part in the daily diet. Before the days of sugar, much more meat was eaten and the drinking of alcoholic beverages was much more common. The fair maiden who could not, with impunity, drink a pint of ale for breakfast, was unusual. Perhaps, in spite of the fact that most of us eat too much of it, sugar is a blessing. Even over-sweetened coffee and cereal covered with sugar sound more beneficial than a pint of ale and half a pound of beef for breakfast.

Come To The Barbecue Friday

Tomorrow (Friday) is the great day. Word comes from all parts of the county that a record-breaking crowd will be here to participate in the good roads movement. Citizens from Birmingham and Montgomery will come by the hundreds to devise ways and means to early complete the great trunk highway connecting the two cities.

Many prominent men will be in attendance, including Gov. O'Neal, governor-elect Henderson, and numbers of others interested in the good roads movement.

The Clanton arrangement committees consisting of Mayor E. A. Matthews, Judge L. H. Reynolds, N. A. Kicker, P. T. Hinkle, J. W. Stanfield and J. P. Gore have labored unceasingly in their efforts to make the occasion a success, and it is predicted this celebration will be the most largely attended that has taken place in Chilton County in many years.

It is earnestly hoped the people of this county will co-operate in this movement, by coming to Clanton and taking part in the exercises of the day.

People all along the route of the proposed highway are taking a deep interest in the barbecue, and large numbers from all intermediate points will be on hand to boost the movement. Wetumpka's progressive Mayor, Hon. F. W. Lull, states that the citizens of Elmore are active in their efforts to have a large and representative delegation present.

Arrangements have been made to provide a brass band to furnish music, and the citizens of Clanton are uniting their efforts to make everyone have a good time.

Seventy-five automobiles will assemble on Court Square in Montgomery early Friday morning to make the trip to Clanton, and it is expected an equal number will come from Birmingham.

Hon. W. S. Keller, President of the Highway Association, was in Clanton Tuesday, in consultation with the local arrangements committee, and in speaking of the barbecue, had this to say: "All the counties and towns touched by the route have shown keen interest and considerable work is now under way. We hope to have most of the road completed by the end of the year. We can do it if we all pull together. The meeting Friday at Clanton will probably be one of the largest and most important good roads meetings ever held in this section of the State."

It is up to the people of Chilton to show to the citizens of Alabama their interests in good roads, and it is hoped that all that can possibly do so, will come and by their presence devote a day to the interests of better highways.

Everybody is expected to bring a well filled basket.

ICE PLANT FOR CLANTON.

Mr. A. C. Wade of the Wade Electric Light Company, returned Friday last from a several day's trip to Philadelphia.

While in the city of Brotherly Love Mr. Wade purchased the machinery for an ice plant to be installed in Clanton. The plant will be modern in every respect, and will have a capacity of ten tons per day.

Mr. Wade states it will be about thirty or sixty days before the plant will be in operation. This supplies a long-felt want in Clanton and our citizens will [illegible] by the saving in [illegible] rates.

THE COLONEL'S INCONSISTENCES

Col. Theodore Roosevelt, who breezed into New York from South America a few days ago, and then set sail for Spain, paused long enough in his home land to drop some observations about the Wilson administration that were designed to create in the public mind that no other administration is quite up to a Roosevelt administration.

The Colonel pretended to see much distress in the land, and did not hesitate to place the blame for this condition upon President Wilson and the Democratic party. He criticised the tariff policy of the administration, and also its attitude upon the trust question, holding that these were the ill winds that are shriveling American industries.

Passing over the obvious fact that the Colonel wasn't away from the jungles long enough to familiarize himself with actual conditions at home, and making due allowance for the political bias by which he is swayed, it remains true that he places himself in a highly inconsistent attitude when he undertakes to criticise the tariff policy of the Democratic administration.

What Colonel Roosevelt says now, and what the Progressive party, which he lauds, had to say when framing a platform, form an interesting contrast. Here are two declarations in parallel columns, the first being from the lips of Colonel Roosevelt and the second from the Progressive party platform:

The truth simply is that the only wise and sane propositions, the only propositions which represent constructive government and progressiveism and the resolute purpose to secure good results instead of phrases were the principles enunciated in the Progressive platform in connection with trusts and the tariff alike.

We demand tariff revision because the present tariff (i. e., the Payne-Aldrich tariff) is unjust to the people of the United States. Fair dealing toward the people requires an immediate downward revision of those schedules wherein duties are shown to be unjust and excessive.

The Democratic party has given the country exactly what the Progressive party demanded when it denounced the Payne-Aldrich tariff as unfair, and declared that fair dealing toward the people demanded "immediate downward revision." So, when Colonel Roosevelt seeks to arraign the present administration for its work in the reform of the tariff, he repudiates a cardinal plank in the platform on which he made the last race for the Presidency.

As to the utterances of the Colonel concerning the trust question, it is to smile. For seven years he occupied the office of President, was backed by a Republican House and Senate, and yet the trust question went unsolved.

But one must remember that the Colonel's heart is filled with a supreme longing to again occupy the White House, and the nicest thing to do under the circumstances is to try to discredit the performances of the men and the Party that stand in the way. [illegible] Birmingham Ledger.

A MODEL DAIRY FARM.

Several years ago 14 Northern farmers came to Thorsby, Ala., and started small and large, 14 dairy farms. Good silos were built, barns were erected, and in most cases well bred dairy animals were purchased. Today, of the 14 only one remains in operation, and along the county roadways silos stand, unused, alongside dairy barns that are untenanted. The story of this one out of fourteen carries a lesson to the dairy farmer, actual and prospective, may well study. Moreover, his success is so apparent, his little farm is such a model in conduct and equipment, that the lesson is all the more impressive.

Perhaps thoroughness in every detail, hard work, careful economy, and a mind wide open, alert, receptive to every new idea that promises, added profits from the business, may be characterized as the elements that have made for the success of M. J. Barrett, the man who succeeded where 13 others quit the business, and that result in authorities pointing to his establishment as one of the best, if not the very best in Alabama.

Be it known at the outset that Barrett's dairy farm is not the pleasure place of a city man who made his money in town, but the able business of a man who depends upon it for a living. As he says, it is "a bread and meat proposition." That he is getting plenty of both out of it and a nice little annual profit besides, we stand ready to testify. Forty acres, pasture, cultivated fields, home grounds and all, is the extent of his little domain, but it is neatly painted, furnace-heated home, pretty [illegible] and up to the minute [illegible] [illegible] [illegible]

The VALIANTS of VIRGINIA

SYNOPSIS.

John Valliant, a rich society favorite, suddenly discovers that the Valiant corporation, which his father founded and which was the principal source of his wealth, had failed. He voluntarily turns over his private fortune to the receiver for the corporation. His entire remaining possessions consist of an old motor car, a white bull dog and Damory court, a neglected estate in Virginia. On the way to Damory court he meets Shirley Dandridge, an auburn-haired beauty, and decides that he is going to like Virginia immensely. Shirley's mother, Mrs. Dandridge, and Major Bristow exchange reminiscences during which it is revealed that the major, Valiant's father, and a man named Sassoon were rivals for the hand of Mrs. Dandridge in her youth. Sassoon and Valiant fought a duel on her account in which the former was killed. Valiant finds Damory court overgrown with weeds and creepers and decides to rehabilitate the place. Valiant saves Shirley from the bite of a snake, which bites him. Knowing the deadliness of the bite, Shirley sucks the poison from the wound and saves his life. Valiant learns for the first time that his father left Virginia on account of a duel in which Doctor Southall and Major Bristow acted as his father's seconds. Valiant and Shirley become good friends. Mrs. Dandridge faints when she meets Valiant for the first time. Valiant discovers that he has a fortune in old walnut trees. The yearly tournament, a survival of the jousting of feudal times, is held at Damory court. At the last moment Valiant takes the place of one of the knights, who is sick, and enters the lists. He wins and chooses Shirley Dandridge as queen of beauty to the dismay of Katherine Fargo, a former sweetheart, who is visiting in Virginia. The tournament ball at Damory court draws the elite of the countryside. Shirley is crowned by Valiant as queen of beauty. Valiant tells Shirley of his love and they become engaged. Katherine Fargo, determining not to give up Valiant without a struggle, points out to Shirley how terrible it would be for the woman who caused the duel to meet Valiant, who looks so much like his father. Shirley, uncertain, but feeling that her mother was in love with the victim of Valiant's pistol, breaks the engagement. Greef King, a liberated convict whom Major Bristow had sent to prison, makes threats against his prosecutor. Valiant pleads with Shirley, but fails to persuade her to change her decision.

CHAPTER XXXI.—Continued.

Uncle Jefferson's lips relaxed in a wide grin. "Ah reck'n dah's er few stray sprigs lef', suh. Step in en mek yo'se'f et home. Ef Mars' John see yo', he be mought'ly hoped up. Ah gwineter mix yo' dat julep in two shakes!"

He disappeared around the corner of the porch and the major strode into the hall, threw his gray slouch hat on the table, and sat down.

It was quiet and peaceful, that ancient hall. He fell to thinking of the many times, of old, when he had sat there. The house was the same again, now. It had waked from a thirty-years' slumber to a renewed prime. Only he had lived on meanwhile and now was old. He sighed.

How gay the place had been the night of the ball, with the lights and roses and music! He remembered what the doctor had said about Valiant and Shirley—it had lain ever since in his mind, a painful speculation. The recollection roused another thought from which he shrank. He stirred uneasily. What on earth kept that old darky so long over that julep?

A slight noise made him turn his head. But nothing moved. Only a creak of the woodwork, he thought, and settled back again in his chair.

It was, in fact, a stealthy footfall he had heard. It came from the library, where a shabby figure crouched, listening, in the corner behind the tapestried screen—a man evilly clad, with a scarred cheek.

It had been with no good purpose that Greef King had dogged the major these last few days. He hugged a hot hatred grown to white heat in six years of prison labor within bleak walls at the clicking shoe-machine, or with the chain-gang on blazing or frosty turnpikes. He had shrunk behind him that afternoon, creeping up the drive under cover of the bushes, and while the other talked with Uncle Jefferson, had skirted the house and entered from the farther side, through an open French window. Now as he peered from behind the screen, a poker, snatched from the fireplace, was in his hand. His furtive gaze fell upon a morocco-covered case on a commode by his side. He lifted the lid and his eyes narrowed as he saw that it held a pistol. He set down the poker noiselessly and took the weapon. He cocked it—it was rusted, but there were loads in the chambers. He crouched lower, with a whispered curse: the major was coming into the library, but not alone—the old nigger was with him!

Uncle Jefferson bore a tray with a frosted goblet over whose rim peeped green leaves and which spread abroad an ambrosial odor, which the major sniffed approvingly as the other set the burden on the desk at his elbow.

"Majah," said the latter solemnly, "you reck'n Mars' John en Miss Shirley—"

"Good lord!" said the major, wheeling to the small ormolu clock on the desk. "It's 'most four o'clock. Haven't you any idea where he's gone?"

"No, suh, less'n he's gwineter look ovah dem walnut trees. Whut Ah's gwine ter say—yo' reck'n Mars' John en Miss—"

"Walnut trees? Is he going to sell them?"

"Tree man come f'om up nort' somewhah ter se erbout et yistidday, Yas, suh. Yo' reck'n Mars' John en—"

"Nice pot of money tied up in that timber! He saw it right off. You're a lucky old rascal to have him for a master."

"Hyuh, hyuh!" agreed Uncle Jefferson. "Dam'ry Co'ot er heap bettah dan drivin' er ol' stage ter de deepo fer drummahs en lightnin'-rod agents. Ah sho' do pray de Good Man ter mek Mars' John happy," he added soberly, "but Ah's mought'ly 'sturbed in mah mind—mought'ly 'sturbed!"

The hidden watcher waited motionless. From where he stood he could look. He waited till through the rear window he saw the negro's bent figure disappear into the kitchens. Then he noiselessly lifted himself upright, and resting the pistol on the screen-top, took deliberate aim and pulled the trigger.

The hammer clicked sharply on the worthless thirty-year-old cartridge, and the major sprang around with an exclamation, as with an oath, the other dashed the screen aside and again pulled the trigger.

"You infernal murderer!" cried the major. It was all he said, for, as he swung his chair up, the one-time bully of Hell's-Half-Acre rushed in and struck him a single sledge-hammer blow with the clubbed pistol. It fell full on the major's temple and the heavy iron crashed through.

Greef King stood an instant breathing hard, then, without withdrawing his eyes from the prostrate form, his hand groped for the cold goblet and lifting it to his lips, drained it to its dregs. "There!" he said. "There's my six-years' debt paid in full, ye lily-livered, fancy-weskited hellion! Take that from the mayor of the Dome!"

There was a man's step on the gravel and the sudden bark of a dog. The pistol fell from his hand. He stole on tiptoe along the corridor and leaped through the French window. As he dashed across the lawn, a startled cry came from the house behind him.

No human eye had seen him, but he had been observed for all that. Run your best now, Greef King! Double and turn how you will, there is a swifter Nemesis pursuing. It is only a dog, and not a big one at that, but it is of a faithful breed that knows neither fear nor quarter. Like white lightning, without a bark or growl, Chum launched himself on the fleeing quarry, and in the shadow of the trees his teeth met in the ragged trousers-leg.

Kicking, beating with his hands at the dragging weight, the man dashed on. Not till they had reached the hemlocks was that fierce grip broken, and then it was with a tearing of flesh and sinew. Panting, snarling with rage and pain, the man seized a fallen branch and stood at bay, striking out with vicious sweeping blows. But the bulldog, the hair bristling up on his thick neck, his red-rimmed eyes fiery, circled beyond reach of the flail, crouching for another spring.

Again he launched himself, and the man, dodging, blundered full-face into a thorn-bush. The sharp spines slashed his forehead and the starting blood blinded him, so that he ran without sense of direction—straight upon the declivity of Lovers' Leap.

He was toppling on its edge before he could stop, and then threw himself backward, clutching desperately at the slippery fern-covered rock, feeling his feet dangling over nothing. He dug his fingers into the yielding soil and with knee and elbow strove frenziedly to crawl to the path.

But the white bulldog was upon him. The clamping teeth met in the striving fingers, and with a scream of pain Greef King's hold let go and dog and man went down together.

Ten minutes later a motor was hurling itself along the Red Road to the village. The doctor was in his office and no time was lost in the return. En route they passed Judge Chalmers driving, and seeing the flying haste, he turned his sweating pair and lashed them after the car.

So that when the major finally opened his eyes from the big leather couch, he looked on the faces of two of his oldest friends. Recollection and understanding resumed together.

"Well, Southall?"

The doctor's hand closed over the white one on the settee. He did not answer, but his chin was quivering and he made no effort to hide it.

"How long?" asked the major, after a lengthy silence.

"Maybe—maybe an hour, Bristow. Maybe not."

The major winced and shut his eyes, but when the doctor, reaching swiftly for a phial on the table, turned again, it was to find that look once more on him, now in yearning appeal. "Southall," he said, "send for Judith. I—I must see her. There's time."

The judge started up. "I'll bring her," he said, and his voice had all the tenderness of a woman's. "My carriage is at the door and with those horses she ought to be here in twenty minutes." He leaned over the couch. "Bristow," he said, "would you—would you like me to send for the rector?"

The major smiled, a little wistfully, and shook his head. He lay silent for a while after the judge had gone out—he seemed housing his strength—while the ormolu clock on the desk ticked ominously on, and the doctor busied himself with the glasses beside him. Presently he said huskily:

"No," He Said, in Answer to Her Look, "He Won't Rouse Again."

"You've had a bad fall, Bristow. You were dizzy, I reckon."

"Dizzy!" echoed the major with feeble asperity. "It was Greef King."

"Greef King! Good God!"

"He was hiding behind the screen. He struck me with something. He swore at his trial he'd get me. I was—a fool not to have remembered his time was out."

A look, wolf-like and grim, had sprung into the doctor's face. His eyes searched the room, and he crossed the floor and picked up something from the rug. He looked at it a moment, then thrust it hastily into his breast pocket.

"I—remember now. It was a pistol. He snapped it twice, but it missed fire."

"He can't hide where we'll not find him!" The doctor spoke with low but terrible energy.

"Not that I care—myself," said the major difficultly. "But I reckon he'd better be settled with, or he'll—be killing some one worth while one of these days."

A big tear suddenly loosed itself from the doctor's eyelid and rolled down his cheek, and he turned hastily away.

"There's no call to feel bad," said the major gruffly. "I've sort of been a thorn-in-the-flesh to you, Southall. We always rowed, somehow, and yet—"

The doctor choked and cleared his throat.

"I reckon," the major murmured with a faint smile, "you won't get quite so much fun out of Chalmers—and the rest. They never did rise to you as I did."

A little later he asked for the restorative. "Ten minutes gone," he said then. "Chalmers ought to be at Rosewood by now . . . what a fool way to go—like this. But it wasn't—apoplexy, Southall, anyway."

At the sound of wheels on the drive, Valiant went out quietly. Huddled in a corner of the hall were Uncle Jefferson and Aunt Daphne, with Jereboam, the major's body-servant. Aunt Daphne, her apron thrown over her face was rocking to and fro silently, and old Jereboam's head was bowed on his breast. Valiant went quickly to the rear of the hall. A painful embarrassment had come to him—a curious confusion mingling with a fastidious sense of shrinking. How should he meet this woman who recoiled from the very sight of his face? In the swiftness of the tragic event he had forgotten this. From the background he saw Judge Chalmers lift down the frail form, and suddenly his heart leaped. There were two feminine figures; Shirley was with her mother.

The doctor stood just inside the library door and Mrs. Dandridge went hastily toward him, her light cane tapping through the stricken silence. Jereboam lifted his head and looked at her piteously.

"Reck'n Mars' Wesley gone, an' ole Jerry now," he quavered. "Dat yo' ain't nigh [illegible] . . . Ah . . . and all time . . . Ah

As they passed Valiant, she held out her hand to him. There was no word between them, but as his hand swallowed hers, his heart said to her, "I love you, I love you! No matter what is between us, I shall always love you!"

It was wordless, a heart-whisper that only love itself could hear, and he could read no answer in the deep pools of her eyes, heavy now with unshed tears. But in some subtle way his voiceless greeting comforted and lightened by a little the weight of dumb impotence that he had borne.

In the library, lighted so brightly by the sunlight, yet grave with the hush of that solemn presence, the major looked into the face of the woman for whose coming he had waited so anxiously.

"It's all—up, Judith," he said faintly. "I've come to the jumping-off place."

She looked at him whitely. "Monty, Monty!" she cried. "Don't leave me this way! I always thought—"

He guessed what she would have said. "Heaven knows you're needed more than me, Judith. After all, I reckon when my time had to come I'd have chosen the quick way." His voice trailed out and he struggled for breath.

"Jerry's in the hall, Monty. He asked me to give you his love."

"Poor old nigger! He—used to tote me on his back when I was a little shaver." There was a silence. "Don't kneel, Judith," he said at length. "You will be so tired."

She rose obediently and drew up a chair. "Monty," she faltered tremulously, "shall I say a prayer? I've never prayed much—my prayers never seemed to get above the ceiling, somehow. But I'll—try."

He smiled wanly. "I wouldn't want any better than yours, Judith. But seems as if I'd been prayed over enough. I reckon God Almighty's like anybody else, and doesn't want to be ding-donged all the time."

He seemed to have been gathering his resolution, and presently his hand fumbled over his breast. "My wallet; give it to me." She drew it from the pocket and the uncertain fingers took out a key. "It opens a tin box in my trunk. There's—a letter in it for you." He paused a moment, panting. "Judith," he said, "I've got to tell you, but it's mighty hard. The letter . . . it's one Valiant gave me for you—that morning, after the duel. I never gave it to you."

If she had been white before, she grew like marble now. Her slim fingers clutched the little cane till it rattled against the chair, and the lace at her throat shook with her breathing. "Yes—Monty."

He lifted his hand with difficulty and put the key into hers. "The seal's still unbroken, Judith," he said, "but I've kept it these thirty years."

She was holding the key in her hands, looking down upon it. There was a strained half-fearful wonder in her face. For an instant she seemed quite to have forgotten him in the grip of some swift and painful emotion.

"I loved you, Judith!" he stammered in anguished appeal. "From the time we were boy and girl together, I loved you. You never cared for me—Sassoon and Valiant had the inside track. You might have loved me; but I had no chance with either of them. Then came the duel. There was only Valiant then. I overheard his promise to you that night, Judith. He had broken that! If you cared more for him than for Sassoon, you might have forgiven him, and I should have lost you! I didn't want you to call him back, Judith! I wanted my chance! And so—I took it. That's—the reason, dear. It's—it's a bad one, isn't it?"

A shiver went over her set face—like a breath of wind over tall grass, and she seemed to come back from an infinite distance to place and moment. Between the curtains a white butterfly hovered an instant, and in the yard she heard the sound of some winged thing fluttering. The thought darted to her that it was the sound of her own dead heart awaking. She looked at the key and all at once put a hand to her mouth as though to still words clamoring there.

"Judith," he said tremulously, between short struggles for breath, "all these years, after I found there was no chance for me, I reckon I've—prayed only one prayer. 'God, let it be Sassoon that she loved!' And I've prayed that mighty near every day. The thought that maybe it was Valiant has haunted me like a ghost. You never told—and I never dared ask you. Judith—"

Her face was still averted, and when she did not speak he turned his head from her on the pillow, with a breath that was almost a moan. She started, looking at him an instant in piteous hesitation, then swiftly kissed the little key and closed her hand tight upon it. Truth? She saw only the pillow and the graying face upon it! She threw herself on her knees by the couch and laid her lips on the pallid forehead.

"It—it was Sassoon, Monty," she said, and her voice broke on the first lie she had ever told.

"Thank God!" he gasped. He struggled to raise himself on his elbow, then suddenly the strength faded out and he settled back.

Her cry brought the doctor, but this time the restorative seemed of no avail, and after a time he came and touched her shoulder. With a last long look at the ash-pale face on the settee she followed him from the room. In the yellow parlor he put her into a chair.

"No," he said, in answer to her look, "he won't rouse again."

"I will wait," she told him, and he left her, shutting the door with careful softness.

But the slight figure with its silver hair, sitting there, was not alone. Ghosts were walking up and down. Not the misty wraiths John Valiant had at times imagined went flitting along the empty corridors, but faces very clear in the sunlight, that came and went with the memories so long woven over by the shuttle of time—evoked now by the touch of a key that her hand still clenched tightly in its palm.

There welled over her in a tide those days of puzzle, the weeks of waiting silence, the slow inexorable months of heartache, the long years that had deepened the mystery of Beauty Valiant's exile. In the first shock of the news that Sassoon had fallen by his hand, she had thought she could not forgive him that broken faith. She and his promise to her had not weighed in the balance against the idea of manly "honor!" But this bitterness had at length slipped away. "He will write," she had told herself, "and explain." But no word had come. Whispers had flitted to her—the tale of Sassoon's intoxication—stinging barbs that clung to Beauty Valiant's name. That these should rest unanswered had filled her with resentment and anger. Slowly, but with deadly surety, had grown the belief that he no longer cared. In the end there had been left her only pride—the pride that covers its wound and smiles. And she had hidden her wound with flowers. But in the deepest well of her heart her love for him had rested unchanged, clear and defined as a moss in amber, wrapped in that mystery of silence.

FLOWERS USED AS EMBLEMS

Have Been Distinguishing Mark of Factions as Long as There Is Record.

The determination of the "loyal" Ulster man to induce every man, woman and child to wear a flower as a token of their aversion to home rule reminds one how often flowers have been used as emblems.

Since the leaders of the Yorkist and Lancastrian parties each plucked a rose in the Temple gardens, the Lancastrian a red and the Yorkist a white, this flower has been a popular emblem. Apart from the fact that red roses are symbolical of love and white of purity, the English national emblems [illegible]

The primrose, it is said, was Beaconsfield's favorite flower, and has been chosen by his followers, who formed the Primrose league, as an emblem, while in France, the violet, because of its purple hue, was worn by imperialists as an informal token of their loyalty to the Bonapartes. When the son of the ex-Empress Eugenie was brought home to be buried after being killed in the Zulu campaign, his body was almost covered in violets.

Then, again, there are favorite national emblems. There are the lilies of France, the thistle for Scotland, the shamrock for Ireland, the leek for Wales, and the maple leaf for Canada. The United States has no national flower and probably never will, owing to its wide range of climate, which makes the selection of a flower of universal popularity almost impossible.

LARGER SALES OF SOUTHERN PIG IRON

Sentimentally and Fundamentally Trade Conditions Are Better.

New York. — Bradstreet's weekly review of trade says:

Sentimentally and fundamentally trade conditions are better, though somewhat irregular. Jobbing trade outside of the southeast has broadened; interest in fall and winter goods is gradually developing; there is more doing in retail lines; some improvement has appeared in connection with the collections; larger sales of Southern pig iron are noted; wool is active at strong prices; textile mills are fairly well employed; crop conditions have improved and railway traffic is heavier.

Finished steel, however, takes on principally from sentiment, not from actual growth in business; employment is irregular, collective industrial operations are relatively slow.

For the week: Failures 238, against 215 last year; wheat exports 4,802,[illegible] bushels, against 7,561,259; bank clearings $3,231,327,000, an increase of [illegible] per cent. over last year.

The Allegheny Congenial Industrial union, an organization formed last February, has members employed by the Rankin and Edgar Thomson plants of the Carnegie Steel company, the Union Switch and Signal company and the McClintic Marshall Construction company. Delegates representing this membership conferred with the Westinghouse strikers as to what action they should take and were advised to continue at work.

It is claimed the membership of the organization in these other concerns total 15,000.

The strikers paraded the streets and held several meetings at which speakers urged that there be no acts of violence.

The shipment is aboard the steamer Antilla from New York, flying the Cuban flag. Huerta has notified the powers of the intent to blockade the port.

United States to Interfere.

The purpose of the United States to suppress the attempt to blockade and prevent interference with the Antilla was indicated when Secretary Daniels issued an official statement announcing there had been no change in the policy of the government in reference to its desire that the port of Tampico shall be open to all commerce.

Huerta Delegates May Quit.

The superiority of the American force would make a warning sufficient, it is believed, to prevent any act of aggression by the Mexican gunboats. The gravity of the situation is found in the danger that such an act by the United States might cause General Huerta to withdraw his delegates from the Niagara Falls conference.

ANTI-TRUST BILLS NEXT.

When Panama Tolls Exemption Repeal Bill Is Disposed Of.

Washington. — Preparations were made in the senate to take up anti-trust legislation as soon as the Panama tolls exemption repeal bill is disposed of next week.

The interstate commerce committee voted to report out for the present a bill creating a federal trade commission, and the three anti-trust bills passed by the house were received by the senate and sent to committees for consideration. There they probably will rest for several weeks.

Chairman Newlands of the interstate commerce committee, said he would report the trade commission bill to the senate early in the week and attempt to have it made the unfinished business.

There is a strong sentiment in the senate to pass merely the trade commission bill and adjourn, the belief being that such legislation is sufficient for the present. Whether this spirit will prevail is a matter for speculation.

PREMIERSHIP UNSETTLED.

French President Faces Problem of Forming New Cabinet.

Paris.—The ministerial crisis was far from solution as ever. The difficulty in finding a premier is openly declared in many quarters to be due to the skillful maneuvers of radical followers of Joseph Caillaux, who, it said, hope either to force President Poincaire to resign or to capitulate to them. President Poincaire has invited Theophile Delcasse, former foreign minister, to form a new French cabinet.

Seamstress Gives Fortune.

New York.—The board of foreign missions of the Methodist Episcopal church announced that Miss Nettie Yeoward of Sterling, Ill., had given $10,000 for the board's activities. Miss Yeoward, it is stated, earned the money working as a steamstress.

Labor Leaders Jubilant.

Washington.—Labor leaders believe they have achieved a substantial victory in having the house of representatives adopt an amendment to the Clayton trust bill, which exempts any labor or farmers' organization from prosecution under the Sherman law.

May Have Women Constables.

London.—A bill to enable the police authorities to enroll women constables is to be introduced in the house of commons by Lord Henry Cavendish Bentinck, Unionist member for South Nottinghamshire.

Sex Hygiene Barred.

London.—The education committee of the London county council has decided that under no circumstances should sex hygiene be introduced into class teaching in the elementary schools of London.

Peace Anniversary Ball.

London.—An Anglo-American peace centenary ball as a preliminary to the celebration of the one hundredth anniversary of peace between English-speaking peoples is proposed by the British committee for June 10, next. It will be held in Royal Albert hall.

Tornado Sweeps Iowa.

Sioux City, Iowa.—The tornado that swept across northwestern Iowa killed seven persons and injured a dozen, some seriously, according to reports received in Sioux City.

ACTION ON COTTON BILL

AGREE TO REPORT FAVORABLE ON BILL REGULATING DEALINGS IN COTTON FUTURES.

Bill Will Also Provide For The Standardization of Cotton Grades.

Washington.—The house agricultural commitee agreed to favorably report the Level bill to regulate dealings in cotton for future delivery, with an amendment to tax so-called gambling transactions transferred from the domestic to a foreign market. The measure would levy a tax of one-fifth of one cent for each pound of cotton involved in any contract or sale of cotton for future delivery made on exchanges. It would provide for standardization of cotton grades and authorize the secretary of agriculture to designate from time to time what markets shall be considered bona fide spot markets.

Directors Now Direct.

Washington.—James S. Elton, of Waterbury, Conn., and William Skinner of Holyoke, Mass., directors of the New York, New Haven and Hartford railroad, testifying before the interstate commerce commission at its investigation into the affairs of the road, said the acquisition of various New England trolleys, steamship lines and other properties at a cost of many millions of dollars, constituted a part of the New Haven's comprehensive plan to increase its facilities. Mr. Elton testified that the New Haven directors had changed their methods and now were not influenced so much by one or two men—like J. P. Morgan and former President Mellen—as they formerly were. He said the "directors now direct," and had learned a "great many things." He added that President Elliott was more deliberate than Mr. Mellen and did not "rush them off their feet."

Await Carranza's Answer.

Niagara Falls, Ont.—Mediation waits on General Venustiano Carranza. The commander-in-chief of the Constitutionalist forces in Mexico has in his possession a communication from the three South American diplomats which opens the door for Constitutionalist representation in the conferences here. Upon his word depends whether the entire Mexican problem will be settled by diplomacy or whether the Constitutionalists will continue to fight their way to Mexico City. The mediators have smoothed the path for Constitutionalist participation. The United States government wants them to accept. A rejection may eventually mean the Washington government's withdrawal of the moral support it has been extending to the Constitutionalist cause.

Tolls Bill Delayed Again.

Washington.—Just when a vote on the Panama canal tolls exemption repeal bill seemed certain to come within a few days, the senate foreign relations committee surprised the senate and complicated the situation by reporting favorably a resolution designed to lead to the submission of the dispute with Great Britain to arbitration by an international tribunal. There was no discussion of the resolution, but it will be taken up before a vote is reached on the repeal bill itself.

Federals Are Optimistic.

Vera Cruz.—With the arrival at Mexico City of arms and ammunition landed from the German steamers, Bavaria and Ypiranga, and with the receipt of the news that another consignment of arms had been disembarked on the west coast, there is said to have been a frank display of optimism at the national palace and among President Huerta's followers.

To Guard Tampico Port.

Mexico City.—Mexican gunboats have received orders to blockade the port of Tampico, war minister, General Blanquet announced. This action has been taken to prevent Constitutionalists from receiving a cargo of arms and ammunition believed to be on its way from New Orleans.

Mail Legislation Delayed.

Washington.—Proposed legislation which would revolutionize the system for compensating railroads for carrying the mails is threatened with delay because of differences of opinion in congress as to the pay to be accorded carriers for space occupied.

To Probe Ship Disaster.

Montreal, Canada.—The news that Lord Mersey, who presided over the British inquiry into the loss of the Titanic, is to be a member of the royal commission appointed to investigate the Empress of Ireland disaster, was received here with satisfaction. As Lord Mersey was president of the Titanic court, it is assumed he will be similarly honored when the royal commission meets here. The Canadian members of the commission are Chief Justice Ezekiel McLeod of New Brunswick, and Sir Adolph B. Routhier.

Big Lumber Company Sells.

Savannah, Ga.—The Great Eastern Lumber company, capitalized at $5,000,000, went into the hands of a receiver. It is understood the concern is solvent, but was unable to obtain working capital. It was an application of the Union Trust company of Detroit, Mich., holders of bonds totaling $982,000, that the receivers were appointed. Thomas M. Cooley, who has been in active charge of the company's affairs, Charles E. Davis and John K. Pray are the receivers.

The Fingerless Kind.

Lillian Russell, during a recent visit to Atlantic City, was amazed to see the number of slashed skirts that still prevailed on the Boardwalk.

"They must be last spring's left overs," she said.

Just then a young girl in a skirt outrageously slashed at back and front, asked her companion, in passing:

"How do you like my new dress? Fits like a glove, doesn't it?"

"Fits like a mitt, she'd better say," murmured Miss Russell, with a smile.

HER EXPERIENCE GAINED ON TRIP

Found That Ladies in State Agreed With Her on One Important Question.

Mangham, La.—Mrs. Liza Barber, of this town, who has returned from a trip in West and Middle Tennessee, has the following to say: "I have been on a trip in Middle and West Tennessee where I found many ladies using Cardui, the woman's tonic. While traveling I took great pleasure in telling what it had done for me—I not only praised Cardui—but advised poor suffering women to take it. I know that Cardui cured me and I believe it will do the same for other women.

Sometime ago, I could hardly stand on my feet, and I had given up ever having good health. After using two bottles of Cardui I could tell it was helping me, and I continued taking it for awhile. I soon felt as well as I ever did, and could do all of my work.

I shall always praise this great medicine to every suffering woman. I think there is no other half so good."

Mrs. Barber would have found weak, ailing women taking Cardui almost anywhere she could have gone, because Cardui is recognized as the standard woman's tonic. It has helped more than a million women back to health and strength in the past 50 years.

Why shouldn't it help you?—Adv.

Old Acquaintance.

A resourceful girl, having danced a pink party frock to ribbons, took what was left of it and made a wonderful lamp shade. The next evening she was entertaining a caller in the soft light and she said to him quite casually: "How do you like my new lamp shade?"

William regarded it for a moment critically, then he said: "The last time I saw that shade I danced with it."

HEAD ITCHED AND BURNED

604 Greenville Ave., Staunton, Va.—"My head broke out in pimples which festered. It itched me so that I would scratch it till my head got almost in a raw sore. My hair came out gradually and it was dry and lifeless. Dandruff fell on my coat collar till I was ashamed of it. My head had been that way all summer, itching and burning till I couldn't sleep in any peace.

"I tried salves but it looked like they made it worse. I got ——— but it did me no good so I got a cake of Cuticura Soap and box of the Cuticura Ointment and you don't know what a relief they gave me. In two weeks my head was well." (Signed) J. L. Smith, Oct. 28, 1912.

A MODEL DAIRY FARM

made such a splendid hay crop.

"I mean to get clover of some kind on every foot of my place this fall," Mr. Barrett said. I've been South quite a while, but every year I'm learning more and more of our wonderful possibilities, either in livestock and dairying or along general farming lines. The fact that we can grow clovers and other soil-improving crops practically the year round gives us an immense advantage over my native State of Iowa and other states of the North and West. But the great trouble is that we do not appreciate the wonderful opportunities nature has given us.

I was prepared to agree with all Mr. Barrett said as we waded through oats head-high and crimson clover standing two and three feet; bur clover that, despite close grazing, was making an immense crop of seed for next year's crop; and acres of oats in which lespedeza had been seeded and is already up to a fine stand. This is Mr. Barrett's first experience with lespedeza as a hay crop after oats; but, on his well manured fields, there is little doubt that it will be a great success.
